Special Ed Parents Protest

Claim BOE and Weast are indifferent to childrens' needs

By Drew Pierson
 Staff Writer

Several dozen protestors lined Hungerford Road in front of rush-hour commuters Monday evening to protest the eventual inclusion of special education students into general classrooms.

Jeanne Taylor, a mother of three disabled students in the school system, and an advocate of special needs children says that plans to dissolve the special education learning centers will be cheaper for the school system, "because they won't give us the necessary support," and is a by-product of the "No Child Left Behind" program.

"Not all, but most of these children, especially the autistic children can't be mainstreamed," Taylor said. "It's a no-brainer."

MCPS began the learning center program more than 30 years ago. Then, as is the case now, the centers were intended for students with "moderate to severe" learning disabilities, according to the appeal. Instructors hoped they would be able to offer more individualized services by concentrating groups of disabled students together.

Superintendent Jerry Weast first proposed to eliminate the learning centers in December 2006. His reasons, according to the appeal filed with the state board of education, included the disproportionately large number of minority students in the learning centers, as well as studies that suggested disabled students incorporated into general classrooms fared better on tests.

But Taylor said that Weast's motivation was to disperse disabled students across the county, thus raising the aggregate, county-wide test scores mandated by the federal No Child Left Behind Act.

"That's what happens," Taylor said. "You disperse the children and you don't have all of those low scores in one lump sum. It isn't about the kids. It's about the test scores."

The Board approved Weast's proposal on Feb. 13, 2007, with the caveat that the centers would be gradually

Rockville council rocked by acrimony

By Drew Pierson
 Staff Writer

It's like a game of connect the dots.

First dot: Members of the Wootton PTA lambasted the Rockville City Council at a meeting Monday night about a proposed $180,000 cut in funding for playground equipment, as well as $100,000 that was to be used for proposed traffic safety measures near Wootton High School. Andrea Bernardo, one of the PTA members who spoke during the council's public comment period, brought her and her neighbor's children before the council.

"I want you to look at them, and look right in their eyes, and see in their eyes, and think about their eyes when you vote to cut safety measures from Wootton County Parkway," Bernardo said to the council.

Second dot: Councilwoman Anne M. Robbins, agreeing with the PTA members, sharply criticized city staff for supposedly taking money away from public safety measures.

"I would first like to address the awful, awful idea that any public safety item would ever be cut, and the shock when I got this memo [the proposed fund cuts], this is not Rockville," Robbins said. "I never again want to ever receive anything like this, and I'm very, very serious."

REFLECTIONS

September 13, 1962

Electronic brains used in county classrooms

Each week, The Sentinel revisits a memorable story from our archives.

County schoolteachers and principals will find their paper-work loads considerably lightened and speeded in the months ahead, when the Board of Education's new electronic data processing system hits its stride.

First task of the $140,000 system, installed last March, was to take over the school system's financial records. That complete, the data processing equipment now is being applied to pupil records.

"The future of this equipment will definitely be in the educational field, rather than in the financial field," says School Finance Director

Brian M. Benson.

As a starter, the system's major job this summer was scheduling classes at a number of secondary schools for the school year, which started last week.

It had to take into account both the number of students interested in each subject being offered and the hours of the day when it was available.

This task, normally handled by principals in advance of school's opening, is complicated by new trends toward grouping youngsters by ability levels and the necessity of building equal "pupil loads" for each other.

Even with the complications, the system has processed the data on which it builds the schedules at speeds past human comprehension, limited only by the ability of a printer to print out "just 600 lines a minute," as one school official puts it.

Students in selected secondary schools this year will have their entire class schedules printed up for them on cards by the system, International Business Machine's 1401 equipment.

Once school started, the system has been programmed to tally attendance records submitted by teachers, relieving them of the load of computing percentages and levels which have to be reported to the U.S. government in an "impacted" area like Montgomery County which is eligible for federal aid.

Dick Grove, assistant director of finance who heads the programming team, foresees the day when each child is given an identifying number to carry with him through his school years- a number which the data processing system will use in every analysis of his attendance, test results, grades and general progress.

Jobs which took days of valuable educational and administrative time, formerly will be dispatched within minutes by the incredible electronic "brain" and its tireless mechanical slaves.

Checking and grading of achievement tests- one of the most time-consuming of clerical tasks facing teachers- proves a snap to the whirling, purring data processing complex.

HUMOR

Wooden shoes and conservatism

by Roger Mursick

Well I've returned from my sojourn to Holland and Finland with good news to report.

Both countries like Americans. Nobody was rude or anything less than polite to me.

Even when I was in the wrong, such as, stepping off the curb into bike traffic (Amsterdam) or holding up the line at the check out counter because I hadn't weighed my produce before hand (Helsinki).

No one started rolling their eyes around or mumbling nasty comments about the stupid foreigner. The only time that I encountered any rudeness was at a deli from an Iraqi fellow who was upset because we were bombing and killing his friends. Ingrate! Thankfully, I was wearing my emotional 'Kevlar' that day. Nothing can harm me when I'm dressed for intellectual combat. And besides, I came to Holland prepared to be insulted - I'm a conservative living in Montgomery county Maryland for goodness sake. Other than that single encounter no one brought up the war on terror or George Bush, global warming or Anna Nicole Smith (I'll bet she still looks great. It takes time for silicone to decompose) - except when I spoke with the other comics I was working or hanging with.

I started to write this article about the differences in our cultures (Europe vs. USA) but after letting my thoughts marinate for a few more days I realize that that's an easy thing to do. So I'll just share a few highlights with you.

I like Holland. Amsterdam is always a cool place to wander about just for the buildings. And talk about structures, how can you not like a place that has whores in one window (attractive ladies all) and little Dutch windmills and shoes for sale in the next. Some people will be taking home different things from their visit to Amsterdam. Three doors down the family from Ireland is sitting at an outdoor café, having a bit of a mid-morning nosh and studying anatomy and having a swell time of it.

Nothing really exciting happened to me on this trip to Holland like the last time.

I got hit by a tram (trolley) on my last visit. This time I looked in every direction before moving, even if I was standing in the middle of a field.

There was one strange sign in Amsterdam that caught my eye; "Homo monument". This was a monument dedicated to...Homos', erected in front of a church, hmm? Was that the correct adjective to use? There was no "Hetero monument". I couldn't really get anyone to explain the reasoning for the monument.

