

Think Pink

*Breast cancer affects us all. It affects our mothers, sisters, wives and friends.
It affects people of every age, sex and race, and is the leading cancer among white and African-American women.*

This October, National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, pink is everyone's color.

Early detection can save lives, and mammograms are the most important tool in diagnosing breast cancer. There is no cure for breast cancer, but mammograms can save lives by finding breast cancer as early as possible. Every woman, beginning at age 40, should schedule a mammogram and a physical every year. Women should also perform a thorough breast self-exam once a month.
