Rickreall blacksmith shares his enthusiasm for the craft

By DAVID HAYES
I-O Editor

Matt Crandall works for a semi-conductor company crafting tools down to the exacting micron, within the confines of an ultra clean room, requiring the donning a “bunny suit”. But a funny thing happened along the way – he enjoyed getting dirty.

“My son and I started doing blacksmithing about seven years ago after a father-son retreat in Silverton called Camp Canyonview. They did shotgun, archery, parachord, zip line and blacksmithing,” Crandall recalled. “We did it the first time, it was fun. Then the second time it was still fun. Then when we did it a third time, I was like, ‘Okay, now I gotta go buy stuff.’”

He so enjoyed what he learned, he now teachers others the craft of blacksmithing out of his own shop, Crandall Forge. His first attempt at a shop took a little trial and error at his Hillsborough home before moving to Rickreall.

“It’s kinda funny. I had a post vice that was bolted to a wooden leg of an outdoor awning,” Crandall said. “Every time I was hitting on stuff, it would shake the whole house. And my wife was like, ‘You gotta do something different about that.’”

When they moved to Rickreall five years ago he set up a really small blacksmithing shop separate from another woodworking shop.

‘It got along a little too well,’ Crandall said.

So they set up a car port on a concrete slab on the property where the goats were originally hanging out. He moved them out and recreated an old-time looking blacksmith shop to start hosting classes.

While many have been attracted to blacksmithing thanks to shows on television like Forged in Fire, Crandall steers his classes away from knifesmithing and more to the creative side. Crandall set up three forge work stations with the focus of getting kids interested in the forge. Ages 7-15 are free with an adult.

“We try to keep prices reasonable. We try to get people in to swing a hammer for the first time. That’s really our focus. That’s how I found out I enjoyed it,” Crandall said.

The first class of 2026 was a beginners blacksmithing. It attracted back Falls City residents Jason Evans and his son Noah, 13, now in their fourth session with Crandall.

“He got into blacksmithing, it was something he wanted to do, so I started taking classes with him,” Jason said.

Noah’s interest in blacksmithing was simple.

“I get to hit things with heavy metal. I like to make cool looking things,” Noah said.

So far in Crandall’s classes they’ve forged a hook, a heart and a leaf. This week’s project was more advanced - a metal rose.

“He’s not drawn to the knife side of it like his older brother. He likes to make knives when he can,” Jason said. “(Noah’s) wanting to put in the effort to learn other things. He’s wanting to do this to complement his woodworking artwork. That’s the plan.”

If any students express an interest in knifemaking, Crandall steers them toward other regional blacksmiths

Dallas water line project clears hurdle for next phase

By DAVID HAYES
I-O Editor

In its efforts to decommission 1940s era concrete cylinder pipes that carries drinking water, the city of Dallas has received a green light from the state to move forward with phase two.

“We certainly got our money’s worth from this 1940s pipe, that was the main transmission line down to town,” said Jake Dyer, assistant Public Works director.

On Dec. 30, in a press release from the state, the Oregon Health Authority - Drinking Water Services determined that the proposed drinking water project “Ash Street Water Transmission Pipeline” for the city of Dallas conforms to the criteria in statute and in environmental review process guidance.

Dyer said the city completed phase one of the pipeline replacement last year, using “in house” manpower from Public Works to replace 3,700 feet of 16-inch line from the finished water reservoir down the southwest end of Clay Street. The second phase looks to replace another 2,700 feet that will cross Ash and Fairview streets with the new standard of ductal iron pipes.

Dyer said the city will look to send this second phase out to contractor bids due to the complexity of the project crossing several intersections and utilities.

“The project is slated to go out to bid in the first part of the new year and break ground in the spring,” Dyer said.

He added the project will not impact traffic as badly as phase one

Polk Flea Market thrives with new, legacy vendors

By DAVID HAYES
I-O Editor

It was a new year for the Polk Flea Market, now in its 56th year on the first Sunday of every month at the Polk County Fairgrounds. But many of the vendors do their best to ensure shoppers are not limited to the same old stuff.

Rick and Chris Borchers have been coming to the Polk Flea Market out of Salem for over a decade.

“I like the venue. I’ve made it my own. I’ve started right here,” Rick said, indicating the table in front of him. “And now I’ve got this whole end of the building (sweeping an arm around the side hallway of the main building). We’re getting a better crowd every time here.”