As I inquired it became apparent to me that people thought that I was a bit weird. "Excuse me. Where's the Homo monument, down that alley? "What's up with the "Homo monument"? Yes, the "Homo monument". Why do you have a Homo monument? Why is it here, in front of "Our lady of the "never mind. Some questions don't translate easily.

I was working in Helsinki at Helsinki university of Technology. Here's a place (Helsinki) where the sun still shines at 11:15 at night (in the summer). It's gotta be tough being a Vampire in Finland. There's something weird about putting on sun block when you're heading out for a night on the town.

Finland also has the highest suicide rate in Europe, fifty percent of the audience at my shows knew someone that had committed suicide. If I were going to make a comparison between our two cultures I'd say the big difference is if they (Fins) encounter a problem they skip depression and go straight to suicide. On the other hand Americans go straight to the antidepressants...and then develop a problem.

Roger Mursick is a nationally known comedian who until very recently thought the Netherlands were adjacent to the nether regions.

NEWSPlanning board takes steps to regulate growthBy Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

Raising taxes on home sales and increasing builders' fees are two of the many recommendations approved by the Planning Board last week to help regulate growth in Montgomery county.

The board has held several meetings in the past few weeks to discuss the proposals, which would use increased fees and taxes to help pay for more schools, roads and public transit in the increasingly urban county.

The board unanimously approved measures last Thursday that would more than double school fees for a new single-family home to $22,729 and nearly double transportation fees in many parts of the county. The board also recommended imposing an additional tax when schools become too crowded.

In addition, the board recommended doubling the county's recordation tax to roughly $11 per $1,000 of value.

Buyers and sellers usually split recordation taxes at closing. School and transportation fees, while charged to the developer, are usually then passed on to the buyer.

The board's proposals, which are outlined in a new growth policy report commissioned by the County Council last January, would allow higher-density development in areas served by public transportation and would give developers incentives to stead, the council asked the board to change the growth policy as quickly as possible.

The proposal, which has already been discussed in several public hearings and board meetings, will go before the council, which is expected to hold several more hearings before voting on the measure in July.

Some opponents of the measure, including representatives from the building industry, said it would price developers out of the county.

"Builders are just not going to pay exorbitant fees to build in Montgomery," said Raquel Montenegro of the Maryland-National Capital Building Industry Association. "They'll go somewhere else."

County Executive Isiah Leggett said he was concerned about the effect the measures would have.

"You've got to make sure it is still possible to have new development in the county," said Leggett. "We don't want to stop all growth, and I think there is a point where the fees will push developers away."

Hanson disagreed.

"Developers have been making a lot of money in Montgomery county for the last 20 years," he said. "We don't think that's going to change."

"We are an increasingly urban county..."Royce Hanson create more pedestrian-friendly neighborhoods.

"We are an increasingly urban county," said board chairman Royce Hanson, "and we have to remember that as we grow."

The board was charged with accelerating its planned review of the county's growth policy when the council rejected a proposed moratorium on growth earlier this year. In-

Rockville cop, guilty of assault, leaves police forceBy Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

A Rockville City Police officer who pleaded guilty last week to assault charges is off the force, according to police officials.

Rockville City Police Chief Terry Treschuk said John Ferguson is "no longer in service" with the police department on Monday. He would not say whether Ferguson resigned or was fired, saying it was a "personnel matter."

Ferguson's attorney did not return calls for comment.

Ferguson pleaded guilty to two charges of assault last week stemming from a December incident at Clyde's in Rockville in which he allegedly rubbed his buttocks on a woman, punched her husband and threw a bar glass at him, then slapped another woman in the face.

He pleaded guilty to two of four assault charges against him as part of a plea bargain with the state that, if accepted by the judge, would guarantee Ferguson serves no jail time for his crimes. Instead, prosecutors recommended Ferguson receive 18 months of suspended jail time, take classes for substance abuse and anger management, and agree not to work in law enforcement.

Ferguson had been suspended with pay since January. His sentencing hearing is scheduled for June 6.

OPINIONS & VIEWS

Maybe R.E.M. had it right

The first city council meeting I covered as a full-time reporter was down in Humble, pronounced "Umble" Texas in the early 80s.

A man named C.J. Peel, a wealthy cattleman and landowner

We're all proud of the fact that we're moving into larger offices in the heart of Rockville and have expanded staff and coverage during the last three years.

Since the paper began in Rockville in 1855, I felt it was only appropriate to make our first public good news announcement there.

Mayor Larry Giammo, and the members of the city council and staff present were pleasant, hard working people who greeted our news happily enough.

Still, it had been a while since I'd covered a city council meeting of any sort, and it was a first for me.

It was the first time I ever heard a council member grunt at a mayor.

Apparently there's animosity in the council these days. Duh, says anyone close enough to know, but I was surprised at the level of anxiety in the chambers. Outside the city wags were talking about what a shame it was people on the council couldn't get along.

Inside Giammo looked like a man strapped to an iron maiden having his teeth pulled out by rusty pliers without the privilege of anesthesia.

Pained. All these nice councilmen and city staffers who were so polite to me, were absolutely unhappy with each other.

Anne Robbins grunted or growled, take your pick, at Giammo after he asked the council not to "demonize" city staff.

The object of his protection was city manager Scott Ullery, a wonkish man, polite and prim, who seemingly never met a fact, figure or decimal point he couldn't analyze. He had talked about money saving actions which apparently was misinterpreted by certain members of the council.

Outside in the hall the wags had a field day. "This is better than a soap opera," said one. "Why can't we all just get along?" Bemoaned a second.

Me? I walked out of the bathroom to hear the grunting and groaning, which I misinterpreted as gastric pains or a coronary. It was neither.

As I walked back into the council chambers I saw the numbed face of the mayor as he tried to sort the mess out amicably.

No wonder he isn't running for another term. God bless the person that takes over the job.

Rockville's city council is hopelessly fractured.

Maybe they need C.J. Peel.

Editor's Notebook by Brian J. Karem

sat in the back of the nearly vacant council chambers eating powdered coffee creamer from a round canister with a long spoon. His crisp khaki pants were tucked into his oversized brown cowboy boots and his massive white hat was tipped at angle on his pudgy, cherubic face.

Whenever anyone on the council voted in a manner he didn't like, he merely cleared his throat and said something like, "Darlin'" and the vote changed.

