CHRISTIE CLINIC ILLINOIS RACE WEEKEND

GUEST COMMENTARY: ERIC WOODARD

The marathon's over — now the recovery begins

Congratulations! You have completed your marathon! But now what?

Completing 26.2 miles is not an easy task for your body, and as a result, you need to take care of yourself after.

Your recovery starts as soon as you cross the finish line. Recovering properly after a marathon is extremely important due to the physically and mentally taxing nature of the event.

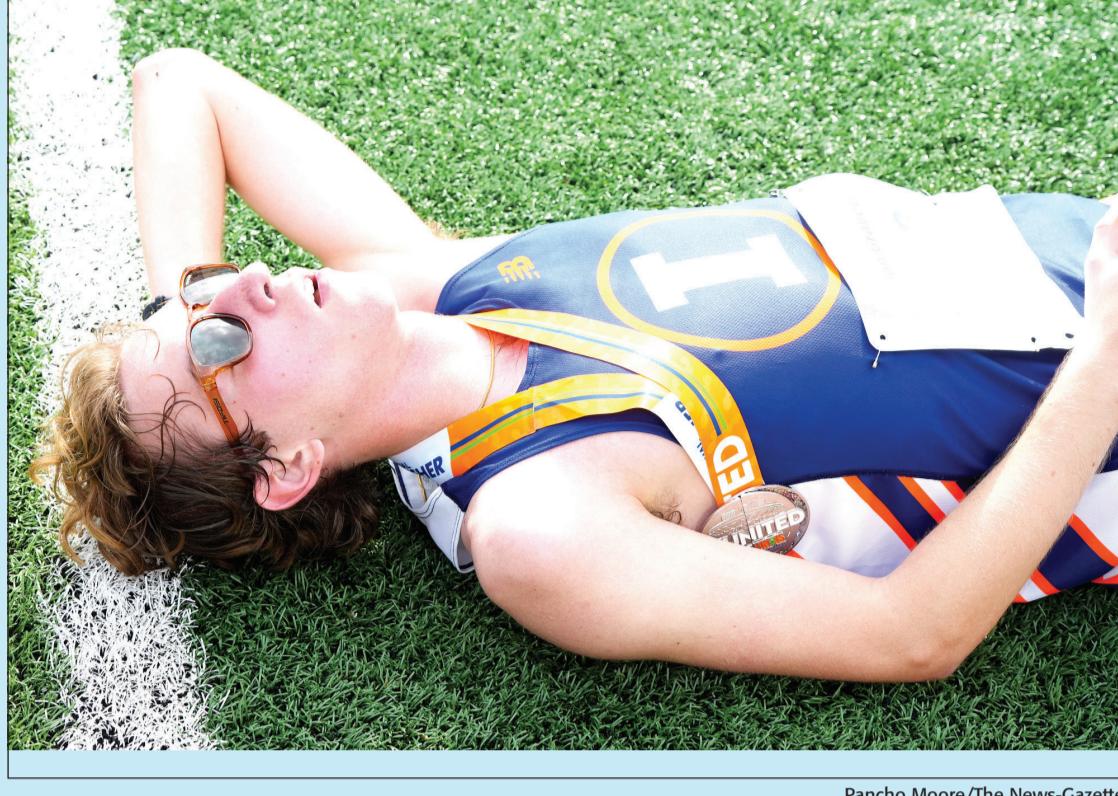

So what do you do now?

Continue to move and walk after finishing the race. Try to keep moving for at least 20 minutes. Slowly drink fluids that contain carbohydrates and salt/electrolytes as well as water. Begin to refuel with protein and carbohydrates.

Once you get back home or to your hotel/lodging, continue to drink water, sports drinks and other liquids, but avoid alcohol. Add protein to your carbs to help your muscles recover and repair. Think steak and potatoes, chicken with rice, a nice burrito.

Sleep and nap as much as possible. Rest is essential for the body to repair itself following such a difficult undertaking.