Anticipation keeps the Borchers and their regulars coming back now for a decade.

“We have regular customers who come back every month because we never have the same stuff two times in a row,” Chris said.

Rick, who was “born into it” after working for his folks’ auction business for many years, added their inventory stays mainly in the vintage and collectible stuff.

“But we’re not beyond bringing something else. Because it’s an open market for the kind of stuff you can sell in here. Some places restrict you to just antiques or whatever. It’s kind of a wide open space here,” he said.

And that’s one of the keys to Polk’s success as a flea market, according to manager Deb Thomas. She’s seen many established flea markets come and go in Oregon since she took over Polk County’s in 2000. One of the reasons for their demise, she said, is they went away from what worked.

“Some of the other flea markets tried to specialize, like antiques only or radio shows only. I’ve never

Give blood or platelets in January, earn a chance to win Super Bowl tickets

By AMERICAN RED CROSS

The American Red Cross is teetering on a blood shortage this winter, which could lead to a disruption in lifesaving care. Donors are urged to make an appointment to give blood or platelets now.

The Red Cross blood supply is under pressure following a busy holiday season when winter weather and packed schedules made it even tougher to ensure hospitals have the blood products needed for critical care. Without immediate action, doctors may have to make difficult decisions about which patients receive blood transfusions and who will need to wait. Donors with types O, A negative and B negative blood are especially needed now.

For the seventh year, the Red Cross and the National Football League are partnering in January for National Blood Donor Month to urge individuals to kick off 2026 with a blood donation. As a thank-you to donors for helping address the need for blood during the critical post-holiday time, those donate in January will be automatically entered for a chance to win an exciting Super Bowl LX giveaway. The winner and guest will get to enjoy Super Bowl LX in Santa Clara, California, access to day-of in-stadium pregame activities, tickets to the official Super Bowl Experience, round-trip airfare, three-night hotel accommodations (Feb. 6-9), plus a $1,000 gift card for expenses. For full details, visit RedCrossBlood.org/SuperBowl.

Don't wait – make an appointment to give blood or platelets now by visiting RedCrossBlood.org, downloading the Red Cross Blood Donor App or calling 1-800-RED CROSS.

Join a lifesaving team

The Red Cross and Pro Football Champion and blood donor Saquon Barkley are teaming up to remind donors that the best offense against a winter blood shortage is making and keeping blood donation appointments. The blood supply can drop quickly – now's the time to get in the game and give blood or platelets.

"I gave blood once in college and that was the only time I had ever been asked to give, until the Red Cross reached out this fall," said Barkley. "It was a no-brainer for me to give again. It only takes about an hour and once you realize in that short amount of time how much help it can bring

– it's a beautiful thing."

Tickets on sale now for Pentacle Theatre’s ‘You Can’t Take it with You’

Pentacle Theatre’s next production “You Can’t Take it with You” hits the stage Jan. 30 through Feb. 21 at 324 52nd Ave. NW.

This Pulitzer Prize-winning comedy by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart has been performed consistently since its Broadway debut in 1936 in professional theatres, colleges, community theatres, high schools, and multiple Broadway revivals — and yet it is, ironically, more timely today than ever! Most recently revived on Broadway in 2014-15 in a Tony Award-winning production with James Earl Jones, Rose Byrne and Annaleigh Ashford! A hilarious, beautifully written play about family, love and acceptance of people’s quirks.

The story revolves around Grandpa, as Martin is more commonly known, the paterfamilias of a large and extended family of charming eccentrics. His granddaughter, Alice, is an attractive and loving young woman who is still embarrassed by her family’s idiosyncrasies. When Alice falls for Tony, a handsome scion of Wall Street, she fears that their two families — so unlike in manner, politics and finances — will never come together. But why be obsessed by money? After all, you can’t take it with you.

You Can’t Take It With You opened on Broadway at the Booth Theatre on December 14, 1936. A smash hit, the show ran for 838 performances and returned to Broadway five times, most recently in 2014. That production, directed by Scott Ellis, earned the Tony Award for Best Featured Actress for Annaleigh Ashford as Essie.

Oregon updates online voter registration form

As of Dec. 30, all eligible Oregonians will be able to register to vote through a secure, online form by submitting the last four digits of their Social Security number and their valid signature — just like they would on a paper voter registration form.

