Cracking up to comedian Lewis Black

We get stats every month about our most viewed stories online, and every month, food stories rise to the top. So this week, we’re featuring the ever-delicious chimichanga, and Kayley has a few places you can find them in Rochester.

If that’s not enough food for you, Renee has a rundown of food classes you can take to learn to make your own delicious eats at home.

Speaking of running, now is the time to register for summer races before the prices increase, and Craig has a list of some of the more popular running events in town.

But wait, there’s more! Comedian Lewis Black is in town, Absolute Theatre opens their next show, and Pine Island and Lanesboro are both creating community around theater stages.

Phew, I’m getting hungry just thinking about all of it. Chimichanga, anyone?

Lauren Gunderson is the most-produced playwright of the 2017-18 theater season. Commonweal Theatre is doing its part to keep the streak alive by producing her play “Silent Sky.” It tells the true story of Henrietta Leavitt, a scientist who lived back when women couldn’t even vote, and a team of women “computers.” Even without access to the telescopes at the Harvard Observatory, she and her colleagues discovered things about the universe that are still critical today. Fans of the movie “Hidden Figures” will find plenty to like here.

This show is the first of the Commonweal’s 30th anniversary, and there are many special events taking place this weekend to celebrate. Check their website for more information.

what you’re serving this spring.

Rochester Community Education has a plethora of meal planning classes coming around the bend. So race to check out their program guide online, and zero in on Simple Salads by registered dietitian Kathy Hamlin. “I want people to know salads can be fun,” she says. “They don’t have to be boring. You can make a full meal out of them too, a whole entrée, by adding meat.” Among Hamlin’s simple salad armed sessions during this April 24 class at 5:30 pm, at Fyffes South 100 Crossroads Dr.

At 825 Live (225 St John’s Hills Dr NW, Rochester), food-related classes are in full swing. Samantha Erickson, mission director at Rochester VFW Club, which is held monthly. March featured “Taste of Chicago,” April is “Taste of Canada,” and May will be “Taste of Louisiana.” “These sessions have been popular,” Erickson says. “We have had to cap registration.

One thing you’ll find: the CookBOOK community center’s spring program guide. Interested cooks to cast their eyes on the featured “Taste of Chicago,” April is “Taste of Canada,” and May will be “Taste of Louisiana.” “These sessions have been popular,” Erickson says. “We have had to cap registration. because we want everyone to be in the kitchen and it fills up pretty quickly,” Erickson says. Over at Natural Grocers (1507 Greenview Dr. SW, Rochester), you have to get in line for some of their food offerings. Nutritional health coach Jordan Tredinnick says the May 5 “The Ketogenic Diet” has been gaining popularity on Facebook: more than 200 people are interested in attending – up from an average response of 15-20 people.

Prior to the Keto Diet event, Natural Grocers are free, one-on-one nutritional health coaching sessions offered by Tredinnick.

“Last year the Keto Diet event, Natural Grocers hosted an April 7 class at 12 m. called ‘Feed Your Brain’! Here you can learn about foods that help support memory, concentration, mood, and eliminate brain fog. This nutrition seminar and cooking demo will have you ready to incorporate these foods into brain friendly meals. Tredinnick says, so bring your cooking & glasses!"

A perfect pair of Olde Pine concerts

by John Sievers

As you ping for live music? The Olde Pine Theatre might be just the spot. The historic theater will host a pair of concerts this weekend.

This weekend, Bruce Bungum and Dougloch will play classic folk, rock, and country to kick off the spring season. They are partnering with other area organizations like the Pine Area People for Monroe Crossing. Schlegel’s band and Longshot will play classic folk, rock, and country to kick things off.

This past year, the theater has hosted everything from live plays to magicians. Currently, Ted and Tricia are working to develop the area’s largest haunted attraction. The couple also owns Willow’s Keep Farm advisors at the University of Minnesota. "What Tricia and I enjoy most about our jobs is seeing people enjoying themselves and leaving with a smile," says Ted. "It is also exciting to be a part of Pine Island’s community and help build organizations like the Pine Area People for Monroe Crossing and the Van Horn Public Library are paying their way to develop more programs.

For Ted and Tricia, the hardest part about running the theater is finding quality performers. Tricia works as a medical secretary at the Mayo Clinic, and Ted is an academic advisor at the University of Minnesota. They are working together to bring "back to the community opportunities" to the Pine Island area. They are partnering with other area businesses like Shaw’s Café and the Pine Island Sports Bar to offer drink and food packages and to keep groups supportive of the Pine Area People for Monroe Crossing and the Van Horn Public.

They say that the community together as a whole has come together to support the Pine Island area. "They have found a real success story in this area," they say. "They bring the community together... and keep the magic and spirit of these small towns alive." She is Janell by Kenny Wilson on steel guitar, Pete Gruber on banjo, and Heidi Lyon on harp. Joe Hiey, the musician from Cabin Fever who organized the split bill with Splugel, first learned about the Olde Pine Theatre when he attended an old-time radio show there this past winter. "It’s a nice package. They had a hard and great acoustic. I fell in love with the place," he says. The couple has also hired some notable local shows including opening for Vernon Singing. Splugel’s hand and Cabin Fever plan to join forces at the end of the night to play some country classics.

This weekend, Bruce Bungum will front Longshot for the Friday night show. He will be backed by Becky Schlegel Band and Cabin Fever who organized the split bill with Splugel, first learned about the Olde Pine Theatre when he attended an old-time radio show there this past winter. "I get to go onstage and yell"

Interview by 507 MAGAZINE

Hey Lewis, How's it going? It's always a treat to wake up and turn on the news.