When I worked in Laredo Texas I covered county and city council meetings for a time. On the county side was a Salvador Dali-like councilman who loved to twirl his mustache like Snidely Whiplash, and he spent a huge chunk of county money turning the green lawn in front of the courthouse into a sand-swept landscape reminiscent of "Melting Watches" - complete with a rusty old wagon wheel and cattle skull.

The mayor of said city, at the time, was the only Italian living in town - and he dressed like he was straight out of Central Casting from the Sopranos. Most reporters always thought it was curious that in a town that was 99 percent Hispanic, the mayor was an Italian with a Brooklyn accent.

Of course just north of Laredo, in San Antonio, there were other curious characters on the county and city councils. My favorite was Mayor Henry Cisneros who felt compelled to confess to an extra-marital affair on the front lawn of his home - in two languages, in front of cameras, for two hours. Catholic guilt I guess.

I could go on, but the purpose isn't to melt into reverie of the "good ole' days", rather it is a long-winded way of saying, "Just when you think you've seen it all . . ."

I am referring to a recent meeting of the Rockville City Council. I showed up this week to publicly announce that for the first time in many years The Montgomery County Sentinel is expanding.

County immigration problems heard downtown

Just about every special-interest group along with many conservatives and liberals hate the immigration plan supported by Bush and a bipartisan group of elected officials on Capitol Hill.

by Gabe Caggiano

You don't have to tell residents of Montgomery County the system is broken. MS-13 has a well-established foothold in this area and the new day laborer center in Derwood has already drawn fire, literally and figuratively.

Residents in the county don't have answers, but know there are some very serious problems with the way we conduct immigration business.

Critics on the right say the plan is nothing short of an unmitigated disaster in the making, as it offers amnesty for 12 million illegals and creates a complicated merit system for eventual citizenship. Part of the bill requires illegal aliens to pay $5,000 and wait a dozen years to become U.S. citizens. It is far more likely most illegals will pay nothing and continue to work anywhere a U.S. employer will hire them. As for citizenship? Who needs it if you are already here, your kids are going to U.S.

schools unquestioned and no one is knocking at the door?

Pat Buchanan offers up a scary statistic about what has been going on for the last decade or so. According to Buchanan, just in the last five years, six million illegals tried to cross the Mexican border into the U.S., and 1 in 12 - 500,000 - had a criminal record.

In the 1990s, according to Buchanan's numbers, two million white people left California and just last year another 100,000 left. The "Anglo" population of the Golden State is down to 43 percent and continues to fall. Whites are now a minority in Texas and New Mexico. In Pat's world, America is disappearing into a sea of strange people from strange places that take pride in not assimilating into the American way of life.

But liberals aren't happy with the immigration bill either. The League of United Latin American Citizens doesn't like it because the bill constricts family-based immigration.

LULAC also opposes the bill because it would require laborers to return home for a year after each two-year work period. Temporary workers would be allowed a total of three two-year visas.

Confused? Get in line. This bill is a red-tape nightmare that will make going to the DMV seem like a picnic on the Eastern Shore. There is no way this convoluted labyrinth of rules and stipulations will fly because of one very glaring problem: not enough illegal aliens here will be able to follow the rules and will give up trying. And who can blame them? The bureaucratic infrastructure doesn't exist to track down 12 million illegals right now - never mind tag and mark in the future to keep track of their residence eligibility.

The prevailing wisdom inside the Beltway right now is that President Bush is desperate to get something down in the plus column because he is running out of time to build a positive legacy for himself. This isn't the ticket, pal.

Already the infighting among senators and members of the House has reached a fever pitch, and the immigration bill is barely fresh out of the egg. This thing will get torn apart and held up by gridlock, and it will never pass. Even Harry Reid has admitted emotions are running too high this week to continue debate on the bill, and it will be shelved for further discussion until June. Expect plenty of fireworks on the Hill prior to those on the National Mall on July 4.

I rest my case, along with Falwell, who may rest in peace

To the editor:

How dare you make fun of a great man like Jerry Falwell (The Ghost of Bryan 5/17). And who is William Jennings Bryan? Why would you compare a great man like Falwell to Mr. Bryan and why did you insist on making it sound like all of Falwell's followers are stupid?

He was a man of God who taught that all Christians should be involved with and change our government to make sure we live out the meaning of Christ's word.

For too long we have listened to the amoral preachings of the leftists and where has it got this once proud country?

If we had more people like Jerry Falwell we sure wouldn't have to put up with you.

T. Thomas
Wheaton

Hey, at least you tried

To the editor:

Another example of the liberal media - making fun of Jerry Falwell now that he's dead.

I've tried and tried to understand your thinking, but it doesn't make any sense to me. Some things aren't to be questioned. Some times faith is all we have.

G. Russell

Well, we like him too

To the editor:

Thanks to Wayne Goldstein and the Civic Federation for giving us an unvarnished look at the problems of the Board of Education. For too long it seems like we've been given sanitized versions of what goes on - particularly when we watch television news.

Wayne at least puts things into perspective. Again, thanks.

He covered "The New Kid" — but he ain't one

To the editor:

I had never read a David Cannon column before. I was told to look it up because he was covering a play at the Imagination Stage and I like their productions.

Cannon hit the nail on the head about "The New Kid" and the problems a young Vietnamese boy faced in coming to America.

The production was superlative, but Cannon's critique remarkable. Is he new to the paper?

LEGAL MATTERS

Dividing up the spoils after a divorce

Divorce proceedings are among the more thorny types of cases with which courts must wrestle. In addition to issues such as child custody, if the parties cannot agree then the trial court may have to resolve monetary disputes such as alimony or child support. The court may also need to address a monetary award to balance out the financial position of the former spouses. The case of Gordon v. Gordon, decided last week by Maryland's intermediate appellate court, illustrates how this works.

Maryland's Family Law Article codifies detailed laws established by the legislature that govern family law or divorce proceedings. Among those provisions are those empowering a trial judge to make a marital property award, usually monetary in nature, from one spouse to another. The purpose of such an award has been described by the courts as a way to counterbalance any unfairness that may result from actual distribution of property acquired during the marriage.

In making such an award, the court must consider a number of factors spelled out in the law, in addition to whether alimony should be awarded, to balance out inequities of income between spouses. In determining such an award, the court is required to determine what is marital property acquired jointly during the marriage, what is the value of that property, and, if it determines that a monetary award is proper to balance the equities rights of the parties, what the proper amount should be.