Previously, only eligible Oregonians with a driver’s license number could register to vote online. This update to Oregon’s online voter registration form was required by House Bill 4133 (2022) with a deadline of Jan. 1, 2026.

“Everything in our modern society is evolving to be more convenient — our elections should do the same. Every citizen should get the same opportunity to hold their government accountable at the ballot box,” said Oregon Secretary of State Tobias Read. “This update will keep online voter registration secure and accurate while making it more available to eligible voters.”

This online form for voter registration maintains the security of Oregon’s voter registration system while expanding access. As they would with paper voter registration forms, elections officials will carefully verify the Social Security numbers and signatures submitted before formally registering citizens to vote.

In Oregon, you must be a U.S. citizen, a resident of the state, and at least 16 years old to register to vote. Oregonians must be 18 years old by Election Day to cast a ballot.

For more information, go to www.OregonVotes.gov.

OBITUARIES

Steven Frank Moser
June 20, 1958 - Dec. 19, 2025

Steven Frank Moser, 67, of Independence, Oregon, passed away on December 19, 2025. A lifelong resident of Polk County, Steve's legacy is defined by a deep commitment to public safety and selfless community service.

Steve was the son of David and Eileen Moser. He graduated from Dallas High School and attended Chemeketa Community College. There, he laid the foundation for a distinguished career as a firefighter-paramedic for the Portland Fire Bureau, eventually retiring with honor. Even in retirement, his heart remained tied to service; he continued to volunteer with Polk County Fire District #1, retiring as a Division Chief.

On January 19, 1980, Steve married the love of his life, Liane Agena, in Independence. Their home became a sanctuary for volunteers who might describe them as big brother and big sister to many of the young firefighters. Together, Steve and Liane built a large, vibrant family. He is survived by Liane and his children, Janna, Kristie, Walter, Andrew (Justine), Sandy, and Joyce (Khristian).

Steve's varied roles in civic leadership were as expansive as the value he created for his community. He served as a Central School District Board member and was a longtime Scoutmaster for Troop 38. He was an active member of the Central Lions Club, a past District Governor for Oregon Lions District 36R, and a Trustee of the Oregon Lions Sight and Hearing Foundation. He was also a Trustee at Christ's Church and a Meals on Wheels volunteer. His dedication earned him the prestigious Lion's International President's Medal of Achievement and, with his family, the Monmouth-Independence First Citizen Award - First Family. Steve taught us that true leadership isn't about the medals you wear but the lives you touch. Outside of his leadership roles, Steven found joy in the simple pleasures of life: swimming, camping, and bowling.

In lieu of flowers, please consider donating to Central Lions Club or Boy Scout Troop 38.

A graveside service will be at 2 p.m. Friday, Jan. 9, 2026, at Christ's Church in Monmouth, Oregon.

How to use mindfulness in your daily living

By STAN POPOVICH

Mindfulness is the practice of becoming more fully aware of the present moment rather than dwelling in the past, projecting into the future, or what's going on around us. It involves a heightened awareness of sensory stimuli such as our breathing and being "in the now."

Practicing mindfulness involves breathing methods, guided imagery, and other practices to relax the body and mind.

Find a comfortable place

You'll want to find a comfortable seat in a relaxed and stress-free environment. Sit on a couch or chair with your feet on the ground. Allow your head and shoulders to rest comfortably; place your hands on the tops of your legs with upper arms at your side. Put your upper arms parallel to your upper body. Rest the palms of your hands on your legs.

Focus on your breathing

Close your eyes, take a deep breath, and relax. Keep your attention on the sensation of the inhale and exhale of your breath. Focus on the air moving through your nose or the rising and falling of your stomach and chest.

Reduce wandering thoughts: It's normal to have wandering thoughts or distractions, so don't judge yourself if you start becoming distracted. Instead of wrestling with your thoughts, let them pass by, without focusing on any thought. Thoughts will try to pull your attention away from your breathing. Notice them, but don't pass judgment. Gently return your focus to your breath.

Tune into your senses

Sometimes, when we are stressed, focusing on what's happening right in front of us can be a challenge in and of itself. Our minds are drawn to thinking about the future and all the bad things that are or could happen.

