Wilson's calf is improving, but Fields will start at QB

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Russell Wilson 's balky right calf is improving. It just might not heal in time for him to wrest the Pittsburgh Steelers starting quarterback job away from Justin Fields, at least in the short term.

Coach Mike Tomlin said Tuesday he expects Wilson to see an uptick in his workload during practice this week, though Fields is expected to get the nod for a fifth straight week when Pittsburgh (3-1) hosts Dallas (2-2) on Sunday night.

The 35-year-old Wilson hasn't played since aggravating a calf injury shortly before the season opener in Atlanta. The Steelers have brought the nine-time Pro Bowler along slowly. He felt good enough to throw during 7-on-7 drills with the scout team but it's still uncertain when Wilson could get cleared to be a full participant.

"We will evaluate his ability to move and function and protect himself and obviously evaluate his level of productivity," Tomlin said. "And he responded after a fumble early in as he gets more comfortable running he can get out of harm's way while we'll let that be our guide in terms of whether we get into serious consideration as we push forward toward game time this week."

Tomlin has deflected questions for weeks about whether Fields has done enough to earn the starting gig outright. He did it again Tuesday, though a little less emphatically than before.

Asked if there's a chance he could stick with Fields as the "hot hand" much in the same fashion he did with Mason Rudolph at the end of last season as Kenny Pickett recovered from ankle surgery, Tomlin opened the door a bit.

"There's a potential for that," he said. "But we're not there as I stand here today."

That time is fast approaching, however, especially if Fields continues to improve as the weeks pass. Fields wasn't mistake-free in a 27-24 loss to Indianapolis on Sunday, but impressed Tomlin with the way the second half. Fields led Pittsburgh on three straight touchdown drives to get within striking distance on a day he finished with 367 yards of total offense (312 passing, 55 rushing) and three touchdowns total (one passing, two on the ground).

"I just think when you're in those moments, you get an opportunity to show who you are in those moments (so) there's less speculation," Tomlin said. "And so some things that I was speculating about somewhat last week about his steady demeanor, about his competitiveness and so forth, just got solidified and verified with the challenges that we faced."

Fields is completing 67% of his passes with three touchdowns and one interception through four games. His 98.0 quarterback rating is 10th among players who have started each game and his rushing total against the Colts was a team high. He's also growing more aggressive first-year offensive coordinator Arthur Smith's scheme.

Tomlin pointed to the length of the season still to go as one of the reasons the Steelers have not tried to rush Wilson back, particularly as he deals with a calf problem that's been bothering him since the first day of training camp. Wilson is no longer the scrambler he was a decade ago, and Pittsburgh's offensive line is dealing with a string of injuries, the latest an Achilles tendon tear to right guard James Daniels on Sunday that ended Daniels' season.

The Steelers are optimistic veteran Isaac Seumalo — out since late August with a pectoral injury will be able to return against Dallas. The rest of the line will feature first or second-year players at three of the other four positions. It won't be enough for Wilson to merely be able to plant and throw. He's going to have to show the coaching staff also being able to run the entirety of the offense without limitations to receive "serious consideration" to play, Tomlin said.

It may take some time for Wilson to get to that point. If Fields avoids any major setbacks, by the time Wilson is healthy it may be too late to stay atop the depth chart.

Asked if there's anything specific Fields can do to convince Tomlin he's the better option than a healthy Wilson, Tomlin just smiled.

"Just play well," he said. "Win. That's our business."

NOTES

LB Alex Highsmith (groin) will miss a second straight game. ... RBs Jaylen Warren (knee) and Cordarrelle Patterson (ankle) could be limited during the early portion of the week. ... LB Nick Herbig and DT Keanu Benton could also be limited early in the week.

Buffalo's Von Miller suspended by NFL for 4 games

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) ing accused of third-degree felony Buffalo Bills edge rusher Von Miller was suspended four games by the NFL on Tuesday for violating the league's personal conduct policy.

The NFL did not reveal the reason for the suspension, which comes as Buffalo (3-1) prepares to play at the Houston Texans on Sunday. Miller, the NFL's active leader in sacks, is eligible to rejoin the Bills ahead of their home game against Miami on Nov. 3.

Miller was accused last November of assaulting his pregnant girlfriend at their home outside Dallas during the Bills' bye week. He turned himself in to police after beassault of a pregnant woman, which is punishable by two to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The woman and Miller have been in a relationship for seven years and have two other children together.

No charges have been filed. Miller said in July he considered the case closed based on feedback from his attorneys.

"My life is all about football right now and my kids, and being the best teammate and best football player I can possibly be," he said at the time. "I'm happy to be here with the Buffalo Bills. I'm happy to just be in this moment, living my life and do the things that we do normally."

The 35-year-old Miller has three sacks in four games this season. He failed to get one in 14 games last season, including playoffs, after recovering from a torn knee ligament.

Miller has 126 1/2 sacks, which is tied for 17th on the career list with Derrick Thomas.

In Miller's first comments about his arrest in December, he disputed the allegations, calling them false and "blown out of proportion." Miller indicated something happened between him and his girlfriend, but stressed it did not approach what he was alleged to have done.

According to a police affidavit re-nant," the affidavit said. She fell into garding the alleged assault on Nov. 29, Miller twice put his hands on his girlfriend's neck, pulled out some of her hair and threw her onto a couch. The woman was treated for minor injuries, including bruising on her neck, officers wrote.

Police wrote that Miller became "visibly angry" when the woman went into an office in their shared apartment and slammed the door behind her.

Miller then told her to "get out," police wrote, and when she tried to collect her laptop and cellphone, Miller began pushing her. She repeatedly yelled, "Stop. I'm prega chair after being pushed, and Miller then put one hand on her neck and held it with pressure for three to five seconds, police wrote.

According to the document, Miller then threw the woman's laptop on the floor and stomped on it. She told police she recorded some of the attack and, when she threatened to call police, he left.

The Bills filled Miller's spot on the roster by signing defensive tackle Zion Logue off the Atlanta Falcons' practice squad. Logue was drafted in the sixth round by Atlanta after playing in college at Georgia.
