STAR CODES

THIS WEEK BRINGS EXCITEMENT and contradictions, enthusiasm with a need for caution, cheerfulness with undertones of determined competition and love of homeland which will gleefully infuse World Cup matches and small-town rodeos alike. Competitive Mars sextiles expansive Jupiter in domestic, defensive Cancer offering an opportunity to liberate old arguments but adding juice to conflicts involving our egos or around nationalistic pride.

The weekend starts out under an honest and clarifying Sagittarius moon which can help us get right with one another before Mercury turns retrograde. Get bills paid and orders placed but check the work along the way as it's easy to make mistakes while Mercury appears stationary.

Mars enters Gemini on Sunday and helps us multitask but brings irritability when we don't feel heard. Mercury retrogrades on Monday and slows us down, sends us back to the past to repair and reconnect, which can be great on vacation but frustrating while searching for new answers or negotiating permanent peace deals. Mars heads into a conjunction with Uranus next week, adding sparks to inventions but, with Mercury retrograde, can make dumb ideas sound good. Choose carefully.

FRIDAY, JUNE 26: Slow down; we can get crankily preoccupied this morning as the Scorpio moon opposes Mars and slam things which slam us back. Moods lighten midday as the moon enters Sagittarius; release frustrating conundrums and take time outdoors, with animals, or with the international community. Adjust plans around dinnertime as the moon squares Uranus, then enjoy shared dreams under the stars.

SATURDAY, JUNE 27: Engage life wholeheartedly as Mars sextiles expansive Jupiter under a wandering, outdoorsy Sagittarius moon, adding pizzazz to any active or athletic event, spice to any argument, and potentially bringing an opportunity to forgive an old grudge. Pay attention and be safe. Build beautiful things, work together, plan together, play together.

SUNDAY, JUNE 28: Things begin to slow down as Mercury appears to hold still. Morning works best if we keep it slow, embodied, with good brunches. People probably want to be honest but can talk in circles as Mars enters Gemini this afternoon. Our nerves ramp up easily and can leave us running in circles. Organized lists help, but maybe we just relax and enjoy the moment.

MONDAY, JUNE 29: Expect mixed messages from the stars. The full moon in industrious, determined Capricorn at 5:56 p.m. pushes us to hurry, get on with it, take the issues seriously, and tell others how to do their job. But Mercury retrogrades and asks us to introspect and retrospect before acting. Don't get bossy under stress; instead, breathe deep, assess, and prioritize.

TUESDAY, JUNE 30: Retrograde Mercury is great for tidying up loose ends, finishing unfinished business, completing chapters. Clear the decks before the holiday weekend; be consistently determined but don't push, as pushing can tighten the knots or override warning signals. Listen sensitively to where and how progress can be made.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 1: Our focus gets pulled toward the big picture, what's going on in the community and world at large. Notice how the best and worst of recent national and international events affect us personally and contemplate what's needed to adjust as the Aquarius moon opposes Jupiter, trines Mars and Uranus, then conjuncts Pluto.

THURSDAY, JULY 2: Recent observations now call for work as the moon sextiles Saturn. Follow through. The past whispers: unfinished projects need attention, old friends circle back through. If old wounds or tired complaints resurface, don't get hooked out of habit. Don't dredge up the past unless there is a clear path to resolution; break cycles instead.