In the days and weeks following your race, gradually resume your normal athletic activities unless you have some post-race discomfort that isn't alleviating. If there is continued pain or discomfort, it would be appropriate to consult a medical provider or a sports medicine specialist.

Week 1

Invest the first week in short, light effort, low-impact cross-training activities that will boost circulation, warm your muscles and aid in the healing journey (think: walking, cycling, swimming or yoga).

If all feels well later that week, run a short, easy-effort run (30 minutes) to test the waters.

Week 2

If things still hurt, keep cross-training and let it simmer.

If you feel good, start back up with your normal running frequency, but keep the effort easy and the distance shorter (30 to 60 minutes).

Week 3

Run longer and a little faster. If things are still going well and your body feels good, ease back into distance and intensity.

Week 4

Now that you've slowly got your body back into a regular running routine, you can return to your pre-marathon schedule if you feel good. If you're running multiple races in one season, it is vital to invest in optimal recovery time.

The best thing you can do for yourself to keep performing race after race is giving yourself some time off. The off-season is a great time to take a break from running (at least intense running). Then, when you're ready to return, start with more cross-training and slowly add intensity.

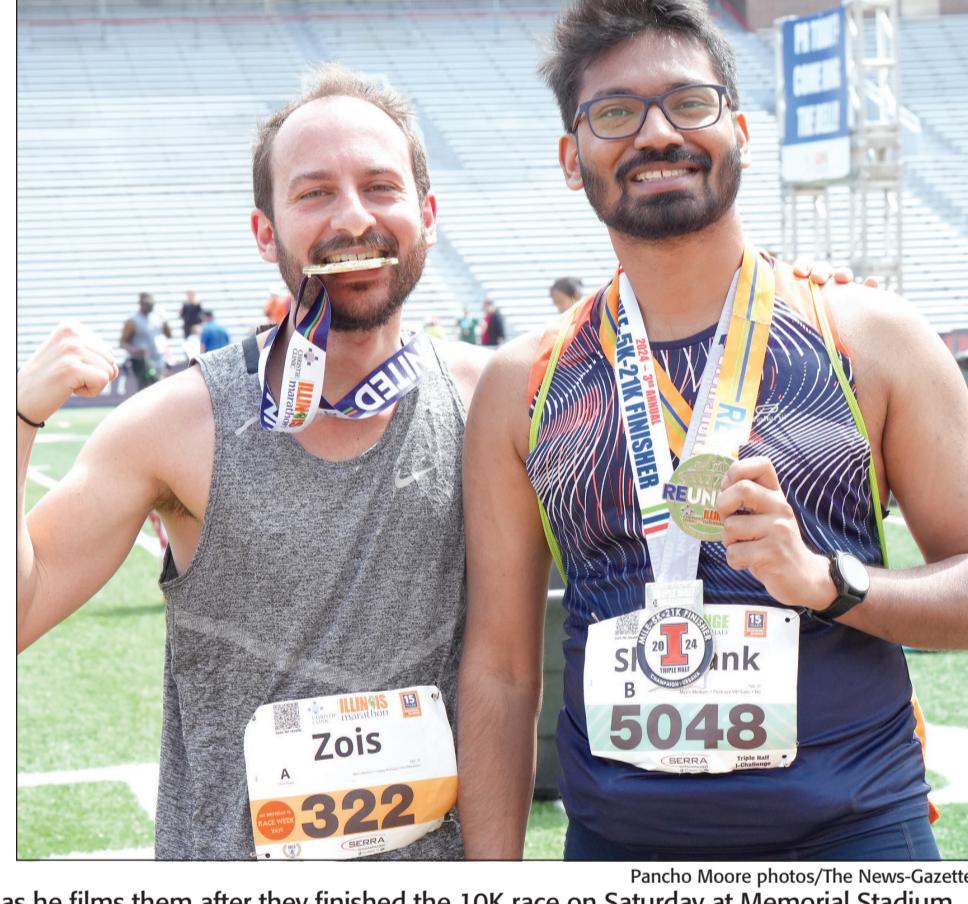

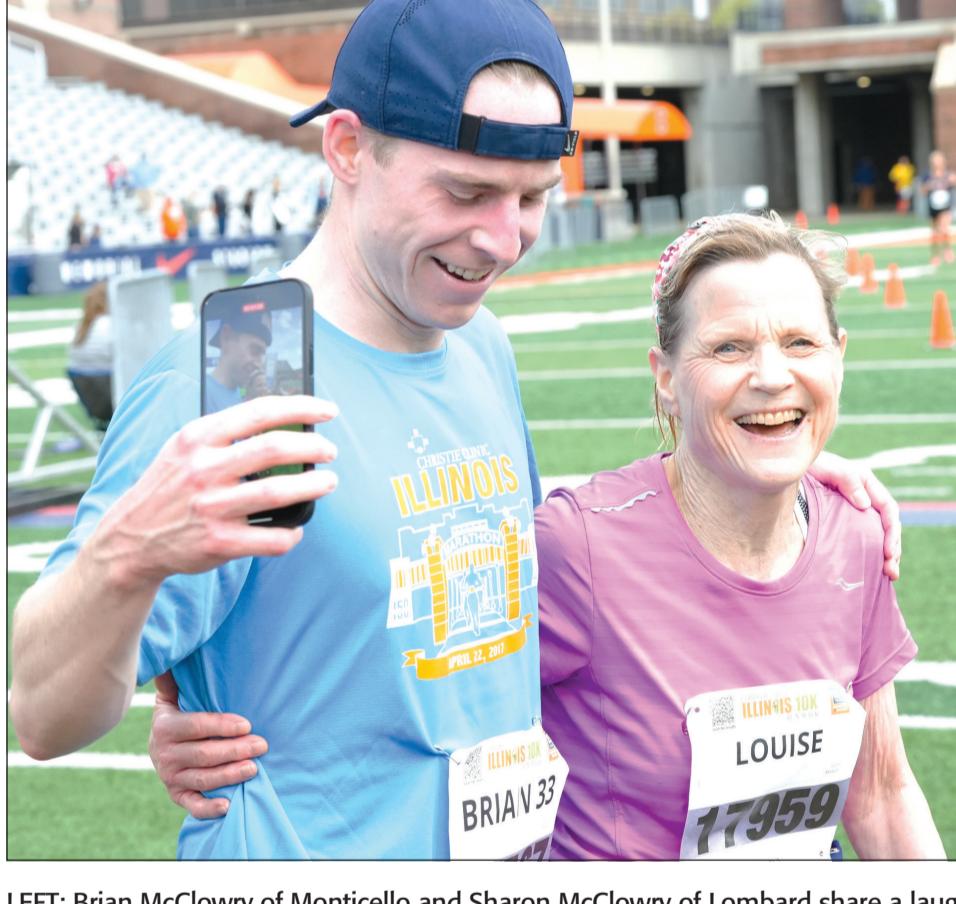

A few points to remember:

- Take a break from running.
- Wait on a massage.
- Don't start any new types of exercises.
- Reintroduce running gradually.
- Return to strength training carefully.
- Listen to your body and remember to sleep.

CHRISTIE CLINIC ILLINOIS RACE WEEKENDFIRST TO THE FINISH*WOMEN'S MARATHON*Mahomet-Seymour grad takes maiden victory: 'Everything just clicked today'

By JOEY WRIGHT

jwright@news-gazette.com

CHAMPAIGN — Lexie Dorsey was ecstatic and exhausted in the final moments of her victory in the Christie Clinic Illinois Marathon women's race.

That showed as the Mahomet-Seymour graduate fell to the ground after crossing the finish line in Memorial Stadium, with friends and family members swarming to congratulate her on her victory.

"Running is so hard," Dorsey said. "We trained (for) four months to come out here. I took the lead right before (mile) 13; I just had great guys pacing me. Everything just clicked today. It was hard; I'm very tired. I couldn't have done it without my family, my friends, my coworkers."

