The coming Civil War is complex. There's two completely opposite sides in America and you likely fit into one or the other. Which side are you?

(Warning: this op-ed will probably make most of you angry. Make sure you keep reading and maybe you will gain some understanding.)

Protesters (Antifa, BLM and others) are calling for police to be held to same standard as regular citizens. They are calling for racism to end.

These Protesters are Angry. They are angry at police because many have gone to jail or had run ins with cops for drugs, alcohol, speeding tickets etc. Many view Cops as bullies and corrupt. Many have seen what they believe is systemic racism and corruption of the judicial system, a system that enables a "protected class" of cops, lawyers, judges and politicians, white collar crimes and criminals- who not only are white collar, but most have white skin. Many of these protesters are young, most are Millennials. Many see the hypocrisy of our judicial system. Jail time for marijuana, a drug that is legal as long as it can be securely taxed. Meanwhile, Big Pharma deals much more addictive and dangerous drugs, yet they are licensed and exempted from criminal charges.

These young folks see the overreach of Government, taxation that robs them of their paycheck, wasteful, exorbitant Gov spending, a military state, surveillance state, nanny state, snitch state, all the while Police Dept budgets and all Gov institutions become ever bigger and encroach into every corner. They see the small businesses bankrupted and there's no opportunity for young people to work anywhere except Walmart, Target and McDonald's (the same companies who were allowed to stay open during Pandemic and grab record profits). They view Police and

Trump as THE PROBLEM.

There's no real opportunity for them to open their own small business and realize their own American dream. Even if the banks would lend them money, the Gov makes it too hard with permits, licenses, fees and rules to affordably open, and why do it anyway? Especially when the masses prefer Amazon.

One of their biggest concerns is they cannot pay back their college loan debt. They have been duped by the Universities (another quasi- Gov institution that has screwed them.) An institution that promised them an important job. They have worthless degrees, no jobs, no money and no prospects. They play video games in order to live a virtual life that is better than the life they lead and they smoke a lot of weed. But largely and deep down, they feel like losers.

They want Socialism because if the rich are forced to share with them they believe they will be happier and have better opportunities.

They also believe in aborting their pregnancies because who would bring another human into this disaster world. 🤔

And then there's the OTHER HALF of America, the America that elected Donald Trump. the people who are working and are tired of paying for these lazy, spoiled purple haired "kids". And this half is ANGRY, they are furious at the people who are rioting under the premise and "virtue signal" of caring about a black man named George Floyd. Millennial brats and thugs who are burning down their own community (and having fun doing it!) While robbing stores and disrespecting cops and shitting on what they haven't even had to work to earn! As the old adage goes, if you don't work for it, you don't take care of it.

Many of these folks have put themselves thru school with the GI Bill, or have taken out loans for college and paid them back, with interest. They have dutifully worked hard, served in the military and paid their taxes. They see blacks shaming whites, and they don't understand why they should feel guilty for nothing they have consciously participated in. They do believe discrimination happens because they have been dirt poor and have had to work for everything and THEY feel discriminated against. The only breaks that they've seen given out have been "affirmative action" which helped black folks to go to better schools and get better Gov jobs. Some of this half of America has even lost out on a job or scholarship or an interview due to "quotas" to fill positions with "diversity". They are tired of all the free shit the low income neighborhoods get, meanwhile they can't catch a break and have to WORK EVERYDAY to support everyone who doesn't.

They see these millennial kids as entitled and spoiled. A know-it-all generation that won't shut up and learn from older experience, and a generation without a work ethic who are too good to get a job at Walmart and do whatever it takes to feed their family. (Ofcourse these millennials don't even have families, because they are too selfish to care for anyone other than themselves and they are so depraved and demonic that they even abort their babies.)

This HALF sees a coddled generation who has been given participation trophies, who have whined about bullies and been petted and told they are the most important voice. A generation taught that everything is someone else's fault and to always play the blame game and deflect personal responsibility, failed by our education system.

They observe this millennial generation, who interrupts older people and calls them derogatory "Boomer" because they think they are smarter and more important. An egocentric generation who think respect is earned by temper tantrums and yelling . And who believe that being a keyboard warrior somehow makes them important and well respected in their community... They believe these kids are so arrogant and prideful, they don't even believe in God! This Other half wants these kids to actually have real consequences and have to work and earn their own way. They no longer want their hard earned money going to support laziness and entitlement. And they too are willing to fight and shoot and defend and die for their beliefs and life experiences.

A chasm of ideals between two deeply rooted mountains. what is the answer? Who is Right?

Will this coming War be us killing each other in order to reset this Country? Will we kill off the old OR will we kill off the young? Can we live with our conscience when we actually take human life and end their potential? What about the folks in the middle, how will you side when you see the faults of both sides and you also see the potential of both ? HOW can we work together? Or can we?

I personally will fight and die for my family. I will also die for my small businesses, because I have dedicated my life to them, and these businesses will help to employ my family and feed them.

But there could be some common ground, people in both groups sense that government has become too big. Even  People who work in Government know it is wasteful and exorbitant. Only the top gov income earners won't admit it, because well, they are on the gravy train and will protect that train at all cost.

Perhaps If we ALL get involved in all levels of politics and elections and elect REBELS from both sides, REBELS that can see both sides of this war and are not embraced by either political party nor special interests. Folks that do not breach conflicts of interest or self promote or reap cronyism. Perhaps WE need to elect Rebels that will scale back the spending, make people take responsibility (while ensuring citizens keep the money that they work for) And hold corruption and white collar criminals to the letter of the law.

At this point, on the precipice of a coming War, what do we have to lose?
