Haines City workshop to address growth

By CHARLES A. BAKER III
Staff Writer

HAINES CITY – Of late, several developers building residential subdivisions near Haines City have applied for those subdivisions to be annexed into the city. Over the past year, the Haines City Commissioners have had a number of close votes on such matters, with Commissioner Jayne Hall often functioning as the deciding vote.

The purpose, she explained, would be to let developers know that the city may start considering more stringent rules associated with property development in the near future, in comparison to what is required of developers to build outside of city limits on land in unincorporated Polk County.