The court is also now allowed by statute to actually order transfer of title to specific property, such as a house, in resolving the financial disputes of divorcing spouses. It was this provision that caused the trouble in resolving the financial issues in Gordon v. Gordon. According to the appellate court's opinion, the parties were willing to divide up their marital property by transfer of title to specific property. However, the wife claimed that she had put $30,000 of money she brought into the marriage into purchase of the family home — and she wanted her money back. The husband claimed she had made a gift to him of this contribution, an argument that the trial judge rejected.

The parties had titled the house jointly as husband and wife, known as tenants by the entireties. The trial judge therefore rightly concluded that this was marital property. The law does allow the court to consider a party's contribution of non-marital assets as a factor in making a marital award. The judge ordered, as part of his resolution of the various financial disputes between the parties, that $30,000 "off the top" be paid to the wife to compensate her for this contribution of money acquired before the marriage to the purchase of the house.

The appellate court reversed the trial judge's decision and sent the case back to the trial judge to revisit the award or at least explain a basis for the award consistent with the statute. While the trial judge had commented on other factors besides the cash contribution in making the award, such as length of the marriage, fault for the breakup and relative financial contributions, it was the reference to reimbursing the wife for this cash contribution that gave the appellate court pause. An adjustment for such a contribution, the court said, can only be made after consideration and weighing of all the factors for a monetary award set forth in the law.

This illustrates the difficulties a trial judge goes through when divorcing spouses cannot resolve their differences themselves.

Avoiding those nasty little tax traps

It is unfortunate that many homebuyers and home sellers neglect to consult with experts and sometimes enter into situations that may not be in their best interest. There are several common situations associated with real-estate transactions that seem beneficial but may actually incur a tax liability to those involved. The situations are the "short sale," rebate programs and the use of a down-payment assistance program.

The short sale has gained popularity recently as a sluggish market has forced some desperate home sellers to reduce the price of their home below what is actually owed. A short sale is when the lender agrees to accept an amount that is less than the payoff amount in order to sell a home. The concept is simple although the process is sometimes problematic. Although there is no net profit from a short sale, the financially challenged home seller can find some relief when they engage in such a process.

Although the short sale can help you out of a mortgage crisis, the IRS looks at the difference between the actual mortgage payoff and the negotiated payoff as a financial gain to you. You will most likely be issued a 1099 at the end of the year by your lender.

Another popular practice that seems beneficial but may have some liability is the rebate program. Rebates are offered to homebuyers and home sellers as a business incentive from organizations, brokers and Realtors to use their services. Some organizations and credit unions offer buyer rebates as a value-added service to its members if an affiliated broker or Realtor is used. For example, Costco offers rebates to its members of up to 0.75 percent of the price of the home when affiliated service providers are used. USAA offers its members up to $3,100 when the MoversAdvantage® program is used. If you participate in such a program, then you may receive a 1099 as you may have incurred a tax liability.

Although the HUD and the IRS have scrutinized them, millions nationwide have used down-payment assistance to assist in the purchase of a home. Down-payment assistance programs are non-profit organizations that assist homebuyers with limited funds to purchase a home by providing the money needed for their down payment. The funds provided to the home buyer are typically received by the program as a gift from the home seller. These programs have been criticized as being a circle scheme that funnels extra money from the home seller to the homebuyer to assist in the purchase of the home, circumventing the underwriting guidelines.

Last year the IRS revoked the non-profit status of some of these programs, citing that that the amount given to the program from the seller is directly related to the amount provided to the buyer. Additionally, the amounts in question are only provided to the program if the sale closes. If you use such a program, then you should consult the IRS on the tax-empt status of the program as well as any tax liability you may incur.

As any real-estate transaction may have tax ramifications, you should always consult a tax expert for advice.

FEDERATION CORNER

You know of course this means war

By Wayne Goldstein
MCCF President

A search of one news archives of the last seven or more years shows how MCPS Superintendent Jerry Weast, who continues to maintain an iron grip on our county's secondary public-education system, eventually turned his cold war against special education into a hot one. The archives reveal a superintendent trying since 1999 to figure out what to do with special-education students. He has appeared willing at times to spend money to help them - but just as willing to consider other more subtle "cold war" ways to "deal" with the problem they represent to him. The latest turn in this years' long effort - now an active "hot war" - is to disperse and even hide them throughout the county's 200 regular schools so that their persistently low test scores will have a minimal impact on the reputation of an education bureaucrat obsessed with raising test scores by any means necessary.

Consider excerpts from these articles from the Washington Post as a road map perhaps pointing inevitably toward Weast's latest scheme to close Special-Education Learning Centers along with the Mark Twain School and Kingsley Wilderness Project and cause their concentration of low-scoring students to disappear into the larger system:

December 14, 1999: "An African-American male who acts up in class, sasses a teacher or gets in a fight at a Montgomery County school is more likely to be labeled emotionally disturbed than a white student. And, according to a new report, he is more likely than an emotionally disturbed white male to be bused to the county's most restrictive school [the Mark Twain School]. This disparity shows up most clearly in two sets of maps that Superintendent Jerry D. Weast will present today to the Board of Education... [T]he maps show that most white students identified as emotionally disturbed are sent to special programs in their nearby home schools... The curriculum is 'watered down,' said Weast's executive assistant.

October 10, 2003: "Thirty Maryland elementary schools -- most from the Washington area -- failed to meet standards required by the No Child Left Behind law because they assisted thousands of children who have disabilities or limited English skills on a key standardized test, state and local officials said yesterday... Terms of the new federal law's [No Child Left Behind] testing requirements clash with decades-old legislation that requires some children to receive special assistance in the classroom and on examinations... Montgomery County superintendent Jerry D. Weast said they are concerned that if the federal government does not resolve the conflict soon, students still learning English or in special-education classes will be blamed for the undesirable "needs improvement" label attached to schools that fail to meet state-imposed standards... Weast said that in Montgomery, the scores were invalidated for 461 special-education students and 371 students still learning English..."

November 13, 2003: "High school students throughout Montgomery county could choose from a wide range of career and technology programs not far from their home schools under a proposal in superintendent Jerry D. Weast's capital budget request... Weast's capital budget proposal also suggests a study of whether the Mark Twain School, which serves 123 middle and high school students with emotional disabilities, should be taken over by a private provider next fall. Since 1996 the Office of Civil Rights at the U.S. Department of Education has been asking the school system to address the racial disparities in special-education placements and has noted Twain specifically... Weast said... that such a change [privatization] could address the fact that not all of Twain's teachers have intensive training in the subjects they teach, contrary to the federal No Child Left Behind Act..."