In turning in a time, of 2:57:58, Dorsey overcame nerves surrounding the race's uncertainty following protests Friday on the University of Illinois campus that canceled that night's 5K.

"I love the Champaign marathon; it's such a great atmosphere," Dorsey said. "I haven't been able to run it because I went to college and did the college thing. ... I was really nervous last night that it was going to get canceled, so to be out here and to be able to run is so great."

Dorsey competed collegiately at Illinois Wesleyan after graduating from Mahomet-Seymour in 2018. She edged second-place finisher Brisa McGrath — another former Bulldogs runner — by 1:05.

"I was running my race and I was just so happy to have so much support," McGrath said. "I have so many people I'm so blessed to have in my life."

CHAMPAIGN — Jaime Marcos wasn't sure what he'd tell his students at Champaign's Dr. Howard Elementary when he crossed the finish line on Saturday.

In the moments after winning the Christie Clinic Illinois Marathon, the physical education teacher wasn't sure if he'd be at school Monday at all, in lieu of taking a hard-earned day off.

"It'll be exciting," Marcos said. "Everyone there knew I was going to run it, and I just know it's going to be so fun to go back to school and get all the moral support from my students and my peers. I'm thrilled."

Marcos braved humid conditions to outlast Dan Froeschle by nearly a minute in capturing the race's top prize with a time of 2:29:46.

"I know most of these guys have better personal bests than I do, so I know it's not in my best interest to go with them at the start," Froeschle said. "My plan was just kind of to slowly reel him in, and I'm proud of how I did. No shame in losing to who I lost to, and the other guy with him is pretty damn good, too."

An energetic crowd on hand for the first full marathon since 2019 helped him during the race.

Running 26.2 miles "is not easy, no matter who you are," Marcos said. "I'm just happy to cross the line. I had a lot of support out here ... I saw a lot of my peers and students, and that was awesome. It was fun, but I'm exhausted."

Jonathan Fernandez had a nice view of his friend's victory during a third-place run that ended with a time of 2:30:47.

"I'm just very happy for him," Fernandez said. "We've been running together since high school."

Brian Bundren of Mahomet prepares to cross the finish line as the men's winner of the Christie Clinic Illinois 10K on Saturday at Memorial Stadium in Champaign.

CHAMPAIGN — Devin Allbaugh arrived in Champaign from Bettendorf, Iowa, with a goal in mind.

That goal was achieved Saturday — by nearly four seconds — as he captured the men's half-marathon title with a time of 1:08:49.

"It was tough conditions," Allbaugh said. "It's really windy, it's really humid, so kind of not conducive to running. I just wanted to go out there and just kind of run by feel, and I felt pretty decent for the most part."

Allbaugh overcame having to run most of the race by himself; Arturs Bareikis finished second at 1:12:10, while Ethan Forsell came in third at 1:12:28.

"The crowd support was amazing," Allbaugh said. "Those crowds really helped push me along."

Up next for Allbaugh: The Chicago Marathon on Oct. 13, in addition to some races in the Quad Cities to stay in shape.

"I've always enjoyed it," Allbaugh said. "I enjoy you know kind of the pain and the elation of finishing something and it's kind of as simple as that I think."

Jane Bareikis knows her way to the front of the pack.

The Kenyan captured her second-consecutive victory in the women's half-marathon with a blazing mark of 1:17:29, besting second-place finisher Lynn Ahlers by nearly four minutes.

"The wind was really good at some point," Bareikis said. "It was doable. It was much better than cold weather, like winter."

The most surprising part of Bareikis' title-defending victory? It wasn't necessarily supposed to happen.

"I just came from Kenya," Bareikis said. "We were supposed to come back next week ... the main idea is to win."

Hamstring discomfort nearly sidelined Bareikis during the race as well.

