

Estate planning for every age and stage of life

Attorneys Jayson Lenox, Caroline Stolzer and Matthew Fuhr

"Every day we get to help people put the pieces of their estate plan together, to ensure that they and their families have peace of mind through all of life's transitions," explained Attorney Jayson Lenox, who along with Attorney Caroline Stolzer manages Beck, Lenox & Stolzer Estate Planning and Elder Law, LLC.

Voted as Best Estate Planner by the readers of Mid Rivers Newsmagazine, the firm was founded in 1974 by Rudy Beck, who today serves as the firm's senior counsel.

While many of the firm's clients are older adults seeking to put vital protections in place, Jayson and Caroline are quick to point out that estate planning is essential for everyone.

"Technically, once someone turns 18, they need to have financial and healthcare powers of attorney documents in place. With the birth of children, additional documents such as wills that identify guardians and trusts are needed. Of course, as a young parent you never expect to need those documents, but having them in place provides significant peace of mind," said Caroline.

The first step is always a free phone call with one of their attorneys.

Along with Jayson and Caroline, Attorney Matthew Fuhr can assist with wills and trusts, powers of attorney, asset protection, guardianships and special needs planning as well as securing Medicaid and VA benefits.

The firm has a 4.9 out of 5 stars Google rating and is routinely praised for being easy to work with and having a knowledgeable staff and exceptional customer service.

"Our goal is to make estate planning as easy as possible so that people take the steps to protect their assets, avoid probate and make their passing easier for those they love," Jayson explained. "Whatever their need is, we're here to help."