January 31, 2004: "School superintendents representing 17 Washington-area districts and two Catholic school systems presented a plan yesterday to fix what they consider the most damaging part of the federal No Child Left Behind law: the annual testing of nearly all disabled and limited English-speaking students... Weast complained this year that schools in his district judged not to have made adequate progress under the law were penalized for giving special accommodations -- such as teachers reading parts of the test -- in accordance with special-education law.

April 27, 2004: "About 75 people offended by a school system attorney's jokes about special-education students and their parents marched up Rockville Pike yesterday, rallying at the Montgomery County Board of Education with signs such as 'Attitudes are Barriers to Education.' The attorney... presented a satirical 'newscast' at a conference last year attended by special-education lawyers who represent school systems. Among his jokes: special-education students celebrating that they were awarded new parents; congressmen discussing whether they could get an aide to provide them with sex as a special-education service; and a sportscast-like play-by-play of how a school system denied a family the placement sought for a child... [The school system hearing officer] recommended that the school system take no action, and Chief Operating Officer [COO]... concurred. 'I find no violation of [school system] policy or regulation,' [the COO] wrote in a letter to complainants."

December 15, 2004: "The student achievement initiatives also include $3.3 million for improving special education, the largest allocation ever in Montgomery schools. The 2006 budget creates space for 54 additional special-education teachers and speech pathologists, as well as new staff members for preschool special education."

June 28, 2005: "The Bush administration has sided with school systems in a special-education dispute between a disabled student's parents and the Montgomery County public schools that is before the U.S. Supreme Court... 'Public officials, including public school officials, are presumed to act in good faith compliance with their legal obligations,' [U.S. Solicitor General] Clement said in the brief. 'Thus, where, as here, a party alleges that those officials violated their legal duties, the complaining party generally bears the burden of proof.' ... In Schaffer v. Weast, the plaintiff is a former Montgomery student named Brian Schaffer who doctors said has attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder.

At this week's BOE meeting, Weast held court with five high school principals to praise himself effusively by praising them for their schools being in the top 100 high schools, according to Newsweek Magazine, based on the numbers of students taking AP exams and getting certain scores. He also claimed that all 23 MCPS high schools are in the top 3 percent of U.S. high schools. Since Weast's greatest strength is slicing and dicing numbers and percentages to create the best possible result -- regardless of the facts -- this latest performance instead illustrates how important image is and why any student who does not add to this never-ending public polishing of that image must be dealt with -- one way or the other.

One Little Girl: One Big Difference

Rockville girl vows to make a difference with bicycle helmets

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

When seventh-grade Tilden Middle School student Paige Keller's friend was hit and nearly killed by a car last year, she knew she wanted to do something to prevent accidents like that from happening again.

Her idea: use the money from her recent Bat Mitzvah to buy 57 bicycle helmets, and give them to the city of Rockville to be distributed at bicycle and pedestrian safety sessions in Rockville schools.

"I learned that it's important to do things for other people," Keller said. "We have all these things for ourselves, but we need to give to other people, too. It might help save lives."

Keller registered for the public comment period at the Rockville city council meeting Monday night tell the council what she had done. Several council members said they were extremely impressed by her efforts.

"Paige Keller, what a noble, noble gesture young lady," said Councilwoman Phyllis Marcuccio. "I hope this is the beginning of many more, and I hope your classmates will take example."

Councilman Robert E. Dorsey agreed with Marcuccio.

"This young woman shows such significant maturity; she's got it," Dorsey said. "This is the solution to the human element. You've realized that you have to share what you have... To have captured that bit of wisdom at such a young age; you've got it."

Paige went to the city council meeting with her mother, Melissa, her father Todd, her younger brother Chase, and Sadie, her younger sister.

"We're just very, very proud of her," Todd Keller said. "I felt like when she went to the county council, it gave her an affirmation from others besides the rabbi and her family...I thought that was a neat way to round it out."

Rockville mayor and council square off over budget

Third dot: Mayor Larry Giammo, upset with the manner in which Robbins rebuked city staff, began to quarrel with Robbins.

"Here we are again where staff is being demonized," Giammo said, referring to previous incidents in which he had said councilmembers had treated staff unfairly.

Robbins replied, "Please Mr. Mayor, don't do this. You know better than that. Please don't do this. You're too good a person; don't do it."

Giammo said, "Let me know when I can finish. Can I finish uninterrupted, please? The council wanted to ask staff to come back with their suggestions with how they might move some money around... If the council doesn't want to follow that suggestion, it doesn't have to be any more divisive or destructive than necessary."

Robbins and the mayor continued to argue.

"I just don't want to hear the words 'deferred' and 'money' when I speak about these items," Robbins said. "We have spent money galore here, money galore, and to think that the people who called me and said they saw on the Web that these playground replacements weren't going to happen... they couldn't believe it. They know the kind of money that has been thrown, frankly, at some other things that I'm not going to get into here... but again, no one who knew Rockville would ever send out a memo asking for cuts like this."

The final dot: Robbins, unannounced to those at the meeting, was the one who told at least one of the PTA members at the meeting about the cuts, said Kate Savage, vice president of the Wootton, Churchill, Richard Montgomery and Rockville area clusters for the Montgomery County PTA, and one of the speakers at the city council meeting. Savage said that she would have gone before the council even if she had found out about the cuts from a different source.

As for the other PTA members at the meeting, Judy Casey, who did not speak during the public comment period, said Bernardo had told her about the cuts. Bernardo, when asked for comment, said that if someone wanted to know whether Robbins had told her about the cuts, that person would have to ask Robbins. The councilwoman had not answered calls for comment by press time.

In the end, almost three hours after the public comment period had ended, the council unanimously approved all of the budget cuts recommended by city staff, necessary to make room for a one-cent reduction in property taxes next year proposed by Councilwoman Phyllis Marcuccio and agreed to by the council several sessions ago.

Most of the city staff's recommendations to cut money from the budget involved temporary hiring freezes, as well as the postponement of two landscaping projects.

The cuts for playground equipment would not affect public safety, said Burt Hall, director of the Rockville parks and recreation department, at the city council meeting. Hall said that the city would still continue its weekly, citywide inspections of playground equipment uninterrupted, and that all the cuts meant was that purchases of new equipment for two playgrounds would be delayed for a year.