Live in the present

Focus your attention on what is happening right now, actively engaging with the current moment instead of dwelling on the past or worrying about the future.

Focus on one thing at a time

Multitasking can leave you feeling distracted, so concentrate on one task with your full attention.

Pay attention

It's hard to slow down and notice things in a busy world. Take the time to experience your environment with all your senses including touch, sound, sight, smell, and taste. For example, when you eat a favorite food, take the time to smell, taste, and enjoy it.

Enjoy the small moments

Small moments in our lives include those that we do not typically notice and those we take for granted. A small moment may be having a cup of coffee or a cool glass of water, spending a moment with a child or pet, or performing any everyday activity that goes by without our attention. Enjoyment, peace, and serenity in life happen in the small moments.

Create a safe place

Similar to guided imagery, create a place that is safe and comfortable. It may be your favorite room or a cabin in the woods. Use your senses to fully enter the safe place. Stay in this place for a while and go there whenever you need to soothe and calm yourself.

Go outside

Spending time outdoors is a great way to live in the moment and observe the sights, sounds, and sensations around you.

Central High School's roofs need improving

As students of Central High School, we put heavy emphasis on our education, safety, and happiness. Many students have brought concerns forward regarding the state of our school roofs.

The school contains several areas in which leaks are now visible, and buckets are placed in school halls to contain falling rain water. These leaks are also becoming increasingly problematic, especially in classrooms, our mat room, and our newly built auditorium. In our auditorium, which cost several million dollars to construct, these leaks jeopardize electrical systems and wiring, and are likely to lead to far greater costs in the future.

Many students are frustrated with the worsening condition of this critical feature of our school, especially in contrast to other priorities at the moment. Staff and students alike have expressed sentiment that this problem, unresolved, hurts our school environment, damages property, and damages school spirit. Given that Bond Measure #27-143 failed to pass in 2024, we take it that a specific focus on the structure of Central from our district, and a greater acknowledgment of the problem would be prudent in finding a solution.

We envision a more positive learning and educational environment within Central, and see this course of action as best for not only the future of our school, but also in the best interest of our community and its resources in the long-term. For students, the functionality of our school, and the priorities of our community, we ask that our district again pays more attention to this matter.

We believe the current state of priorities is unsustainable, and will lead to mounting costs in coming years if not addressed now.

Trump policies bad for climate change

As a retired meteorologist, I remain interested in climate change and routinely check climate data to see how global warming is progressing.

The latest data confirms that serious global warming began in the mid-1970s, rose steadily at about 0.3 degrees Fahrenheit per decade for 40 years, and then accelerated to about 0.6 degrees Fahrenheit per decade in the mid-2010s.

Note that the time at which global warming accelerated correlates well with the time Donald Trump became President and changed America's global warming policies. Now that he is President again and has double-downed on his policies, will the rate of global warming double again? The risk is real.

Lady Dragons’ offense extinguished in league opener

By LANCE MASTERSON
For The Itemizer-Observer

Dallas had no answer for Silverton on Friday, falling 65-28 in the Mid-Willamette Conference opener for both teams.

“Silverton’s a tough opponent,” said Drew Richman, the Dragon’s head coach. “They play great defense, and we struggled to find shots tonight. When we did get some perimeter looks, we passed up shots that I want us to start taking in the future... We have great shooters that have to get their confidence up and stop passing up open looks.”

Alivia Webster provided the Dragons with an offensive spark in the fourth quarter.

Webster “is a talented sopho-more that provides a scoring and ball-handling punch off the bench for us,” Richman said. “Her two threes were awesome, and she has more in her.”

Harlow Nelson continued her strong start to the season, with Richman ranking her as one of the top guards in the state. In addition to her defensive work, Nelson finished with eight points, eight rebounds, four assists, three steals and two blocks.

The coach praised his team’s defensive effort and composure, noting consistency on that end of the court, along with an ability to make adjustments.

Still, there’s work to do.

“We’ve got to limit transition scores better,” Richman said.

Dallas gave up 18 transition points in the first half, but only two in the second half.

Finishing defensive possessions is another priority, Richman noted.

“We did a great job Friday getting an initial miss, but allowed offensive rebounds that led to second chance scores too often.”

Two of Silverton’s big guns, Allie Mansur and Karlee Martirano, were held to five and 12 points, respectively. Only two of Martirano’s points came in the second half.

