Food bank seeks county support

By DAVID HAYES
I-O Editor

The Dallas Emergency Food Corporation sought a letter of support from the Polk County Board of Commissioners Aug. 20 to help the organization’s plans for a new building for the Dallas Food Bank.

Eileen Diccico, board secretary, said the letter would become part of funding proposal packets for the project, the first of which is for a $1.5 million Community Development Block Grant requested by the city of Dallas on behalf of Dallas Food Bank.

The Dallas Food Bank has been serving the community since 1983 as an all volunteer, 501c3 non profit and remains the primary food assistance provider in the Dallas area, Diccico said.

Food insecure individuals seek assistance from the Dallas Food Bank on average 520 times a month. Families are allowed to shop twice at the food bank. Diccico said last year, the food bank served more than 1,500 unique households comprised of 4,882 individuals. They expect that number to rise to 5,000 this year.

The reason they are developing plans for a new building is they’ve outgrown their current space of 1,800 square feet they lease within the Main Street Plaza. The original purpose of the space was as a business office, thus the chopped up rooms have proven to be less than ideal for their food distribution purposes.

Diccico said they don’t have a lobby, so individuals have to wait outside for their turn, and the food area is very small, allowing for only one cart at a time.

“So, if you have a slow shopper in front of you, the whole process is slowed up dramatically,” Diccico told the commissioners.

Their current lease expires at the end of 2025 and the board has yet to see a proposed renewal.

“We know our costs for being in this space are going to rise. Our current rent is about $1,725 per month. And $150 of that goes toward utilities,” Diccico said.

She added they’re facing an increase of $500-$600 in utility costs if they stay under a new lease.

The search for a new space has been ongoing for the past two years. Since January this year, they have been negotiating with the United Methodist Church to purchase a portion of their property at 565 SE La Creole Drive. They have completed partitioning plans and a purchase and sale agreement is under review, Diccico said. The purchase will be made with their own funds.

Get back in the action with new physical therapy business PerformX

By DAVID HAYES
I-O Editor

Between Dallas, Monmouth and Independence, there are plenty of gyms that help clients get back into and stay in shape. However, there’s a new facility in Independence that can help you get back to the gym should an injury occur along the way - PerformX Physical Therapy.

The business celebrated its official grand opening Aug. 23 rather unconventionally. Before the traditional ribbon cutting, assisted by the Monmouth-Independence Chamber of Commerce, the husband and wife owners of PerformX Dalton and Sidney Urrutia organized a workout with the Firehouse Crossfit where they have their own gym memberships. They were joined by family, friends and other community members.

“It was a good handful of people, it was a nice workout, nice heat, a good amount of fun for everybody,” Dalton said.

Dalton said he and Sidney have been offering physical therapy services since 2018. It has been a part of an overall plan ever since he went to physical therapy school in 2010.

“It’s been a lot of learning and processing bumps in the road. But, we’re here,” Dalton said.

Originally from the Willamette Valley, the Urrutias took a detour, moving abroad, where Dalton got his physical therapy education in Scotland. After offering physical therapy in five or six countries, they returned to the U.S. during the pandemic and moved to Independence in 2023. Many of the gym owners in the region helped the Urrutias get their feet settled offering their services locally.

“When we first got to Independence, we rented a room from Jen (Lindh) at Anytime Fitness. That’s where we started, with an office space in the back,” Dalton said. “She was immensely helpful and supportive and kind of keeping us in the loop with how things were going and gave us a big push getting us started. So, we can’t thank her enough.”

He went on to thank Firehouse Crossfit in Monmouth where the Urrutias work out as their home gym and made many of the community connections.

“Owners Dave and Leslie (Plotts) have done tons to help us out, too. Same thing with Jared and Lauren (Dickerson) at Shred City in Dallas. And Shane (Rider) with Kiowa Fitness has been insanely helpful for us, too,” Dalton said.

As the name implies, PerformX offers performance rehab and therapy. But in a twist, the Urrutias help injured athletes get back to their specific sport.

“We help injured people get back to doing the things they love the most,” Dalton said. “We’re a little bit different. We kind of go outside the standard system and focus completely on what the person wants to get back to. So, no matter what it takes, whether it’s chiropractic, massage or physical therapy, our goal is getting them back to doing what they want.”

He added they can help if it’s getting back on the ground playing with the grand kids or back in the game as a top contender.

In addition to Dalton, PerformX has two members on staff who are physical therapists and another who is a sports chiropractor. Among their staff of six is a virtual physical therapist, Tom, who helps people rebound from all over the world from his home in Connecticut.

Their facility has about 1,500 square feet in the front side of the building at the corner of Main and Monmouth streets, the former location of Jubilee Champagne and Dessert Bar. They are not using the space in the back yet, which Dalton said would be used if they ever expand. For now, the space is still for lease.

They have two treatment rooms, one geared toward chiropractic, the

MICC leadership shaken up after president’s job axed

By DAVID HAYES
I-O Editor

The Monmouth-Independence Chamber of Commerce has shaken up its leadership due to ongoing financial challenges. The chamber board of directors has eliminated their president/CEO position, which is currently held by Mackenzie Newland.

Mackenzie Newland

Newland will continue to work with the MICC through Aug. 29.

