STAR CODES

THE WHOLE WORLD IS CHANGING over these three years as Uranus and Pluto trine, and we have so much to adapt to and direct. This week we need patience and work; it's time to recollect ourselves and get ready for a busy winter ahead. Five planets are retrograde for another week and ask us to consolidate and repair rather than try to leap impatiently.

Mercury and Venus turn direct November 13 and give the green light to leap forward. Until then the sun and Mercury now in Scorpio want us to drop our roots, go into the wells within, our dream world, and into the depths of our feelings. Look at the past with fresh eyes, find lost personal resources and skills, and bring forward these gems.

Mars in Leo approaches conjunction with Jupiter on November 15 where it builds competition, momentum, and the potential for aggressive or assertive moves. If an opportunity comes along, take that challenge, but keep the receipts and read the fine print. Stay safe.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6: This diplomatic, socially warm day starts on a serious note; we could feel old, but remember work to accomplish and responsibilities to be fulfilled. Respond simply and with a warm heart and consistent action. Search for joy in the moment as the moon approaches a conjunction to Venus tonight; create beauty, be happy to see one another, and discuss potential.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 7: Sweet aspects overnight help us come to our hearts and begin the day creatively; to not hurry is a great goal. Midday, connect, repair, and prepare. Tonight, create magic. This weekend holds both the mid-Scorpio cross-quarter day and the Scorpio new moon, a deeply introspective, internal time.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 8: Don't rush; we can feel like we're living in two worlds, with one foot in the dream world and one not particularly efficient foot in this one. Hold still and integrate. Later, use curiosity to solve a mystery or find missing items surfacing from the far corners.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 9: The sun and moon in Scorpio conjunct just after midnight and begin a new cycle of focus. Our minds obsess easily, so let's make sure they obsess on something productive. Primal emotions stir both the best and most difficult as Venus sextiles Mars. Let's find something positive to appreciate in beloveds and friends, both for their health and ours.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10: Waiting is hard. Stay patient even as a fresh upbeat enthusiasm enters as the Sagittarius moon trines Neptune and Saturn; we can now see further ahead but Mercury retrograde asks us to prepare rather than gallop. Unsettling restlessness triggers undiplomatic honesty midday but could help us correct a problem. Be funny, be honest, but be kind.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11: Be carefully busy as the Sagittarius moon trines Mars and demands action. Our nerves could feel off center as Mercury quincunxes Uranus; stay aware of surroundings, allow extra time, check twice, and track loose items thoughtfully; it's easy to get distracted. Hearts are warm, even helpful, but could have trouble around wounded egos.

THURSDAY NOVEMBER 12: Our minds will tend to spin in witty but not particularly effective circles. Watch conspiracy theories spin, but a streak of honesty in the morning and efficiency in the afternoon as the moon enters Capricorn will support our naturally suspicious nature and help us cut through the haze. Mercury and Venus turn direct tomorrow.
