STAR CODES

LET THE NEXT COUPLE OF WEEKS be true summer. Mercury is retrograde until July 24, and it's time to put all Mercury retrograde thriving skills into place. Major transits are lining up for big cultural change in the background, but our daily life will be easier if we keep life simple and forgiving.

Mercury retrograde time is good for all those "re" words: review, remember, and revisit. Pull out an old project, a script or quilt, and work on it with fresh eyes. Reconnect with old friends, places, and traditions. Introspect on retreat. Fix old problems, find what's missing. Identify and correct misunderstandings.

Ordinary things that involve communication, transportation, or forging ahead take extra patience. Major declarations made now may be reversed, withdrawn, or regretted. This particular Mercury retrograde can help us speak up honestly, as Mars and Uranus run close together in Mercury-ruled Gemini and add extra power to our words but extra snafus when we rush. If sudden risky impulses arise, breathe deep and think it through. Keep an eye out for road closures, fires, or falling buildings and stay flexible about timing.

FRIDAY, JULY 10: Pay attention to what grounds and heals this morning under an earthy Taurus moon. Watch for undertones of possessiveness or territoriality midday, then step into inclusiveness as the moon enters communicative Gemini. Let's say what we mean and make sure we hear what was said; watch for misconceptions in glib humor and keep it real.

SATURDAY, JULY 11: Morning is potentially talkative and active as the moon conjuncts Mars in Gemini, but let's pace ourselves; accidents and irascibility arise when we're impatient. Explore possibilities; our mental clutch is activated and we get to choose our next gear. Tonight calls for stories, history, traditions, humor, and shared wisdom.

SUNDAY, JULY 12: This morning brings energy but lacks focus; it's easy to leave things or people behind. This afternoon we could feel overextended and need quiet, a place to pull in our antennae and drop expectations as the waning moon enters domestic Cancer. Let minds drift in the imaginative wind as the moon squares Neptune tonight.

MONDAY, JULY 13: Recent events or experiences can inspire a change or change of scenery as Venus squares Uranus. Let's not just run away but run toward something wonderful. Don't throw away a relationship or project that just needs work; be willing to reorganize the effort and consider the essence of what is needed.

TUESDAY, JULY 14: This morning's new moon in Cancer can bring high tides of feeling, hope, and action. Explore whether we need to protect ourselves, nurture ourselves deeply, or care for our surroundings. Just after sunset the crescent moon in charismatic Leo conjuncts expansive Jupiter and opens possibilities. Late night shifts toward thoughtful poignancy as the moon opposes Pluto.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 15: Look for the subtle clues of a profound shift as Uranus forms a gentle sextile to Neptune, the first of three passes this year. Explore a shift of perception, expand philosophical constructs, but watch for the self-justifying aspects of that Leo moon and ask if this shifted perspective supports an easier, healthier, and more profound life for all sentient beings.

THURSDAY, JULY 16: We could see big shifts on the world stage, yet can feel stuck, spinning in place close to home. This month's big aspects glow; changes are real in the distance, but minor aspects disperse that energy close to home. Be kind. Tonight grows more analytical with a potentially self-deprecating, edgy humor.