For now, focus will remain on continued growth.

“I’m proud of how hard they play,” Richman said after the game. “This isn’t going to break us. We’re learning how to play through physi-cality, and we’re getting better.”

Next for the Dragons (2-5 overall, 0-1 in league) are Lebanon on Friday and visiting Central on Tuesday.

Both games begin at 5:30 p.m.

The Dragons were at Corvallis on Jan. 6. Results were unavailable before press time.

SILVERTON TRIPS DALLAS BOYS IN LEAGUE OPENER, 62-51

Silverton overcame the Dragons’ defensive pressure to win the boys Mid-Willamette conference opener Friday, 62-51.

Dallas head coach Alex King credited his defense with keeping the Foxes within striking distance most of the game. Silverton would go on a run only to have Dallas reel them.

The home team played according to script, at least defensively.

“I think just coming out and trying to make it ugly and uncomfortable for them,” King said of his team’s strategy. “Teams hate playing here. I want it not to be a fun place to play when you’re the away team.”

Even after Silverton (1-0 in league, 3-3 overall) gained control, the Dragons’ defensive effort didn’t waiver.

“I’m just trying not to get the kids to quit,” King said. And on Friday, “they didn’t stop.”

Especially under the basket, where Dallas defenders provided their fans with a blocking clinic.

Lukas Lawless led Dallas with 25 points. Nate Cunningham added 11.

The Dragons (2-4, 0-1) are at Lebanon on Friday and host Central on Tuesday. Both games begin at 7 p.m.

Dallas was at Corvallis on Jan. 6. Results from this game were unavailable at deadline.

Mountaineers are ‘exactly where we need to be’

By LANCE MASTERSON
For The Itemizer-Observer

Youth, patience and consis-tency are the buzzwords this season for a very young Falls City varsity boys basketball team.

Tanner Stilligan is the only senior on the Mountaineers’ roster. So focus is on develop-ing something sustainable for the future. And this something begins at the top.

“When I took over, there was no consistency,” coach Ken Graham said. “Coaches were turning over every year, and kids didn’t know what to expect. They needed stability.”

They have it now. In Graham, players have some-one with ties to the school. His father and sons attended Falls City and he coached middle school hoops before moving up to the high school team two years ago.

FCHS has two non-league victories this season, with both wins coming against Siletz. Their win total already exceeds last year’s.

“We didn’t win a game last year. Getting those first wins this year was huge for confidence,” the coach added. “(They) mark a turning point. Players believe their improve-ment is real and attainable.”

Avery Burgess agrees.

“It’s a relief,” the junior said of the wins. “We’ve had a lot more close games this year, and a couple more wins, so it’s been nice.”

In addition to Stilligan, the Mountaineers’ roster includes six freshmen, one sophomore and four juniors. That’s 11 of 12 players who could return next season. Many fresh-men and sophomores were coached by Graham in middle school. Though young, they know their coach and his philosophy.

“We’re not changing offenses every year. We’re not changing defenses,” Graham added. “The kids understand what we’re doing. They’re learning the game, not just memorizing plays.”

Still, the learning curve is steep when making the jump from middle school to varsity basketball. With no JV program, younger players are thrown into the varsity baptismal immediately.

“Speed is the biggest adjust-ment” they face, Graham said. “Middle school doesn’t pre-pare you for how fast varsity basketball is.”

To help ease that transition, Graham’s goal is to start a junior varsity program. A large freshmen class is expected next year. So the school could have the numbers to field a JV squad fairly soon.

For now, the youth move-ment brings with it energy and optimism. Freshmen Trent Waterman, the team’s primary ball handler, Brayden Graham, Karsen Stamy, David Fournier and Jack Evans are already getting key minutes.

Leading the team is Stilligan, who serves as both captain and vocal leader despite being a relative new-comer to varsity basketball himself.

“He’s learning right along with everyone else,” the coach said. “But Tanner is doing a great job keeping the guys pointed in the right direction.”

Graham added playing time is earned through effort, ability and academic responsibility.

“If they’re going to be stu-dent-athletes, the student part comes first,” he said.

As league play approaches, expectations remain realistic. Playoff talk is premature, Graham said, but noted there is reason for optimism.

“I think they’re capable. I just don’t know if they know it yet,” Graham “We’re building, and given how young this group is, we’re exactly where we need to be.”