“The board has made the difficult decision to eliminate the position as part of a broader restructuring plan,” the MICC board said in a press release.

The board also called Newland, who joined last October, an exceptional leader during her tenure with the MICC, “guiding the Chamber with heart, innovation, and unwavering commitment.”

“Her passion for building a stronger, more connected business community has left a lasting legacy. From launching new initiatives to forging meaningful partnerships, Mackenzie’s leadership has elevated the Chamber’s role as a trusted hub for education, collaboration, and advocacy,” the board statement read.

The board blamed the financial challenges on unexpected operational costs, reduced funding and declining membership, which all led to unavoidable significant changes.

Newland told the I-O that she and the MICC Board have been reviewing the Chamber’s budget and options for sustaining operations and came to the conclusion that there needed to be some adjustments due to the economy and rising costs.

“We looked at multiple scenarios, including reducing my hours. Ultimately, we mutually agreed that a reduced schedule wasn’t sustainable for me or my family, and that MICC needed time to restructure the role and overall operations,” Newland said by email.

The board indicated the move to eliminate Newland’s position was a difficult decision because she was performing so well.

“Mackenzie has remained dedicated to supporting the chamber through every challenge. She has worked tirelessly to bridge funding gaps and preserve the chamber’s mission, even while facing her own family’s needs,” the chamber board wrote.

Monmouth mourns passing of finance director Susie Marston

By SABRA JEWELL
Monmouth Communications Director

The city of Monmouth is saddened to announce the passing of Finance Director Susie Marston, a respected colleague, leader, and friend.

Although Marston served as finance direc- tor for only a few years, her career in public service spanned decades leaving a lasting impact on communities across Oregon. She was widely recognized for her lead- ership, kindness, and unwavering commitment to public service.

Among her colleagues in Monmouth, Marston was known as a “silent warrior.” She brought beauty, levity, and grace to every situation. She will be remembered for what she meant to the city of Monmouth, what she gave in public ser- vice, and who she will forever be to the people who knew and loved her.

To ensure continuity of leadership within the Finance Department, the city of Monmouth has appointed Jon Steed as interim finance director. He will serve in this capacity until a perma- nent Finance Director is selected. The city will begin a formal search process for the role in the coming weeks.

to do something like this,” Dickey said. Meanwhile, she added, the city of Dallas has applied for a $1.5 million Federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) to construct a 3,000 square-foot building on the lot. The Polk Community Development Corporation is assisting with the grant application, and if successful, will manage the construction project. She added the board is looking at “stick-built” and “modular options” ranging from $1.7 million to $2.1 million. The open-floor plan will include a receiving area for food deliveries, ample storage for fresh, frozen and dried foods, a shopping area that accommodates two-way cart traffic, ADA bathrooms, mop and utility sinks, office and waiting room. In addition, the plans come with adequate parking for volunteers and clients. “The CDBG funding opportunity is critical. And according to Business Oregon, which is adminis- tering the program, funds are available,” Dickey said. “It’s uncertain if this funding opportunity will exist in the future.” A letter of support from the board of commissioners is just one of many the food bank board is seeking, includ- ing the Dallas Community Foundation and U.S. Rep. Andrea Salinas’s office. They also plan to reach out for sup- port from Sen. Ron Wyden’s office and state Rep. Anna Scharf’s office. Their CDBG application is due Aug. 30 and they expect an invitation from Business Oregon to submit the full application, Dickey said. County Chair Craig Pope’s first concern was the rate the food bank was facing purchasing the new building per square foot. “Seven hundred dollars per square foot for an empty space essentially that you can plug refrigerators into, and put up shelves,” Pope summa- rized, seeking clarification. Dickey said they’ve scaled back their plans all they can to reduce the costs, explain- ing why they’re exploring a modular option for their new facility. “But a lot of it is in the labor costs associated with doing the project,” Dickey explained. “There’s about $500,000, I think, in the fees and administrative costs.” Pope then asked if the Dallas Food Bank has touched bases with the Ella Curran Food Bank, as both are seeking new facilities with aid through Polk County. One difference, Dickey said, was Ella Curran had their land donated to them from the Oregon Community Foundation and is getting additional funding as a regional distributional center. Pope asked how many total food banks were in operation in Polk County. Besides Dallas’s, Dickey pointed to Grand Ronde, Ella Curran, West Salem, a very small food bank operated by Willamette University, and Dallas’s Seventh Day Adventist serving one day a month.

“We’re all members of Marion/Polk Food Share’s network of hunger relief facil- ities,” Dickey said, adding they are not contributing to the construction of a new building for Dallas. Commissioner Lyle Mordhorst suggested meeting with additional contractors, of which he could suggest a cou- ple, to seek out a better and lower cost to the food bank construction. Pope concluded the meet- ing by saying the board will take under consideration their application for a letter of support. Commissioner Jeremy Gordon was not present.