"At some point I was thinking maybe I should stop, around Mile 2," Bareikis said. "And then I was like, 'Just keep going; maybe it'll get better.' It got worse ... I looked behind and I had a big gap, so I was like, 'I'll just go.'"

The energy among the crowd was palpable, even though Bareikis wasn't running the highly-anticipated full marathon.

"It's a good event," Bareikis said.

Ahlers hadn't been back on the UI campus in two decades before participating in the half-marathon.

Her 5K time en route to a 1:21:22 finish was faster than her pace when she ran for the Illini.

"It means so much because 20 years was my last race as an Illini, as a kid," said. "Now I'm close to 40 and inspired by my friends and women around the world that are getting up in their 40s. It's really fun to get out and work hard."

Ahlers now lives in Iowa City.

"My mind has gotten stronger and my heart has given me more grace," Ahlers said.

Despite battling a shoulder injury entering Saturday's race, Susannah Scaroni became the first winner of the morning when she captured the wheelchair half-marathon in 50:08, nearly 10 minutes faster than second- and third-place finishers Hoda Elshorbagy and Noah Eckelberg.

"I'm trying to keep it healing," Scaroni said. "So I had to hold back a few times, but honestly, I was really happy with how I felt today. Very hopeful."

The win was an encouraging sign for Scaroni, who captured a 5,000-meter T54 gold medal at the 2020 Paralympics and also competed for the United States at the 2012 and 2016 games.

"We had really good wind conditions," Scaroni said. "A lot of tailwind sections that were long and then a lot ahead were blocked. So I got to keep my pace up. Crowds were really fun. I was so lucky to have the lead vehicles because even though I train here, it was really nice knowing where the corners would be."

Saturday's 10K was headlined by a pair of familiar faces.

Mahomet native Brian Bundren triumphed before plenty of familiar faces as he captured the overall gold medal with a time of 35:23.

"There's so much excitement living in this community," Bundren said. "It's just a big event for this community and for the university, so to be a part of that is really special."

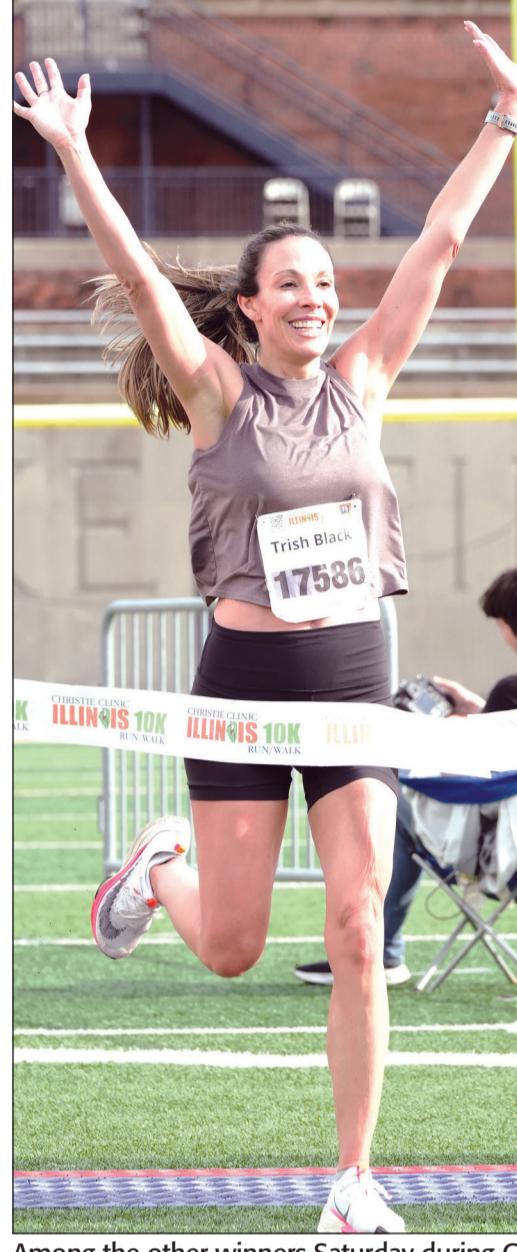

Champaign's Trish Black won the women's race at 40:39, a time that was also good for 12th on the overall leader-board.