With a young core gaining much needed experience, a foundation is being set that could shape the program’s direction for years to come. Burgess wants his teammates to not lose sight of this bigger picture.

“Just a few more wins,” Burgess said of his goals for the season. “And making sure everyone stays focused and understands we’re building toward something.... Our goal is to get better, to become the best we can.”

Falls City opened league play against St. Paul on Jan. 6. They’re at Chemawa on Thursday, 7 p.m.

Pirates ready to mimic last year’s postseason run

By LANCE MASTERSON
For The Itemizer-Observer

The Perrydale varsity boys basketball team finds itself in a spot that looks a lot like last year – young, bat-tle-tested and still searching for the rhythm that will carry them through league play – and hopefully into the post-season, again.

“We work hard, and that’s a very good trait to have,” Pirates coach Brian Domes said. “I thought we might be a little further along, but we’ve played a tougher pre-season schedule, and that’s going to help us as we get to league play.”

Perrydale’s roster is heavy on juniors, along with a handful of sophomores and freshmen seeing varsity minutes. Malakai Stephen is the only returning senior who logged significant var-sity minutes last season. The team’s other senior, Sam Stalnaker, continues to work back from injury.

Given its inexperience, this is a squad that is still learn-ing how to close out games. It’s a learning curve that mir-rors last season, when a soph-omore-heavy roster found its footing late, pushed through the district tournament, and earned a ticket to the state playoffs.

“That’s the goal every year,” Domes said. “We made it last year, and that’s our goal again this year. It’s going to be a challenge. But these kids are ready to step up.”

Defense remains the pro-gram’s strength. While scor-ing efficiency has proven elu-sive, Perrydale has remained competitive by protecting its basket.

“My philosophy is that we have to be tough defensively. Because defense keeps you in games,” the coach said. “We’ve been focusing on fundamentals. Now, we’ll start putting in more of the X’s and O’s to see where we can exploit other teams.”

The Pirates also benefit from a deeper rotation. After leaning on just six players last season, Perrydale now plays eight regularly, with talented younger players knocking on the door.

Junior Braydon Leslie, a returnee from last year’s playoff team, sees growth and potential.

“We’re more aggressive than we were last year. We used to be really three-point heavy, and now we’re mov-ing the ball better,” Leslie said. “We’re not really an offensive team, so defense is what we need to step up.”

The junior credits last season’s late surge to chem-istry and belief – qualities he thinks are building in this year’s edition.

“We wanted to get our only senior (Holden Williams) farther than we thought we could last year,” he said. “We worked hard, and it paid off. I definitely see that same thing happening again.”

League play figures to be balanced, giving Perrydale opportunities to compete nightly.

“I think on any given night we can compete, and win, if we play the right way,” Domes said. “That’s exciting.”

Lewis cited St. Paul and C.S. Lewis – the team Perrydale beat last year to make state – as league cham-pion favorites.

Continued success for the program looks promising. Perrydale has strong partic-ipation at every grade level, with full teams from elemen-tary school up through high school. It’s a pipeline the coaching staff believes will pay dividends.

For now, the focus is simple. Trust the process. Defend. Let the season unfold. Just as it did a year ago.

“We didn’t start the way we wanted then either,” Leslie said. “By the end of this season, I think we’ll catch fire.”

Perrydale is 2-6 overall. The league opener was Jan. 6 at Livingstone Adventist Academy. Results were unavailable before press time.

Panthers gear up for Oregon Classic Qualifier

The Panther Kids team sent 17 wrestlers to Turner at the Landyn Adams memorial tournament on Jan. 3. It is one of the toughest tourna-ments this season so far.

“Some teams come from the Tacoma, Washington, area for this tournament, along with others that we have not faced yet,” said head coach Vidal Peña. “That’s great because today we start the path to the Oregon Classic (regional championships) and the state championship happening this month in Redmond.”

“The more tough com-petition we face now, only helps us get better for that,” Coach Nic Granum added. “I think we have about 9-10 kids that could place high at state. They just really need to just ‘show up’ (wrestle with purpose).”

The Panthers have a week to make that happen when they travel to North Bend for the Classic qualifier. The top three in each weight class and age group will then travel the following week to Redmond for the Oregon Wrestling Classic.

