Plans Film

HOLLYWOOD — Producer Vic ter Rolloff plans to film the story of Frank Gardell, former Polish Air Force lieutenant, who flew the first MIG to freedom in 1953.

A road with a base of mahogany logs and a surface of aluminum ore runs 30 miles from Paranam to Surinam, South America, by its airport 30 miles away.

Hollywood Does Well By Tolstoy's Novel

'War And Peace' Another Film Classic

N. Y. Herald Tribune News

NEW YORK. — There are two novels that everybody keeps meaning to read — perhaps next week, or certainly the week after. But the weeks and years go by, and the books stay on the shelf, looking as big as the encyclopedia.

Now "War and Peace" — has been made into a magnificent movie and countless moviegoers will take the book down from the shelf and plunge into it with enthusiasm.

This is not exactly what Tolstoy had in mind, but he had no cause for complaint. Hollywood served him well.

"War and Peace" is a distinguished film that will be talked about for years.

The miracle is that it was made at all. Tolstoy's novel had too many characters, too many threads of plot, too many immense battles to be compressed into a mere screen. And yet here it is.

Of course not all of "War and Peace" is here. Dozens of people have been eliminated; others appear only briefly and without any depth. But this is unimportant.

The essential story remains and it makes a stunning film. It runs for almost three and a half hours, but the time passes swiftly. There is always something to hold the attention in this great tapestry of men and events.

Part of its appeal is pictorial. The movie is in Vistavision and Technicolor, and its photography is superb. In some after scene, it bewitches with sheer beauty, as a 19th century artist had painted Moscow's nobility in all their elegance, Napoleon's armies in their gaudy uniforms, and Russia's endless landscapes.

Every scene is a gem of color and composition and many of them linger in the memory — a grand ball, an evening at the opera, a cavalry charge, a pitched battle.

— how war brought death to some, wisdom and compassion to others — and here it has an intimate quality that is very touching.

The movie centers around the aristocratic and skittish Rostov family and their teen-age daughter, Natasha. In this role Audrey Hepburn gives a breathtaking performance. She has the beauty and exhilaration of youth, but beneath her gaiety is a nature sensitive to all the tremors of life.

The tides of war expose her in both love and sorrow for the first time; and she grows out of her carefree girlhood — but in degrees almost too subtle for the naked eye. At the end, though she has lost some of her heedless enthusiasm, she has become a young woman of maturity and warmth.

Rarely have the excitement and pain of growing up been caught more tenderly.

Mel Ferrer plays the dashing Andrey Bolkonsky, who first captures her heart. He is the perfect gentleman and soldier, a stiff man with a strict sense of duty, which he follows unquestioningly to his death.

Another level, "War and Peace" is a story of individuals
