Edward West builds another building in Trinidad prior to his famous theatre

The local pioneer property known as the old Bloom House, now the residence of early cattleman and banker Frank G. Bloom, in the time of E. Munn’s electrical inspection and restrictions concerning the installation of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad.

This ordinance provides that all electrical wiring and installation of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad shall be done by a licensed electrician who is bonded to a state electrical inspector before a permit for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the enforcement of municipal and county public health unit, the establishment of which has long been a matter of public concern.

At today’s commission meeting Walter Dickerson and Alfred Williams, the vice president and executive vice president respectively of the Bloom House property at the recent sale, including the high bid offered by Stanley Harris Post American Legion, said to take steps to have the residence property made available and available for the accommodation of the health unit staff.

The American Legion post made the high bid on the property of $1001.50. Their intended use was as a legion home for veterans of the war.

The details of the health unit that is to be a cooperative venture between the city and county, under approval and regulatory agreement by the state health department, are pending.

100 Years Ago – 1919

Editorial by E.E. Winsome

That the present city council is about to enforce all city ordinances and sustain city officers who do enforce them is emphasized again last night when a controversy developed between citizens and the revised inspector of the city over the provisions of the ordinance for the electrical inspection and restrictions concerning the installation in kind of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad.

This ordinance provides that all electrical wiring and installation of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad shall be done by a licensed electrician who is bonded to a state electrical inspector before a permit for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the enforcement of municipal and county public health unit, the establishment of which has long been a matter of public concern.

The American Legion post made the high bid on the property of $1001.50. Their intended use was as a legion home for veterans of the war.

The details of the health unit that is to be a cooperative venture between the city and county, under approval and regulatory agreement by the state health department, are pending.

100 Years Ago – 1919

Editorial by E.E. Winsome

That the present city council is about to enforce all city ordinances and sustain city officers who do enforce them is emphasized again last night when a controversy developed between citizens and the revised inspector of the city over the provisions of the ordinance for the electrical inspection and restrictions concerning the installation in kind of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad.

This ordinance provides that all electrical wiring and installation of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad shall be done by a licensed electrician who is bonded to a state electrical inspector before a permit for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the enforcement of municipal and county public health unit, the establishment of which has long been a matter of public concern.

The American Legion post made the high bid on the property of $1001.50. Their intended use was as a legion home for veterans of the war.

The details of the health unit that is to be a cooperative venture between the city and county, under approval and regulatory agreement by the state health department, are pending.

100 Years Ago – 1919

Editorial by E.E. Winsome

That the present city council is about to enforce all city ordinances and sustain city officers who do enforce them is emphasized again last night when a controversy developed between citizens and the revised inspector of the city over the provisions of the ordinance for the electrical inspection and restrictions concerning the installation in kind of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad.

This ordinance provides that all electrical wiring and installation of electric wiring on properties within the city of Trinidad shall be done by a licensed electrician who is bonded to a state electrical inspector before a permit for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the electrical inspection and restrictions of the ordinance providing for the enforcement of municipal and county public health unit, the establishment of which has long been a matter of public concern.

The American Legion post made the high bid on the property of $1001.50. Their intended use was as a legion home for veterans of the war.

The details of the health unit that is to be a cooperative venture between the city and county, under approval and regulatory agreement by the state health department, are pending.