Placing first in Turner was Logan Caraballo

Second places went to Isaac Vidal and Dominic Graham

Third place finishers were Wesley Butler, Matthew Mesdag, Brody Bauer, JoSiah Evans, and Cohen & Easton Fugate.

Polk officials fear spread of hepatitis

Polk County health officials feared Monday a hepatitis outbreak in the Monmouth-Independence area late last week will be spreading throughout the county unless quickly brought under control.

Marti Sohn, county health director, said that eight cases of Type A hepatitis had been confirmed and 19 other cases suspected.

Oregon Bank plans new quarters

The Oregon Bank's Dallas branch will be occupying brand new quarters by the end of 1986 if all goes according to plan, bank officials says.

"Dallas has shown its commitment to The Oregon Bank and we appreciate it," senior vice president and marketing director Phil Guay told the I-O. "This will be the first new branch facility we've built in years."

DHS cagers rebound past Bulldogs

They call it a "turnaround." That's what Dallas High's boys basketball team accomplished in just 24 hours last weekend. The Dragons were soundly beaten by Clackamas on Friday, 64-39, but they came back to knock off North Bend the next night, 54-50.

That left Dallas with a 2-6 mark going into games at home against Evergreen, Wash., on Friday, at Milwaukie on Saturday, and at home in the first Willamette Valley League contest on Tuesday.

Council, Chamber take stand against mass transit system

Members of the Dallas City Council voted Monday night to go on record as opposed to the proposed Marion-Polk Mass Transit District, which will be voted on by Marion and Polk residents Jan. 13.

The council took the action after deciding the proposal is too vague in the language which describes how the system would be financed. They feel Dallas residents should not have to support what could be primarily a Salem system.

Circuit judge decides for Polk board

Circuit Court Judge Darrell Williams ruled in favor of the Polk County Commissioners on Dec. 29 decision involving the so-called Parker Road case in southern Polk County.

The Parker Road case involves a 116-acre farm owned by four families three miles south of Monmouth. The four were issued septic tank permits last fall, allowing them to move onto the land.

A petition against the permits was filed in circuit court by 21 couples and two individuals against the county commissioners and its members.

Dallas downs Olys - start CVL season

The Central Valley League Dallas Dragons completed their six game non-league season Friday evening with a decisive 64-41 burning of the Valley League's Sprague Olympians.

Dallas finished the half dozen "warm-up" games with a 2-4 record.

FLASHBACK

This week's Flashback is from Wednesday, Dec. 25, 1975: BIDENTENNIAL CONGRATULATIONS - Dallas Area Chamber of Commerce secretary Curt Lamb (left) presents Christine Palmer with an early American flag set as congratulations for having the first baby of the new year. The seven-pound, seven ounces first Bicentennial baby, Rebekah Leslie, was born Jan. 4. Christine and her husband, Stephen, will receive gifts donated from several Dallas merchants. # MARKET curated," Thomas explained. "If someone wants in and what they're selling is legal, it's good enough I let them in. If they're not making money, they will drop out. If they're making money, they'll stick around."

Thomas has more than 70 legacy vendors, many in their 70s and 80s, who participated in the flea market for years before she took over. This weekend, she had 170 total vendors that attracted an early estimate of between 1,000 to 1,400 shoppers and pickers.

Thomas is proud that Polk County's flea market still thrives after so many others have gone by the wayside - such as the one at the Salem Fairgrounds that failed for a variety of reasons and one in Albany that never got off the ground. Polk County's even managed to stay open during and after the pandemic that shuttered all the others.

"The county commissioners saw us as an essential business, not as a fairgrounds event," Thomas said, explaining why they were able to keep the main building open when COVID struck. "We were open from July 2019 through COVID, the only fairgrounds from the Canadian border to San Diego that managed to keep open."

When she took over as manager, the market had 80 vendors. That number shrank by social distancing requirements during the pandemic. But applications to participate has exploded since, as the market has expanded out of the main building to buildings B and C as well.

One reason Polk's market has continued to thrive is Thomas still only charges shoppers $1 admission (while others have increased) and vendors $50 a space, or $20-$30 a table.

She also credits the Fairground Board of Directors for accommodating the flea market in facility rental.

"Up until recently, the gun show was the only one (event) that brought in more money than we did," Thomas said. "The fairgrounds Board is cognizant of what we can and cannot pay."

