Subject: Re: opt outs

Jen,

I have another parent who expressed she does not want her child taking the test. As of now, she has not come in to review the assessment. But, I am anticipating that she will come in before Friday.

I know I am close to my limit and I have talked a few people out of the decision. But, I am concerned. Most parents are not those I would have expected.

Hi Everyone,

Please remember that if parents want to opt their child/ren out of the PSSA they should be meeting with you to view the test and then their letter of request must be sent to me. They are not officially opted out until I receive that letter and I provide them (and you) with the letter approving their request.

I know that some of you have meetings scheduled in the next few days. Parents may email me their request if that will be easier for them.

I received my first letter of request from a parent this morning. If you have any letters, please pass them on to me.

Thanks!
Jen