Newland is moving on from the chamber to serve as the founder and executive director of The Reading Nest, a nonprofit mobile library dedicated to bringing books and learning to underserved areas. Newland said The Reading Nest has been devel- oping alongside her Chamber work for months, with part- ners and early programming already underway. “Our current programs include Southtown Storytime (a recurring pop-up storytime for ages 0–5 in partnership with Fostering Hope Initiative and Polk County Family & Community Outreach) and event pop-ups that bring free books and literacy tools to the community,” Newland said. “We’re actively building our collection and saving toward a fully accessible bookmo- bile so we can reach more communities throughout the county.” She clarified her transition from MICC was driven by budget realities and the need to right-size the role. “I care deeply about MICC and 100% remain supportive of the Chamber’s success,” Newland said. The MICC board said Newland’s vision and leader- ship “will no doubt continue to inspire and uplift our region in new ways.”

“We fully support her deci- sion to pursue new opportu- nities that align with her values and provide long-term stabili- ty,” the MICC board wrote. “On behalf of the entire board and community, we thank Mackenzie for her incredible service, steadfast leadership, and the meaningful impact she has made. She will be greatly missed.”

Meanwhile, the MICC board said it is actively exploring new operational models to ensure continued service to its members and the community. “We remain hopeful, com- mitted, and focused on build- ing a sustainable path for- ward — and will share more updates in the days ahead,” the board concluded.

You have the right to know what's happening in your community.

Public notices – information local governments are obligated to provide citizens – are required to be published in local newspapers to provide a public record that's accessible to everyone.

Public notices keep you informed about your government.

But, Oregon legislators are trying to keep public notices from appearing in local newspapers. This severely impacts government transparency and, in turn, limits the public's right to hold them accountable for their actions.

Let your state legislators know that you value being able to access notices in your newspaper and that they are worth the investment.

‘I respectfully disagree’: Kotek says Oregon will follow sanctuary law despite threats

MIA MALDONADO
Oregon Capital Chronicle

Oregon Gov. Tina Kotek on Tuesday, Aug. 19, pushed back against claims from the federal government that the state is obstructing federal immigration enforcement efforts because of its sanctuary law.

On Aug. 13, U.S. Attorney General Pam Bondi gave Kotek, along with dozens of other elected officials in sanctuary states and cities, until Tuesday to respond to a letter threatening legal consequences because the state prohibits law enforcement and other public agencies from cooperating with federal officials on immigration enforcement.

“You demanded a response by today,” Kotek said in her letter. “On behalf of the state of Oregon and its citizens, I respectfully disagree with your assertions. The state of Oregon, its public officials and its law enforcement officers do not engage in conduct that thwarts federal immigration enforcement.”

Kotek explained the history of Oregon’s 1987 sanctuary state law and said that most Oregon voters support the law. In a 2018 ballot measure, 63% of Oregon voters opposed repealing the law.

Under the sanctuary law, law enforcement agencies in Oregon in nearly all circumstances cannot inquire about immigration status or investigate someone for immigration enforcement purposes. Requests from federal agencies to local law enforcement agencies about immigration enforcement without a judicial order must be documented, reported and denied.

Kotek said the state of Oregon complies with federal law and it will continue to follow its own laws.

At a Monday press conference related to the state’s most recent lawsuit against the federal government, Oregon Attorney General Dan Rayfield said the federal government is asking Oregon to break its own laws.

Out of the 37 lawsuits Oregon’s filed against the Trump administration, Rayfield said “a handful” stem from threats to force compliance on immigration issues such as by withholding funding used to support victims of domestic abuse and funding for road repairs and flood protections.

To report violations of Oregon’s sanctuary law, individuals can contact the Oregon Department of Justice’s Sanctuary Promise hotline at 1-844-924-STAY/1-844-6-AMPARO or report online at SanctuaryPromise.Oregon.gov or PromesaSantuario.Oregon.gov.

Dalton said PerformX is still looking to hire a sports massage therapist. And one of their first expansion ideas is to offer some recovery yoga.

Dalton said the reception from the community so far has been fantastic.

“It has been really fun because we were actively involved in the build process. We had a lot of handy family members. We were here constantly getting this place ready. People kept poking their heads in and telling us awesome stories about Taylor’s building and growing up here. So it’s been really exciting,” he said.

Their business, depending upon the availability of the therapist, is open as early as 6 a.m. and as late as 5 p.m.

“We invite people to come in and talk with us for 20-30 minutes to find out what’s going on. It’s free,” Dalsen added. “If we can help you, we’ll let you know. And if we can’t, we’ll help you find Doug was a cherished member of the Cottage Grove and Creswell, Oregon, communities and a resident of Willamette Oaks in Eugene. Doug leaves behind a legacy of service, compassion, and dedication.

Born on Sept. 26, 1940, in the rural farming town of Dawson, Minnesota, Doug was the son of Conrad and Alice (Gustafson) Lund. Following high school, Doug joined the Oregon Air National Guard and later pursued his calling in funeral service, graduating from the San Francisco College of Mortuary Science in 1962. While in San Francisco, he discovered a lifelong passion for jazz, inspired by the city's vibrant music scene.

Doug returned to Oregon and began his career in funeral service in Salem, where he met the love of his life, Jeryl. A Word Please

By JUNE CASAGRANDE

For nearly 20 years, Grammar Girl Mignon Fogarty has been tackling grammar myths with the grace and patience this columnist can only aspire to. On her wildly popular podcast and blog, “Grammar Girl’s Quick and Dirty Tips for Better Writing,” she has addressed every entrenched grammar prejudice under the sun, from the myth that says you can’t end a sentence with a preposition to the mistaken belief that an adverb between “to” and an infinitive, as in “to boldly go,” is a grammar mistake.