As far as cuts in funds for traffic-safety improvements near Wootton High School, Scott Ullery, the Rockville city manager, said some of those improvements, such as changing traffic signal times to decrease congestion, could be made free of charge. The other improvements, Ullery noted, hadn't even been decided upon yet. When they were, revenue from the new speed camera program in Rockville could be used to make up the difference, Ullery said.

"[The budget] involves choices, and I thought these were the choices that would have the least impact on the community," Ullery said at the city council meeting.

Referring to the relatively tense atmosphere afterward, Ullery added, "I certainly bear some responsibility for the flair-up in there."

City staff had apologized to the council during the meeting for not having been clearer that cuts in funds for playground equipment and Wootton Parkway improvements did not equate to a decrease in public safety.

Councilman Robert E. Dorsey, referring not only to members of the Wootton PTA but also to other people who spoke at the city council meeting, cautioned citizens from jumping to conclusions about the city finances in the future.

"I caution a lot of us at being too eager at sharing our thinking on a project or a problem without the benefit of a lot of input," Dorsey said. "The budget that is going through has many, many, many, more moving parts than many of us realize."

phased out during the next six years.

"My concerns notwithstanding, we have heard very clearly from parents who are opposed to the plan to close the learning centers," Weast said in January. "We believe this revised proposal will give us time to work with the community as we transition to a more inclusive setting for our special education students."

Most of the people at the protest, waving signs, one or two carrying loudspeakers, were parents of disabled children. They met in front of the county board of education's headquarters, and later attended a board meeting.

"One friend of mine pointed out that Weast's whole thing is that these secondary learning centers have become dumping grounds for minority students, and yet we're all white, middle-class parents," Taylor said. "Since when do white, middle-class parents fight for minority students?"

Diane Levitus, a protestor and MCPS occupational therapist who works with disabled students, said the county was making a mistake.

"You can't put special needs children in a regular classroom and expect them to succeed," said Levitus said. "I worked with a ton of schools, and with a ton of special ed teachers, and some of them are lousy. But the vast majority are great, and the students need them."

Twelve Montgomery County families filed an appeal in March with the Maryland State Board of Education to stop the phase-out.

"The State Board can substitute its judgment for that of the County Board because this decision was arbitrary, unreasonable, and illegal," the appeal reads. "The decision was contrary to sound educational policy and is an abuse of discretionary powers. A reasonable mind could not have reasonably reached the decision reached by the Local Board [of Education]."

County attorneys have filed a motion to dismiss with the state board of education. There was no date set for a review of the appeal as of publication.

In 2005, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Weast's favor when MCPS refused to pay the tuition of a county student with a learning disability whose parents felt that the county schools could not adequately educate their son, and had thus sent him to a private school.

Rockville moves on water pollution, but businesses worry

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

Rockville will finally be able to give polluters more than a slap on the wrist if a proposed ordinance to curb water pollution passes in the city council, but some business owners say the ordinance might penalize them unfairly.

Under current Rockville law, water pollution can only be labeled as either a public nuisance or littering, the maximum penalty for which is $100. The new ordinance, which is expected to be adopted July 2, would create Rockville's first-ever penalty specific to water pollution and would increase the fine to $1,000 for each violation. In addition, the ordinance would add a position for a city inspector to investigate violations.

"Property owners are responsible for what goes down the sewer drain on their property," said Rockville Mayor Larry Giammo. "We want to make sure that we're not getting chemicals or other pollutants in there that are either going to be harmful to the sewer system or harmful to the watershed."

But Shina Kim, owner of AAMCO Transmissions, an auto-repair shop on Rockville Pike, said she was worried about penalties if her shop were to ever accidentally discharge oil into the numerous repair-bay drains.

"Everybody knows the city of Rockville is pretty tough when it comes enforcing things like this," Kim said. "I'm all for a clean environment, but as a business owner, without you even knowing something could contaminate the water, and for them to just fine you $1,000, that's tough. So I'm split in the middle about this."

Kim said her shop collects oil and other discharges into a large container, which they paid to have periodically emptied, as is required by law. But some auto-repair shops, as well as restaurants and apartment complexes, the other major water polluters in Rockville, get away with pouring their waste down the drain, said Mark Charles, the city's chief of environmental management.

RM construction problems lead to delay in opening

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

Houston, we have a problem: the Richard Montgomery Rockets won't be able to move into their new high school until winter break - four months after the school was supposed to open in August - because of a litany of problems since construction began, said Richard G. Hawes, director of the department of facilities management for Montgomery County Public Schools.

As reported by The Sentinel on May 3, school engineers discovered $500,000 in design errors by Benatec Associates, the company in charge of the new Richard Montgomery building's electrical system. Besides having to correct the errors Benatec left behind, MCPS engineers have also been slowed by a City of Rockville mandate to bury overhead electrical wires that run through school property, as well as other issues such as permit delays for the demolition of the old Park Street Elementary School where the new Richard Montgomery building now stands.

"That alone, plus the problems we had with Benatec and some other issues, have put us behind schedule," Hawes said. "And rather than try and rush in there in September with the building not fully completed - and these issues that would be very difficult to deal with when everybody's in the building - we decided to postpone the opening."

In a memo to the Board of Education, Superintendent Jerry Weast said he agreed with Hawes' assessment, and that the delay would not affect other schools.

"A mid-year move will not impact other schools on the modernization schedule since the Richard Montgomery High School students can remain in the existing building until the new facility is completed," Weast wrote. "We have experience moving modernized schools during winter break and do not anticipate insurmountable problems moving Richard Montgomery High School in December."

Richard Montgomery principal Moreno Carrasco said he was disappointed by the delay but that he was still happy to move into a new building.

"The encouraging thing is that we are getting a new building," Carrasco said. "These type of things happen because construction is not sure thing. So we want to make it as easy as possible on the teachers and students when we move in there next year."

Hawes said the delay would not affect the project's overall budget, which is still about $70 million.

Rockville Town Center's pavement delays are finally fixed, according to the Rockville city manager.

Full Rockville pavement ahead

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

The good news is that construction on Maryland Avenue and Gibbs Street by the Rockville Town Square should be finished in time for KC and the Sunshine Band, along with the rest of Hometown Holidays, this Saturday.

The not-so-good news is that in order to figure out which of the five construction companies in charge of paving those roads is to blame for the $1.5 million in extra construction costs, city staff have hired - wait for it - another construction company.

