

Moving ahead or left behind

In the average U.S. state, just over 15 percent of residents live in distressed communities. In South Carolina, 30 percent do, according to a national study of economic indicators.

