Changing for a Changing Climate

Overcoming the Headwinds of Meeting Oregon's Clean Energy Goals

The 2020s have brought a lot of change in Oregon's energy landscape. From customer affordability to growing energy demands, the challenges we faced at the start of the decade are much different than today. Oregon is now five years out from meeting its 2030 climate goals for both electric and gas utilities. As we work toward a cleaner energy system, we must reflect on the progress we've already made and face the mounting challenges of the next half-decade.

About the Conference

The CUB Energy Policy Conference is designed as a day of discussion, networking, and sharing diverse perspectives. This conference is ideal for community groups, regulators, advocates, utility representatives, attorneys, or those interested in our region's energy industry.