"Hats off to the race director and the events team for pulling this thing off," Black said.

Jordan and Laurie McNulty's gray-and-blue Detroit Lions jerseys stood out among the crowd as runners gathered for the start of their races Saturday morning.

The Aidan Hutchinson and Jared Goff jerseys — which would have fit perfectly at the ongoing NFL draft in Detroit — were in support of Tim McNulty, who wore a blue Lions T-shirt as he competed in his 20th marathon.

"He said he was going to wear this, so we just wore our jerseys," Jordan said. "Gotta match."

Tim crossed the line in 4:06:15, a bit off from the time he would have preferred. He didn't blame the weather, having seen far worse in other races he's competed in over the years.

"I've run a lot hotter," Tim said. "And the course is flat and I didn't think it was all that windy either, so I didn't have any issues with that. I think I overtrained is what my issue was."

Jordan also sported a Detroit Red Wings cap. Tim is from the Detroit area and the family regularly makes trips to the Motor City from their current home in Petersburg, Ill.

Tim and Jordan had Lions season tickets for the first time last season to coincide with the team's first NFC championship game appearance since 1991.

"This guy (Jordan) grew up a huge fan," Tim said. "We meet my brothers for just about every home game."

Sam LeRoy's involvement with the Illinois Marathon goes back to the race's inception in 2009.

He was a year behind race director Jan Seeley's son at Uni High when the race began. It lacked the volunteer network it currently has, so those who knew Seeley stepped up to fill in the gaps.

"We had different groups at Uni High that would volunteer," said his mother, Janet LeRoy. "Like the girls' basketball team would take Mile 8 and the boys' basketball team would take Mile 4."

The LeRois are still coming back 15 years later.

They and their fellow volunteers happily manned a concession stand on the west end of Memorial Stadium to hand out pizza, bagels, chips and cookies for runners to nosh on after their races.

"I've done everything from cleaning up the signs after, just all kinds of things," Janet LeRoy said.

Runners were equally happy to refuel after a muggy race, with water, chocolate milk and Nuun also available on the field and in the concourse.

"We definitely appreciate that," marathon relay runner Bob Edwards said. "It helps."

Fellow volunteer Disa Johnson has kept coming back to support Seeley and the surrounding community.

"This is such a big deal with so many people," Johnson said. "It's just fun to be able to be the happy face and congratulate the runners at the end of the day. All the community has to really pull together to pull this whole thing off and it's just such a cool event."

The stretch of Kirby Avenue just outside Memorial Stadium had just about everything that runners and their families could want following the races.

Eight food trucks lined the street near a kids' zone with inflatables and face painting. Four athletic tables were available for racers to stretch out with, courtesy Christie Clinic.

And Riggs Beer Co. was on hand to supply competitors with free beer as they took in tunes from Peoria-based Top 4D Entertainment.

"It's been a really big response, bigger than I thought it was going to be," said Mark Brown, director of sports, events and film for tourism agency Experience Champaign-Urbana. "We've had many thousands of people streaming out of the stadium ... I had thought that more of them would just kind of leave, but most of them are staying and having a great time."

The 27th Mile celebration took place just a few hundred feet from where runners began their races a few hours prior.

"We were over by the starting line this morning just to kind of see the community spirit, everybody coming together," Brown said. "That was really cool to see many thousands of runners starting all at the same time."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

As the races went on, it was increasingly common to see runners cross the finish line at Memorial Stadium and head toward the nearest garbage can.

Some runners gave out into the arms of waiting runners or race officials. An occasional participant needed assistance into the race's medical tent thanks to unseasonably warm and humid temperatures.

That's where the race's team group of more than 50 medical staffers came into play.

