

Home improvement that's uniquely Missouri-made

The McDonald Family

For five decades, Dalco Home Improvement has been family-owned.

The company was founded by the Dickerson family, who became well-known for their Missouri-made windows and doors, the integrity of their installations and customer service, and their commitment to the community. In 2023, ownership transferred to a new family when Tony and Anne McDonald purchased the company.

"Dalco began as a window and door company but then added siding and roof installation, and a bathroom remodeling division," Anne explained. "All of which we've continued and even expanded as the new owners."

The McDonalds recently installed a new window machine at their manufacturing facility in Vandalia, Missouri. That addition will streamline the process and get windows to their clients even faster.

"We manufacture our windows and doors in Bridgeton and Vandalia. We employ over 100 employees. Every one of our employees is from Missouri. We're very proud of that," Anne said. Other Dalco traditions Tony and Anne have continued include the company's lifetime window guarantee and its commitment to creating projects that suit each homeowner's style, needs and budget without project delays or cost overruns.

Dalco offers free in-home design service and tailors each project to meet their clients' needs and preferences. Once the design work is done, clients are guided through the entire process, so they know what to expect from beginning to end. Every aspect of the project is completed with professional courtesy and craftsmanship. The result is a company homeowners can trust.

As proof of that trust, Dalco has an A+ rating from the Better Business Bureau and dozens of 5-star Google reviews, with a 4.3 Google rating overall.