And for lo these past two decades, as I’ve repeatedly stooped to petty grammar disputes, I’ve marveled at her natural magnanimity. So trust me when I tell you it takes a lot to make her say “I’m so annoyed,” “It’s driving me crazy” and “Please stop.”

She’s talking about a language myth that won’t die. Perhaps you’ve heard it: Dashes in a piece of writing prove, or at least make it likely, the piece was written by AI. Fogarty has heard this online a lot, mainly on social media. Based on her experience, she wasn’t buying it, so she did some digging. Fogarty couldn’t pinpoint exactly where the idea started, but she found the source that likely blasted this belief into the mainstream — a video for a popular podcast that talked about “the ChatGPT hyphen,” calling it a “longer hyphen,” and got about 2.5 million views.

Remember that Mark Twain quote “A lie can travel halfway around the world while the truth is still putting on its shoes”? Well, that’s a good example of how fast misinformation could spread before the internet because, apparently, that wasn’t Twain. It was more likely Jonathan Swift. Whoever the source, we know that nonsense travels exponentially faster in the information age. And, as Fogarty explained, the business about dashes being a sign of AI writing is indeed nonsense.

“Em dashes” — the correct term for the punctuation marks setting off this clause — “are not a sign of AI writing,” Fogarty said.

The very idea is kind of silly when you understand how AI writing tools learn.

“So why might AI use a lot of em dashes?” Fogarty wondered. “And if it does, then how could seeing a lot of em dashes in someone’s writing not be a sure sign they’ve used AI? Well, all the writing you see coming out of tools like ChatGPT are the way they are because they were trained on human writing. The only way em dashes would be in there is if people used them.”

In other words, AI’s writing habits are humans’ writing habits — humans like Emily Dickinson, who famously used a lot of them. That’s why em dashes are useless for identifying AI-written text.

So instead of trying to learn some secret for spotting AI writing, why not invest that energy in this quick refresher on em dashes?

Em dashes, so called because they’re about as wide as a lowercase letter m, connect one part of a sentence to another. They’re not hyphens, which are about half that width and connect words to other words, prefixes or suffixes.

The two main jobs of an em dash are to indicate an abrupt change in sentence structure or tone and to set off parenthetical information. An abrupt change in structure is — well, it’s like this. Parenthetical info — examples, related thoughts, etc. — could also go into parentheses, but dashes keep them more prominent in a sentence.

Technically, dashes are not for connecting clauses that could stand as their own sentences — this sentence should be broken into two instead of made one with a dash. But that’s not so much a rule as an interpretation (mine).

Some editing styles put a space on either side of an em dash. Others attach the dash directly to the surrounding words. Either way is correct.

If you like em dashes, go ahead and use them. I, personally, am a fan. But if you’re evaluating someone else’s writing, don’t assume em dashes mean they cheated and got AI to do their work for them. You just can’t know that from their dashes.

Stay safe, healthy this wildfire season

Dr. Kristina Petsas
I-O Guest Column

Clean air is something we might take for granted. But when the air quality becomes an issue, especially due to recent wildfire activity in Oregon, it can affect our daily lives.

Governor Tina Kotek has declared a state of emergency, citing an “imminent and ongoing threat of wildfire.”

When smoke from wildfires infiltrates the air, it can create a mixture of gases and fine particles. These microscopic particles are what can cause health issues, including burning eyes, runny nose, and illnesses such as bronchitis.

While all Oregonians should prioritize their health during wildfire season, several groups may be more at risk when air quality becomes poor. This includes people with lung diseases like COPD or asthma, people with heart disease, older adults over 65, young children and pregnant women.

It’s important to take steps to prepare yourself, your loved ones, and your home from wildfires to reduce risk. Here are some additional guidelines that can help protect your health:

Check your local Air Quality Index using local news forecasts or AirNow.gov to see whether air is rated from “Good” to “Hazardous” and know when it’s safe to be outside.

- Avoid exercising outdoors when air quality issues arise.
- Limit the time your child spends playing outside if air quality is unhealthy.
- Keep indoor air as clean as possible. Keep your windows and doors closed, run an air conditioner but keep the fresh-air intake closed and keep the filter clean.

- Avoid activities that increase indoor pollution like burning candles, fireplaces and gas stoves.

- Don’t allow anyone to smoke inside.

If the air becomes dangerous, everyone needs to take steps to help protect themselves. People most at risk should take precautions before air quality reaches “hazardous” levels, especially staying indoors with filtered air. If you must be outside for an extended period of time, consider wearing a tight-fitting N95 mask. Oregonians should generally keep activity levels low and use air filtration whenever possible.

Even if you are healthy, you may experience symptoms of poor air quality. Some symptoms to be aware of include coughing, irritation of the eyes, nose and throat, chest tightness and shortness of breath. For those with heart disease or other heart issues, be aware of the symptoms of heart attack and stroke.

Most health symptoms of poor air quality should go away when the conditions improve. During this wildfire season, Community members need to take care of themselves and each other to ensure safety this summer. If you have concerns about your symptoms, contact your health care provider.

buyouts, rather than waiting to be fired.

