

From quick fixes to major improvements

Nikki Zavradinos, CEO

If you have ever tried to find a good handyman and could not get anyone to call you back or even show up, you are not alone. Nikki Zavradinos, CEO of Local Handyman St. Louis, built her company to fix exactly that.

"Our customers tell us the same thing over and over. They just can't find someone reliable," Nikki said. "When you call us, a real person answers, and we show up when we say we will."

No job is too big or too small. The team can hang shelves, pictures and mirrors, install backsplashes, mount televisions, fix drywall, paint rooms, install trim and flooring, or gut and remodel entire rooms. Every project is handled by Local Handyman's own employees, fully background-checked, insured, and trained.

"Your home is your biggest investment, and you deserve to know exactly who is working in it," Nikki explained. "Our team shares our commitment to quality craftsmanship and the small details that matter."

In-person estimates start with your goals, whether you are settling in for the next ten years or getting ready to sell. The team's focus is helping you spend wisely on your home, with practical, no-pressure recommendations and a trained eye for issues homeowners often miss, such as water damage, poor flooring installation, or hidden drywall problems.

Every job is backed by a one-year warranty and a final walk-through. "Our job isn't done until the client is thrilled," Nikki said.

Local Handyman St. Louis is a woman-owned business and a proud part of the community, earning five-star reviews from neighbors across the area on projects big and small.