"It's a collaboration between Christie Clinic, Carle, OSF and the local fire departments, ambulance services, hospitals," Carle EMS director Michael Smith said. "Really kind of a full community effort to get out here and support the marathon."

Heat and humidity were the main concern for the medical team as Saturday's action unfolded.

"We appreciate that runners take their training and preparation coming into a race like this," Smith said. "But when we have an unseasonably warm and humid day, a few of the runners do get into trouble, and that's why we have a lot of presence at the race, so we can help those folks out."

While race weekend is the largest local event in terms of the volume of athletes competing, Memorial Stadium also hosts the other events that require a medical approach of similar scale: Illini football games.

"There, the large majority of people are spectators," Smith said. "Where we do see a similar number of medical folks to treat is usually in the first two games of the year where it is very hot and sometimes humid ... we can have some very busy football games medically."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

UI sophomore Emma Bergmann hadn't run a marathon before Saturday.

Not that many observers would know that after looking at her time, a 3:24:33 effort that placed her 10th among all female runners and qualified her for the 2025 Boston Marathon.

Her maiden effort was just a bit off her initial goal of completing the race within 3:20.

"I'm very proud of myself," Bergmann said. "I'm trying not to think about my (first) goal and instead, just be proud of what I did get. Because it's awesome. It was just so hot out there, and there's not much you can do about that. But I'm ready for next time, sub-3:20 for sure."

Bergmann isn't entirely new to running. She began with the sport as a middle-schooler in Cincinnati, her hometown. But her first marathon came together after just shy of five months of training.

"I was on a 20-week plan," Bergmann said. "So there are some plantar fasciitis along the way, some knee problems, of course, but 20 weeks of me knowing that I wanted to do the race."

Following their own races, her teammates from the UI's club cross-country team were on hand to support her as she crossed the finish line.

"It's so motivating to have people every single day," teammate Suhani Peramanu said.

"It's a great way to meet new people, too."

Peramanu turned in the fastest half-marathon time among females aged 15-19 at 1:35:38, also good for 15th among all female participants.

Her sentiment was echoed by her teammates.

"It motivates me to run faster because all of these guys are faster than me," Reiss Christensen said. "So when it comes to practice, I have to run a little faster to keep up with everybody."

The group had additional motivation to get across the finish line with courses winding in part through campus.

"It's really fun to finish on the field," Christensen said.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Jason Romps was feeling under the weather ahead of the half-marathon.

With a little help from his friends — Justin Wang, Graham Turk and Navin Rantanathan — the UI senior was able to gut out a 2:33:57 effort with what little energy he had.

"It's been a brutal day, but I had to keep going," Romps said. "I'm on too many painkillers right now, so I'm going right to bed after this."

Humid conditions didn't help his cause.

"It was a hard day, but I'm glad I'm done now," he said.

It helped that his pals were stationed at the finish line to energize his final 50 yards inside Memorial Stadium.

Their enthusiastic calls even earned a shoutout from the stadium's public-address announcer.

Jason "texted us at like 2 a.m., he was like, 'I don't know if I can do it,'" Rantanathan said. "But he did it and he finished."

Romps' friends also raced Saturday. Rantanathan ran the 10K in 1:09:42, while Turk and Wang ran the half-marathon in 1:27:01 and 1:43:16, respectively.

"Everyone was just cheering everybody on, just trying to get everybody to run faster," Turk said. "It was a great environment."

Like the club cross-country team, they found inspiration in racing through campus.

"It was cool to run through the actual neighborhoods of Champaign and see people on their porches cheering, the cowbells," Rantanathan said. "It was really fun."

CHRISTIE CLINIC ILLINOIS RACE WEEKEND

Robin Scholz/The News-Gazette

Runners pass The News-Gazette's offices near Fox and Devonshire drives in south Champaign during Saturday's Christie Clinic Illinois Marathon.

Alex Gomez of Champaign smiles as he watches water splash out of a cup grabbed by Frank Arnolts of Downs as they head down Amber Lane in Urbana during Saturday's marathon.