One person taking a buyout was National Weather Service (NWS) meteorologist Paul Yura, who worked in the bureau’s Austin/San Antonio region office. Yura, a senior meteorologist, was the office’s only “warning coordinator.”

His job was informing the public about impending weather disasters so timely warnings could be issued and evacuation protocols initiated. The work required maintaining ongoing contact with both the weather analysts in his office and a variety of local officials in the area where a dangerous weather event was developing. Such public contacts typically include local government officials, police and fire departments, schools, television and radio stations and social media.

Yura left his job in April, and was not replaced.

During the early hours of July 4, a quickly-developing, intense rainstorm caused the water along a stretch of Texas’s Guadalupe River known as “Flash Flood Alley” to rise 26 feet in 45 minutes. The resultant flooding caused at least 132 deaths, most by drowning, with some possible victims still unaccounted for. Among those killed were more than 35 children, many of them campers at a Christian summer camp on one side of the river.

Ironically, the part of the camp that flooded was sitting on the river’s lower bank. Those campers on somewhat higher ground, less than one-quarter of a mile, or a five-minute walk, from the river’s edge, were not harmed — at least physically.

The inevitable post mortem, which unfolded in the days and weeks after the flood, revealed that little or no warning was given to the campers and others sleeping near the river. They first became aware of the danger when the roaring floodwaters were directly upon them, and few had the time or means to escape.

But the NWS regional office forecast the developing storm and flood danger at least three hours before the river began to rise. The meteorologists on duty tried to issue warnings. But without ready access to the pipelines that Mr. Yara had developed, their alarms were mostly unheeded.

To be fair, the ineffectual NWS warnings were not the only factor in the fiasco. Despite numerous urgings and admonitions, the state of Texas and local governments had failed to install flood warning sirens, claiming that their cost of $1 million was prohibitive. And we certainly may question why campsites were permitted where flash floods occur regularly. There have been 10 major floods along the Guadalupe in the past 90 years, and 10 children lost their lives in a 1989 flood.

Still, had Mr. Yara been on duty that night, many lives might have been saved. And national coverage of that story embarrassed the Trump administration.

So, with experts predicting that climate change could make this year’s hurricane season especially dangerous, and pointing out that the DOGE-weakened NWS is less capable of predicting danger as it arises, the government has decided to take action and hire, and begin to train, new meteorologists to fill many of positions it cut this spring.

Mr. Musk’s chainsaw was a metaphor. But Texas deaths resulting, at least in part, from DOGE’s cuts are quite real.

It’s hard to erase the mental image of Elon Musk charging

Indeed, Musk’s newly formed Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE) was wildly-nilly cutting 280,000 government employee and contractors’ jobs in a few short months. Seventy-five thousand of those employees took government

Moments in time

• On Sept. 8, 2012, a pair of Elvis Presley’s undershorts, which had been framed under glass, failed to sell at a British auction, though they’d been optimistically expected to go for more than $10,000.

• On Sept. 9, 1942, a Japanese sea-plane dropped incendiary bombs near Brookings, Oregon, in the first such attack on the U.S. mainland. The bombs were intended to start a forest fire, but fortunately caused little damage, due to wet conditions. Twenty years later, the pilot, Nobuo Fujita, visited Brookings in a gesture of reconciliation and friendship.

• On Sept. 10, 1920, F. Scott Fitzgerald published his first short story collection, “Flappers and Philosophers.” In a copy he sent to editor and critic H.L. Mencken, Fitzgerald labeled four of the stories “worth reading,” one “amusing” and the remaining three “trash.”

• On Sept. 11, 1841, American portrait painter John Goffe Rand received a patent for the first collapsible tin paint tube. Until then, artists had to mix their own oil paints, storing leftover supplies in animal bladders tied with string. French artist Pierre-Auguste Renoir later declared that “without paints in tubes there would have been no Cézanne, no Monet, no Sisley or Pissarro, nothing of ... Impressionism.”

• On Sept. 12, 1972, cowboy actor William Boyd, best known for his role as Hopalong Cassidy, died at the age of 77. He was the first cowboy actor to make the transition from movies to television, after more than 50 successful B-grade Westerns in which he was accompanied by his faithful and exceptionally intelligent horse, Topper.

• On Sept. 13, 1940, Benito Mussolini’s forces crossed the Libyan border into Egypt, achieving what “Il Duce” described as the glory Italy had been seeking for 300 years.

• On Sept. 14, 1975, Elizabeth Ann Seton (née Bayley), who was raised Episcopalian but later converted to Catholicism after being left a widow with five children, was canonized by Pope Paul VI at the Vatican in Rome, becoming one of the first American-born Catholic saints.

Central Lions Car Show a success with 117 entries

There were a total of 117 entries in the Central Lions Car Show of many makes and vintages, the oldest being a 1927 Essex Sedan, and the newest being a 2021 Dodge Challenger.

We had about 20 more cars than last year. Like last year, the threatening weather limited the number of entries, as we have had over 190 in the past. However, as this was the first year that we had on-line registration, we had more pre-registered cars than ever before. It was a very enjoyable show, with drivers and visitors alike praising the show and also the venue of Independence Riverview Park. Central Lions Club earned about $5000 for various Lions charities and projects.

