

WIGGLE TEST

Joan Collins charms cobras and Jack Hawkins, in Warner's "Land of the Pharoahs." The well-known Joan was on her own where Hawkins was concerned, but Warner armed the actress with a fluke and two toothless snakes for her cobra slappings. Two Egyptian cobras were used in the shots.

'Stranger On Horseback' Is Esquire Feature

The struggle to impose law and order on a raw, reckless western frontier town supplies the plot elements of "Stranger on Horseback," new color film opening Wednesday at the Esquire theater through United Artists release.

Specifically, "Stranger on Horseback" concerns the determination of a young judge to uphold the dignity of the United States by conducting a murder trial despite the lawless and violent interference of a powerful cattle baron. In the young judge's uphill fight for justice, his six-shooter is as much of a help as his copy of Blackstone. Joel McCrea plays the role of Judge Thatcher, and his co-stars are Kevin McCarthy and Minerva. The large supporting cast is headed by such noted Hollywood players as John McIntire, John Carradine, Nancy Gates, Emile Meyer and James Bell.

A Leonard Gaskin production, "Stranger on Horseback" was directed by Jacques Tourneur from a screenplay by Herb Meadow and Dan Martin, based on a story by Louis L'Amour. Ray Remman was chief cameraman, and the musical score was composed and conducted by Paul Dunlap.

Joel McCrea is an established veteran of the cinematic range and — in slight difference with the title of the film — stranger still to a horse. In fact, that all but unknown star animal has been a dominant factor in his life since early boyhood.

"Stranger on Horseback" was filmed in Amco Color on location in Arizona.

COBIT
Producers Jean Ture and Art Arthur have turned the spotlight on the amazing horses of the Air Force Service and the splendid work they did during the Korean war in a new film, "Hill Top," which is slated to open Wednesday at the Esquire Theatre through United Artists release.

Stirling Hayden stars in the film with Arthur Franz and Marshall Thompson sharing top roles. Herbert L. Strock directed the seven-day by Marvin Wald and Art Arthur.

Paul Munt, famed water, was engaged by Paramount to supervise aerial photography in "Strategic Air Command," which co-stars James Stewart and Jane Allyn.

Jack Webb Will Visit 35 Towns in United States

BUTIRANK, Calif.—Jack Webb, thirty-city personal appearance tour of the United States and Canada this summer for opening of "Pete Kelly's Blues" will begin July 27th in San Antonio.

The Webb party will travel in a chartered United Airlines executive plane to cover the extensive territory within the 32 days allotted, and for greater efficiency in coordinating arrival times with the rigorous schedule of events planned for each stopover.

Webb will meet and greet the public at many points from airports to theaters. The schedule calls for his appearance in each city to occur just prior to or just after the opening of the Warner Bros. CinemaScope musical melodrama, of which he is both director and a star.

In the plane party will be Richard L. Brown, screenplay writer of the film, and Webb's aides. The quarters and a conference room plane is equipped with sleeping quarters and a conference room with radio facilities, where press and air interviews can be held.
