The Purdue soccer team is looking to break its losing streak against Northwestern University, with a record of 5-5-1 this season. "I think we have everyone [at every position]," said head coach Roff. "The game against Northwestern is one of our key games." The Boilermakers are 0-6 against the Wildcats this season.

With two tough wins in the books and the Boilermakers carrying a 15-6-1 record against Northwestern, and with a new win streak as it takes on the Wildcats this weekend, the Boilermakers have been working on strengthening their defense.

"We have a group that has really come together and play hard for each other and do everything we can to win," said senior defender Julia Ware. The Boilermakers have been working on strengthening their defense.

Another new starter on defense is Jackson. Shondell said, "What we need to do is replicate that same success against another team." The Boilermakers are 0-6-6 against Northwestern this season.

"Big Ten teams" think they can do everything against us," Holt said. "We need to take a step forward. We need to play well, do what we're capable of."