The Central Lions Club would like to thank the following sponsors who have contributed financial support, awards, auction and raffle items:

The support provided by these sponsors is critical to the success of the Central Lions Cruise In, and the raising of funds to support the various charities and good works of Central Lions Club.

Money raised through these donations, as well as entry fees, goes to programs within the community, such as eye exams and glasses, hearing aids for those who cannot afford them, and vision screening for local school children (Lions Clubs nationwide screen more school children for vision than any other organization, and Oregon Lions Clubs screen more children than any other state's Lions Clubs).

Additionally, local Lions Clubs are involved state-wide and internationally. Lions Clubs support diabetes awareness and training, environmental education, peace and diversity understanding, and humanitarian assistance both at home and world-wide.

Through the support and generosity of car owners and sponsors, over the past 13 years Central Lions Club Cruise-In and Car show has raised over $65,000 in support of local and statewide Lions Club charities, including vision screening and eye glasses, hearing tests and hearing aids, Pediatric Cancer Research, disaster relief, environmental restoration projects, and more!

Five tips for busy parents to reduce stress

Parenting is a rewarding journey, and it can also be a source of stress. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, while some stress can motivate and build resilience, excessive stress without healthy coping mechanisms can lead to harmful effects on physical and mental health.

Here are a few tips to reduce stress and embrace mindful parenting:

- 1. Prioritize self-care: Carving out time for yourself isn’t selfish — it’s essential. Whether it’s a quiet cup of coffee in the morning or a short evening walk, these moments recharge your batteries, making you more present for your family.
- 2. Connect with your children: Dedicate quality time to engage with your kids without distractions. This strengthens your bond and provides a sense of fulfillment. Pediatricians recommend 15 to 30 minutes of dedicated time for a meaningful impact.

- 3. Build a support network: Don’t hesitate to reach out to friends, family or support groups. Sharing experiences and seeking advice can provide new perspectives and emotional relief.
- 4. Maintain healthy routines: Establish consistent routines for meals, bedtime and activities. Predictability provides a sense of security for you and your children.
- 5. Seek professional help when needed: If stress becomes overwhelming, consider consulting a mental health professional. They can offer strategies tailored to your situation.

Parenting is a journey, not a destination. It’s about making small, intentional changes that lead to a more balanced and joyful family life.

Panthers kick off fall sports season with Red & White Day

By LANCE MASTERSON,
For The Itemizer-Observer

Central High School ushered in a new year of athletics Saturday with Red & White Day, a celebration intended to expand the traditional football scrimmage into a showcase for all fall sports teams.

“The goal is to make this a community day for athletics,” Athletic Director Brandis Piper said. “It’s a chance for people to connect, enjoy a meal, and see our athletes in action. Red & White Day is about more than football. It’s about every team that represents Central.”

The day began with Panthers’ football team scrimmaging, followed by a community barbecue, followed by the volleyball, and concluding with girls soccer and boys soccer teams in action.

The Panthers volleyball teams scrimmaged during Saturday’s Red & White Day. The event, new to the school, showcased the school’s fall sports teams.

Proceeds from the barbecue covered the cost of the event.

Piper, who stepped into his new role this summer, said he hopes the event becomes a tradition for fall, winter and spring sports.

“I’m a big believer that food is a great way to have community,” he added.

“This is about showing what Central athletics is all about.”

Another highlight from Saturday was the return of head coach Joe Orozco, who rejoined Central’s boys soccer program after an absence of six years. For the former Mid-Willamette Conference coach of the year, the scrimmage served as both a homecoming and first evaluation of his new roster.

“It’s kind of new because we didn’t have Red & White Day ... back when I was here before,” Orozco said. “It’s all new to me. But it’s good stuff for the kids.”

The one-hour scrimmage gave Orozco and his staff an early look at player communication, chemistry and positional strengths.

“I hope to see more passing, not just kicking the ball,” he said. “More talking between each other, more settled play, and keepers getting more involved.”

The Panthers get another chance to refine their lineup Thursday at the jamboree in McMinnville, where Orozco plans to experiment with different combinations.

“The Red & White game helps me place guys where they can actually do better,” he said. “The jamboree will help even more because I can experiment with different positions for different guys and see where they fit in best.”

For Piper, Red & White Day represents more than a pre-season preview and a chance to evaluate one’s roster. It’s a way to bring together students, families, and fans.

“This is about creating an environment where our athletes can thrive academically and athletically, while also building school spirit,” he added.

Former competitor happy to be part of Panther family as athletic director

By LANCE MASTERSON
For The Itemizer-Observer

When Brandis Piper accepted the role of athletic director at Central High School, he did so with more than just administrative experience. He also brought first-hand knowledge of what it’s like to compete against the Panthers.

During his time as a coach at McKay High School, which included five years leading the football program, Piper regularly matched up against Central. What stood out to him on game days wasn’t just the Panthers’ talent on the field, but community support surrounding the program.

“I always respected the way Central competed,” Piper said. “They had quality athletes, but beyond that, you could see how much pride the school and community had in supporting the kids. It was something you noticed right away as an opponent.”

Those impressions left a mark. Even then, Piper recognized Central as a place athletics were more than just games; they were a point of connection.

