

Data centers

Amazon.com and Microsoft have each spent billions of dollars building out warehouse-sized data centers full of servers they use to rent on-demand file storage, processing power and software tools. Both keep precise details close to the vest, but public data offers a glimpse at the global network.

Data center locations:

Note: Some locations have more than one data center.
 Source: Amazon, Microsoft, Greenpeace

Graphic: Kelly Shea, Seattle Times/TNS