Yeah, we've got a couple screens in the newsroom blaring us at all day. It's been quite a … I just continue to exhaust me. In our dedication to accomplish nothing, we find new and better ways to do this.

You're coming to Rochester to give us all a reprieve from that onslaught, though. What can we expect?

Just a happy-go-lucky kind of act that I've been doing for years. Really sweet, sunny disposition. I talk about socialized medicine, because I've been through it. I was hospitalized in Ireland, so I actually have experienced what it's like when you go into this type of situation as opposed to the way we do it. So I talk about that. I talk about a couple of things that really occurred ... because, opposed to the way we do it. So I talk about that. I talk about a couple of things that really occurred ... because, sometimes reality is a better way to look at reality than coming up with a joke about reality, because the reality we're living through is, at times, beyond satire.

We've got a couple screens in the newsroom blaring us at all day. It's beyond belief. … It just continues to exhaust me. In our dedication to accomplish nothing, we find new and better ways to do this.

Where did your interest in talking about politics come from?

I wanted to write plays, which is what I did, and then ended up switching to this because people seemed to respond to it, and it was a way that I could write stuff and get it done immediately. … I decided my comedy is always what makes me angry and frustrated, and what makes me angry and frustrated is politics. It's more about what the effect of these politics are on us. It's not the politicians themselves.

I think anger is a really prevalent emotion that people walk around with all the time. How are your rants so eloquent?

It's going. It's always a treat to wake up and turn on the news.

How are your rants so eloquent?

Part of it is that I'm lucky because I get to go out every night and perfect it. So I do it one way one night and the next night I try it another way and the next night I try it another way.

Do you ever worry that you marinate in discontent too much?

That's the way I'm funny. When I try to find other ways to express anger and rage, which is what I can do without yelling, what people ended up saying was that I was trendy. I was less, yeah, you're not really listening. I found of changed, and I think the long run is helping my act, because I found peaks and valleys. When I started it was just from high to highest gear.

Big picture here, what do you think American society should do with all the rage that everybody keeps inside themselves?

One of the things I think they should do is go on a tour, I've watched these people writing to me and as it's gone along, their writing has gotten better and better and more insightful and smarter. That's one way to let it go. But now in the year 2018, we don't write it out and send it out of Facebook and yell at somebody. I don't think that really helps.

Spielberg like a rock god
hails his latest movie

by RICHARD ROPEFEL, Chicago Sun-Times

You need to see Steven Spielberg’s “Ready Player One” on the biggest screen possible, and let it wash over you as if you had stepped inside the most incredible video game experience ever created—one in which events in the manufactured universe can have lasting effects on your real-world self. It’s as if you had stepped inside the most realistic virtual-reality experience. (Imagine that you’ve been able to step inside the digital universe of the Oasis.)

“Ready Player One” is a fantastically crafted and imaginative film. It’s a market-shattering production that is not bound by any genre or standard. Its creators have invented a new form of entertainment that can be thought of as a fully immersive experience.

The film is a brilliant piece of digital art. It’s a cinematic achievement that is unlike anything you’ve ever seen before. It’s a film that will make you feel like you’re part of something greater than yourself. It’s a film that will make you feel like you’re part of something bigger than the world we know.

The film is a testament to the power of imagination. It’s a film that will make you feel like you’re part of something greater than yourself. It’s a film that will make you feel like you’re part of something bigger than the world we know.

OVER THE BACK FENCE EVENTS

Lanesboro breaks barriers over the fence

by MATT STOLLE

O ver the Back Fence, Lanesboro’s long-running variety show, is one of those quirky traditions that define this popular southeast Minnesota town. Probably no other city as small as Lanesboro would be able to produce a variety show, much less one that has lasted 24 years. Yet it is hard to imagine a city staging such a show-month after month and year after year in such an arts-focused community.

“I think it’s a great example of the soul-authentic character of Lanesboro,” said Adam Wilgen, the show’s director. “You can go to your very first show and just meet so many people and become part of the show.”

What accounts for its longevity?

The show has remained fresh. Through the years, Over the Back Fence has maintained a lively, inventive pace by featuring skits, poems, guest musical acts, ring-baring, and quiz shows.

Every Thursday show (April 13 is “Stars and Planets”) takes place in the 250-seat Gable Theatre, a one-time, old-style movie theater where the show regularly sells out. Wilgen said.

“What’s interesting about the show is we could go on and on and on, and it would sell out every month,” he said. “It has a really dedicated audience.”

The show runs on volunteer talent drawn from Lanesboro and the surrounding community. Stephanie Proulx is the show’s volunteer production coordinator, and is responsible for recruiting new cast members and brainstorming new ideas. Damon Preumire is the show’s host. Wilgen describes him as the glue that ties the show together, witty and officious now and then.

“Next, a lime chilli

The show’s length varies depending on the amount of ad libbing and vamping. There are usually a dozen program items planned, as a skit will be followed by a musical number and then a comedy sequence, with the finale wrapped in a show-ending song.

The show’s unique atmosphere encourages audience participation. The lights remain on during the show, which eliminates the barrier between audience and performer.

What about the audience member who is terrified of being shocked from the audience?

Don’t worry. You’ll find yourself right at home, Wilgen said.

“People are there to laugh,” Wilgen said. “It’s not hard to get laughter if you’ve got an on-stage, too. What’s not so unique is that sense of community that you feel in attendance and on stage.”