“From the outside looking in, you saw a program that worked hard, played with character, and had people in the stands who cared,” he said. “That’s part of what makes this such an exciting opportunity for me now. I get to be part of that tradition instead of just coaching against it.”

Piper, who also serves as vice principal, began meeting with Central coaches and retiring Athletic Director Brett Baldwin in May to ensure a smooth transition.

“I wanted to feel like I could hit the ground running,” he said.

“Sprinting” might be more accurate phrasing, given that he’s already helped hire a new varsity boys soccer coach (Joe Orozco), organize a Red & White Day to showcase fall sports teams, and is implementing an academic tracking system for athletes.

In this system, students are placed in zones - be it Panther, Green, Yellow, or Red - based on GPA and attendance numbers. The level of support and guidance a student-athlete receives will depend on what zone they are in.

For example, athletes in the Panther Zone (above 3.0 GPA with strong attendance), will be celebrated and recognized for their efforts. Students in the Red Zone (low GPA and poor attendance) will be required to follow structured academic plans to stay eligible.

The end game is to keep athletes in school, especially those who are struggling.

“I believe if we can keep kids connected to athletics, we can keep them connected to school,” Piper said. “Sometimes the reason a student comes to school is because they want to play. That’s something we need to build on.”

Piper also had some unfinished business that needed resolution. Following a few incidents last year, students were required to complete an OSAA sportsmanship course in order to attend games. Students begin this year with a clean slate

“This is my first year here, so we’re starting fresh,” he said. “When we attend a game, it’s really about celebrating the hard work of our athletes. Whether you’re a parent, a classmate, or a community member, we want to build up our athletes, not tear them down.”

He added student leadership groups will help set the tone for fan behavior moving forward.

Piper grew up in Hillsboro, played three sports at Century High School, and was a wide receiver at Lewis & Clark College. He later coached football and basketball at Stayton and McKay high schools, and at Willamette University.

Under his guidance at McKay, the Royal Scots achieved the program’s first playoff berth in more than a decade, and its first winning season in more than 20 years.

Off the field, Piper was the school’s athletic success coordinator, thereby helping student-athletes track academic progress. These experiences, he said, will shape his approach as athletic director.

Brandis Piper is the new athletic director at Central High School, taking over for the retiring Brett Baldwin last month.

“For me, it’s about creating sustainable systems. Coaching will always be something I love, but this job gives me the chance to support every program and every athlete,” he added.

Piper said he is grateful for the support he has received so far from Central’s coaches, the Panther Club, and athletic secretary Denise Wallace, who he called “invaluable during the transition.”

Smileroo-Bicentennial committee plans rolling

The Dallas Smileroo-Bicentennial Committee is currently making preparations for the Sept. 26 to 28 "Smileroo", a fund-raising celebration that died out in the Dallas area several years ago and is now being revived as part of Dallas' Bicentennial celebration.

"The Smileroo is a good chance for organizations to make money through the sale of items in booths," said Curt Lamb, director of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce. "Along with the Smileroo we plan to have a parade and several other events."

A Queen's contest is planned, with the candidates now competing.

Recall election upholds board

A recall action against two Perrydale School Board members went down to overwhelming defeat Monday, Aug. 25.

Residents voted 108 to 24 against recalling William H. McKee and 88 to 43 against the recall of Leroy Gibson.

Petitions had been circulated in July charging the two with failure to provide leadership, resulting in failure of patrons to support the budget and irregularities in the presentation of the budget. One of the biggest complaints centred on the dropping of the school lunch program.

Dragons getting prepared

Dallas High School's head football coach Ron August worked his squad out on the weights during the week of Aug. 18. Monday, Aug. 25, he put his boys in pads where they will remain until Saturday, Sept. 6, at which time they will play their annual Picnic Bowl at 7:30 p.m. on the local gridiron. All that time the team will be divided into "Blacks" and "Whites" and the two squads will go at each other under game conditions.

Board votes on boundary, tuition issue

Boundary changes requests which have given a neighboring school district headaches have prompted the Dallas School District to come up with a way to help avoid similar situations.

The Dallas School Board approved a recommendation Monday night by Superintendent Gary Burton to waive tuition of students who want to transfer into Dallas schools from another district.

The waiver of tuition would happen only under "mutual consent" by both districts involved. In other cases, out-of-district students have to pay tuition while the district in which they lives continues to receive basic board support.

Dallas downtown choice delayed

The drive for selection of a city downtown manager was temporarily stalled last week when the first choice of the Dallas Downtown Development Association pulled out of consideration.

John Bollman, chairman to the DDDA's board of directors, said that an offer was made Aug. 19 to one of two finalists picked by an interviewing committee and interviewed by the board.

The finalist called Friday and said she wouldn't be able to accept the position because of "personal reasons."

Dallas starts title defence versus Tigard

Going into his 16th year as Dallas High's football coach, Ron August isn't about to make any fantastic predictions on how his squad will finish its 1985 campaign.

August has plenty of fire-power left from a team that won the Willamette Valley League title and advanced to the second round of the state AAA playoffs. But he's not ready to collect any trophies yet.

"It's always hard when you have a team that you know will be good, but don't know necessarily if it will put forth the effort to be really good," August said Friday. "That makes the difference in a close game."