The board is raising many of their fees this spring to help pay for rising costs. Thomas expects that increase will be a part of her negotiations when her contract is up for renewal this year.

Another key to their success has been attracting new and younger vendors to attract the next generation of shoppers, Thomas said.

"My idea was to expand the demographic of buyers and vendors. I looked around, and we now have one of the biggest record resellers in the region (David Collins out of Monmouth), premier game sellers ... and vintage clothing is a big thing now," Thomas said. "We've expanded to be younger, as it also reflects what tastes change over time."

The final factor that has kept their doors open all these years are the vendors themselves.

"They're vibrant and honest," Thomas said. "One time, we had a shopper who dropped $200 on the floor. A vendor picked it up and turned it into us."

Checking security cameras, they eventually were able to return the money to the original owner.

Thomas added many of her vendors also keep coming back simply because they can't stop. It's either in their blood or it's a side gig that supplements a meager income.

Like Deb Eozmic, of Keizer. She's been vending at Polk County for more than 30 years now.

"It's not the location. We're like a family in here. It's really social. If we can make some money while we're doing it, it's great," Eozmic said.

She likes to stock her tables with primitive inventory, anything old that she and her husband find while working for four different auctioneers in the region.

"This is a hobby. I couldn't make a living doing this. Too much work. It's a lot of work. But it's a fun hobby," Eozmic said. "We've done it for so many years, it's hard to get out of it. You enjoy it. It's hard to quit. So, I'll probably do it until the day I die."

who specialize in them.

“I don’t have any interests competing in that market. Our focus is decorative. Getting people in swinging a hammer for the first time, especially kids,” he said.

Since his first class in August, Crandall Forge has had 148 students with another 12 at their first class of the new year.

“I only offer classes on Thursdays and Fridays. To get 150 people to come out on a Friday, middle of the day or evening, is a great response,” Crandall said.

Hanging from the shop’s walls are some of the first items that Crandall himself forged, from swords to antlers and many axes.

“I like making axes. I make something to the point I’m proficient at it then I move on. Always something new,” he added.

Such as including new classes with organizations like Polk County

Storyboards display crafting projects for students to easily reference on the walls of Crandall Forge.

4-H, which has their second session with Crandall Forge in February.

“We did horseshoe hearts class for 4-H. I like 4-H. That was good,” he said. “It is a little different working with all kids. That’s where I rely on 4-H helpers to kind of keep an eye on things.”

Crandall also decided to keep all propane gas forges for the sake of easing the learning experience.

“I like the coal forge, but it gets really, really hot in one specific location. What happens is if you forget about it, it will melt your steel,” Crandall explained “You have to maintain it, keep up on it. Tend it. Keep air flowing and keep fresh coal on it. So there’s a lot of work there. Propane is nice because it heats up the whole piece at once. Especially for a beginning trying to manage a coal forge and a project like this is really difficult.”

So far he’s only had one student burn her finger she moved to flip a hot piece of metal back up that was slipping off the anvil.

“After getting over the initial shock, everyone else was encouraging, ‘You got this. Don’t do that again.’ It’s really fun to see the families come together. The grandmas and grandkids. Fathers and sons. We get all ages. As young as 7 and we had an 85 year old lady who came out and did a fire poker. I’m shocked how diverse the groups are,” he said.

Of his 1,200 followers on Facebook, Crandall said 75% are women.

“That shocked me. ‘Cause like, you would think blacksmithing is this hands-on, manly activity. It was women who are incredibly thoughtful. They’re looking for gifts for their men. Things to do as a family. I’m just shocked,” Crandall added.

He tries to offer classes weekly and is open to feedback to add structure and continue to grow.

which closed one lane of travel on Ellendale for several months.

“It will be pretty localized closures, one or two blocks at a time. This permit that we’ve got through ODOT has the biggest impact crossing the highway at Fairview and Ash,” he said.

Dyer said the city received a loan from the Business Oregon Safe Drinking Water Revolving Loan Fund to help pay for phase two, thus the express environmental impact scrutiny.

“The environmental impact will be very low, with open cut trenching like in the previously disturbed areas along the street,” he said.

He added the project path crosses the “county’s yard” and requires teaming with the county administration to help plan and execute phase two.

Dyer expects phase two to last three to six months.