"Basically, the whole forensic end of this thing is assigning responsibility," said Scott Ullery, Rockville city manager. "We have consultants that designed it [the pavement], we have contractors who built it, we have a consultant who oversaw the construction of it and did the project management. So we hired this consulting engineer to sort it out - starting with what went wrong - the scene of the crime, if you will."

City engineers first noticed an uneven settling in the pavement at Maryland Avenue and Gibbs Street, one of the primary entrances into the Town Square, in late April. Instead of asphalt, the design called for cement "pavers," also called paving stones: brick-like pieces that can be used to form patterned walkways and roads.

Engineers say that melted snow and rainwater loosened the gravel laid underneath the pavers sometime in winter. When cars and other heavy equipment subsequently drove over them, the pavers shifted, resulting in patches of uneven road.

Rockville originally hired five companies to pave Maryland Avenue and Gibbs Street:

- The Whiting-Turner Contracting Company, the company in charge of that hired the GT Contracting Corporation, which laid the pavers

- Macris, Hendricks & Glascock, the company that designed the shape and style of the pavement

- ECS Mid-Atlantic LLC, the company original company that tested the soil underneath the pavers, which was subsequently released from its contract with the city

- KCI Technologies, another company that tested the soil beneath the pavers

None of these companies have publicly admitted to date that the construction error was their fault, so to figure out who is responsible the city attorney's office has hired Century Engineering, a consulting firm. Century is not only investigating the construction error, it is also redesigning some of Maryland Avenue and Gibbs Street.

The investigation into the repavement process has not only been a frequent topic of discussion between the city council and its staff; it has also become an election-year issue. Mayoral candidate Drew Powell has frequently criticized city hall for a lack of progress in recouping its losses, and implied that the delay has been a result of a hesitancy to point fingers in-house.

"It doesn't appear as though the investigation is actually commencing," Powell said. "The foxes are watching the henhouse, so to speak."

But Ullery said that in addition to providing expert analysis on the construction issues behind the repavement, one of the reasons for hiring Century Engineering was that it could also provide an outside perspective on the overall picture of what went wrong.

"We wanted to get somebody independent who wasn't involved," he said.

Ullery said that the cost of hiring Century Engineering would be about $15,000, and might be recouped after the eventual litigation against whoever is responsible.

"What I want to go after - and you're not guaranteed success - but in principle we shouldn't have to pay for anything more than materials and labor that should have been in there to begin with," Ullery said.

County to approve budget

By Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

The Montgomery County Council on Thursday will approve a $4.1 billion operating budget for fiscal year 2008, which starts July 1.

The approval comes after two months of negotiations, most of which concerned the county's greatest single expense: the public school system.

"It's always a big discussion," said Council President Marilyn J. Praisner of the school's budget, which traditionally receives about half of the county's funds. "This year it felt more contentious than usual."

Much of the wrangling over this year's budget came after County Executive Isiah Leggett recommended giving the school system $1.97 billion - almost $20 million less than the school board requested.

School employees, parents and others turned out by the dozens during budget hearings to protest the recommendation, which some said would have affected teacher salaries and programs for poor and disadvantaged students.

The council solved the problem in part by transferring $7.85 million of state money from the school system's Capital Improvement Program, which funds school construction, to the operating budget. In total, the council approved all but $6 million of the school board's request, or $14 million more than Leggett proposed.

"Things always look dire and scary in March," said Councilman George Leventhal at a press conference last week. "But by May we've usually figured out a solution."

breaker" tax credit, which officials estimate will give eligible residents an extra $685. Homeowners who are at least 70 years old will receive an added 25 percent circuit-breaker credit under a law passed by the council last year.

"We've managed, I think, to pass a good budget in a short amount of time that addresses fiscal concerns but still gives residents some real benefits," said Councilwoman Nancy Floreen.

With the county and state both facing financial shortfalls next year the council focused on creating a budget that provides money for "basic services" like education, affordable housing and public safety, said Praisner.

"It is a challenging time for local governments, and Montgomery county is not immune to that," said Praisner. County officials have estimated that Montgomery county will face a $270 million shortfall next year. In addition, the state is facing a projected $1.5 billion structural deficit.

"In the issues of the state and what may happen to Montgomery county because of these unresolved fiscal issues, the waters ahead are very rocky," said Praisner.

“Things always look dire and scary in March, but by May we’ve usually figured out a solution.”

— Councilman George Leventhal

The county's budget for fiscal year 2008 keeps taxes at their current rate and more than doubles the county's property tax credit for owner-occupied residences from $221 to $613. With the credit, 80 percent of the county's residents who live in the home they own will see their property taxes go down next year.

In addition, households earning less than $64,000 will benefit from the county's augmented "circuit-

The Greene Turtle has opened up in Germantown and promises to be a popular sports bar.

Time is right for the turtle in Germantown

By Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

A popular local bar and restaurant chain has finally made its way to Montgomery County.

The Greene Turtle, which has 13 locations in Maryland, opened its newest restaurant and grill in Germantown in March. By all accounts, it couldn't have come soon enough.

"We were waiting for it," said Jason Maxine of Germantown. "It's the best sports bar in the state; I don't know what took them so long to get one to Montgomery County."

The Greene Turtle has several branches in the D.C./ Baltimore area and on the Eastern Shore. Their first branch, in Ocean City, opened 30 years ago.

"They've been around for a long time," said Diane Maxine. "I remember going to the shore and stopping in at [the Ocean City branch] decades ago." Diane said she prefers the Greene Turtle over other bars because it's local.

"There's something neat about having a place that is unique to Maryland," said Diane. "When people come in from out of town, I try to take them to the Turtle."

All of The Greene Turtle's locations put an emphasis on local sports teams; the Laurel branch hosts Gary Williams' weekly radio show during the Terps basketball season.

"We really pride ourselves on being Maryland's best sports bar," said General Manager Andrew Gorman. "We're a part of the community in a way that most other restaurants are not."

The Greene Turtle's Germantown location keeps the chain's reputation as a premier sports bar intact. It boasts 40 televisions and a video wall that can split into as many as nine screens, so you can bet that your game will be on. In addition, each booth has its own smaller television, a feature that many patrons enjoy.

"It's nice," said Brian Sorens of Gaithersburg. "If there's a game on the big screen but they're not giving it sound, I can watch it here and turn up the volume so I can hear what's going on."

