The key to Nucor's sustainable success as a company is that we care about the things that matter most: the safety and well-being of our teammates and customers; the health and protection of our environment; and the relationships we establish in the communities where we live and work. At the heart of every Nucor facility are the dedicated people who make up our team. But more importantly, our teammates make up the heart of the local communities that our divisions are proud to call home. Our teammates are hard-working, generous people who care deeply about the communities in which they live and work. We believe the strength of a business is a reflection of our teammates and the community that supports us. As it turns out, we have really great teammates and we operate in a really great community!
