CONOR HANICK, piano

Wednesday, January 28, 7:30 PM

Brilliant soprano Julia Bullock, one of Musical America's 2021 "Artists of the Year," handpicks selections she loves for this rich evening of music for voice, piano, and cello — ranging from Nina Simone to André Previn's song cycle set to poems by Toni Morrison — including a Center for the Arts co-commissioned work by lauded Cuban-American composer Tania León. Bullock is joined by cellist Seth Parker Woods, a versatile artist and innovator across multiple genres, and pianist Conor Hanick, regarded as one of his generation's most inquisitive interpreters of music new and old. From familiar beauty to brand new sounds, the evening celebrates dazzling versatility and virtuosity.