Community Achievement

Deputy Brad Patenaude graduates from basic police class

Deputy Brad Patenaude came to the Polk County Sheriff's Office in March to begin his training, then transferred to Oregon Department of Public Safety Standards and Training (DPSST) in April to attend classes related to Oregon laws, crimes versus violations, defensive tactics, emergency vehicle operations, firearms safety and shooting, physical and mental health awareness, and other important topics that will help create a foundation for his career in law enforcement. After four months at the academy, Patenaude graduated and is ready to return to PCSO to complete the rest of his Field Training and Evaluation Program (FTEP). This includes working alongside trainers and being observed, quizzed, and advised for the next few months before being shadowed in the final phase to ensure he can handle calls on his own.

The Monmouth Independence Chamber of Commerce is proud to highlight MINET as the Chamber Member of the Week. MINET, our local fiber-to-the-home provider, was built by the cities of Monmouth and Independence in a successful joint venture. Their initial data offering was 35 mbps, a significant speed at the time. But now, in a broader and faster world, MINET provides Gig Speed for a good price. A truly outstanding characteristic of MINET is their incredible customer service. No long hold-the-phone waits, no robo-chatting, just extremely fast service. MINET's standard of service extends from the office to the field. MINET values its subscribers. Their 4th annual customer appreciation event was held this month and it was fun, wild, and hugely attended. As MINET matured expansion opportunities emerged. Today MINET, once limited to Monmouth-Independence, serves Rickreall, much of Dallas, and is lighting up Falls City. MINET is a fully committed community supporter with outstanding internet and voice services. MINET is a deserving Chamber Member of the Week.

Orozco returns to lead Panthers’ boys soccer program

By LANCE MASTERSON
For The Itemizer-Observer

When Central High School returns to the soccer pitch this fall, it will do so with a familiar face on the sideline.

Joe Orozco has been hired as coach of the varsity boys soccer team after an absence of six years. He is an alumni, having graduated from Central in 1987, and longtime member of the community.

The decision was among the first made by the school’s new athletic director Brandis Piper, who officially took over for Brett Baldwin in July.

“Joe stood out immediately,” Piper said of the hire. “He cares about our student-athletes, communicates transparently, and brings a genuine authenticity that kids can trust. Add in his deep ties to Central, having coached both boys and girls here, led youth programs, and attended the school himself, and it was clear this is where he belongs.”

Orozco last coached the team in 2018, when the squad advanced to the state semifinals. That season capped an earlier eight-year coaching stint that included a conference title in 2017 and multiple playoff appearances on both the boys’ and girls’ sides.

“I think it was the last time we made it to the semifinals,” Orozco said of the 2018 run. “It was a fun season ... Now it’s a different era, different players, and I’m excited to be here again.”

The coach added he emphasizes discipline and accountability, and aims to build the program from the ground up.

“Discipline is what will take us to the next level. Every player has to be accountable. On the field, off the field, and at practice,” he said.

Orozco is straying from a tried and true formula when it comes to conditioning his athletes. No running for running’s sake. Instead, he incorporates ball work and running into nearly every drill.

“We do our conditioning on the field, with cones, speed ladders, and touches on the ball,” he said.

A new coach brings fresh opportunities for the Panthers’ roster, as each player began the season having to prove himself.

“No one gets a spot handed to them, even varsity players,” Orozco said. “You have to earn it, and then you have to keep it.”

An experienced core of seniors is bolstered by talented underclassmen who are expected to compete for playing time.

“I’ve seen them in practice, and they look good,” Orozco said of his youngsters. “Now we’ll see if we can carry that into games.”

The coach sees this year as just a start. Long-range plans include establishing a pipeline of talent, starting at the middle school level.

“We need to start from the roots up,” he said. “If younger kids learn to touch and control the ball earlier, they’ll arrive here a step ahead instead of starting over. That’s how you build a program that sustains success.”

For Orozco, soccer has been a constant in his life for more than three decades. First as a player in California, then as a club and high school coach. He stepped away from coaching initially due to injuries, but family encouragement, and a call from his longtime assistant coach, convinced him to return.

“Soccer has meant a lot to me,” he said. “When kids step on the field, they can forget what’s going on in their lives for a while. Coaching lets me help them grow, not just as players but as people. And even though I never had sons of my own, coaching the boys feels like I have a whole group of them.”

For now the goal is clear, get Central into the postseason.

“I’m not saying we’re going to be the top team. But we can get into the play-ins and playoffs,” Orozco said. “That’s our focus right now. If we stick to our plan and work hard, I think it’s going to be a positive season.”

Any success will come in a conference that’s generally considered one of the state’s best in Class 5A.

“We’re in a tough league,” he said. “There are strong teams out there. But we can compete with everyone.”

The Panthers saw intra-squad action on Aug. 28 during the school’s Red and White Day. They’re at the McMinnville jamboree on Thursday, and then at non-league Hillsboro on Tuesday to open the season.

Other important dates include Sept. 9, the first home match versus Tigard, and Sept. 30, the Mid-Willamette Conference opener at South Albany.

Russell Moreno is the varsity team’s assistant coach; Jorge Figueroa is the junior varsity head coach.