The Greene Turtle's menu features all the staples of a good sports bar, including burgers, cheese fries, wings and beer. But it also has a good selection of wraps and salads and a few crab and seafood selections.

Happy hours run from Monday through Friday from 3 to 7 p.m. and include $1 off all domestic beers.

DANCE

Dancing Henry V stirs with provocative modern moves

By David Cannon
Sentinel Arts Critic

To end their current theater season, the University of Maryland hosted the Pick Up Performance Company's provocative dance piece Dancing Henry V. This was before Maryland knew about the ongoing Shakespeare in Washington festival, but then this piece has only so much connection with Shakespeare's history play. It is about a much more modern day war than the Bard wrote about.

Shakespeare's history plays always present a problem for modern audiences, even though Henry V is one of the more famous ones. Despite the long-forgotten battles with France, the play is a stirring martial piece – this is where the king gives the famous “Band of Brothers” speech – but choreographer David Gordon turns this piece on its head. He takes this surprisingly pro-war play and makes it a very anti-war piece. And anti-one particular war at that.

Gordon is a key figure in the post-modern dance scene and has both a visual flair and impish sense of humor in this piece. His forte is mixing genre, which this play abounds in, including having his wife Valda Setterfield provide narration throughout. Gordon freely mixes the end of the Henry IV plays – with Falstaff's death – with this current play, and even hints at the events in the Henry VI plays to come. Setterfield tells us she will provide narration and connecting bits throughout “and on occasion, opinion. Not mine, Gordon's.”

Gordon's opinions are not about Shakespeare but about quite a few modern wars, especially Iraq. When the King asks if the war with France will be a just war, an archbishop replies “just enough.” Setterfield notes that “nothing takes one's mind off [bad economic news] than a war” and later adds that in the old days, the kings had to lead the armies into battle instead of staying in a comfortable office. Despite some professed innocence of the narrator, we know where these jibes are aimed at, and they hit pretty regularly.

This would all be turgid stuff if it weren't for Gordon's visual flair. A pile of junk on stage at the start of the show becomes the props for the whole dance, including soldier's tents and battlefield gear. The dancers use chairs and sticks to add rhythms and gestures to the already warlike score for the big battle scene at Agincourt.

Most amazing of all is when the British sail to France – several dancers are on sheets that other dancers pull across the stage. The effect is simple, striking and very effective. One can put up with a lot – whatever one's political views – when the visuals remain this striking.

One final note – the music is by Sir William Walton, mostly from his film score for Sir Laurence Olivier's Henry V, although other Walton pieces (especially his lovely orchestration of Bach's Sheep Shall Safely Graze) are also used. Walton was a contemporary of Britten and Vaughn Williams and once highly admired. He is seldom played these days and he is now best known for his farcical “Façade” suite. Even his praised to the sky First Symphony (premiered before it was finished) is seldom heard. The film score is Walton at his most accessible and most British, and it was worth attending Dancing Henry V if only for that musical treat.

This ends the current season at the University of Maryland. However, there is a very busy summer at Maryland this year. In June is the National Orchestra Institute, a top-notch student orchestra that will have many free performances and three Saturday evening concerts. This June those ticketed concerts will include such works as Richard Strauss' mammoth Alpine Symphony and Brahms' Fourth Symphony. Then in July is the William Kapell Piano Competition which includes the competition, recitals, master classes and lectures.

Plus the University of Maryland has announced their 2007-2008 season, which looks like one of their best yet. A few of the highlights includes several concerts with artists in residence the Kronos Quartet, the student production of the musical Urinetown, L. A Theater Works production of The Battle for the Pentagon Papers – A True Story, two performances of Schubert's Winterreise and the Latin jazz of the Spanish Harlem Orchestra.

An early American tale of crime and literature in Nest

By David Cannon
Sentinel Arts Critic

In the world premier of Nest at Signature Theater, there is a fascinating plot about early American literature that an English major like me finds fascinating. Too bad that's the subplot of the show because the main plot line is far less involving.

Bathsheba Doran received a commission from Signature to write about the life of Susanna Cox, whom artistic director Eric Schaeffer heard about while growing up in Pennsylvania. Cox remains one of the few women ever found guilty and hanged in America. Despite all the salacious details about Cox, an indentured servant who killed her illegitimate newborn child, the story never really gets that interesting in this retelling.

I think it is because Doran concentrates on the wrong aspects of the story. We go into detail about Cox's hopeless masters: the bored, down on his luck Joe and his uptight, overly formal wife Elizabeth. As Joe wastes his life away doing nothing around the farm, he and the overly naïve Susanna have an affair. It goes too far and while Joe gets away pretty much scot free, Susanna marches her way to the gallows.

But the critical episode of learning about the pregnancy, the delivery and murder of the child and the actual capture of Cox are quickly skipped over by the script, which spends the last third of its 90 minutes running time in prison as everyone wrestles over Susanna's soul. Meanwhile, the more interesting second plot rumbles along but it takes forever to join with the main story-line.

It has often been noted that soon after the American Revolution, everyone was calling for bold American artists to appear. They didn't, and it took over a generation for any decent literature to arrive (and nearly a century for American music). None of the writers from this period were very good – who reads Phillip Freneau or Charles Brockden Brown these days? Remember, our first true masterpiece, Nathaniel Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter, was not published until 1850.

So as apprentice writer Michael Grew starts working for (and occasionally against) Philadelphia publisher James Slaughter, there's real give and take here, and real stakes seem to be involved. Eventually these two will write bland, rhyming ballads concerning Susanna's crime and punishment, but in many ways the subplot is more involving than the main plot. Even Susanna's occasional fantasy conversations with Daniel Boone spring more from the literary subplot (all those fake tracts proclaiming Boone's heroism) than from the main story line.

Certainly Signature's production is strong. Anne Veal makes for a believably naïve but still appealing Susanna while Charlie Matthes makes her lover Jacob a mass of contradictions that ring true. Director Joe Calarco mounts this script with a sure eye for details and a swift pace.

Still, I think Nest tells the wrong story. A married man in an affair that ends badly – how many versions of that story can we find out there? How American literature blundered along aimlessly for the first few decades after the Revolution – now there's a subject rife with possibilities and seldom explored.

Nest continues at Signature Theater through June 24. For more information, call 1-800-955-5566.

MUSIC

Baroque: familiar and obscure

By David Cannon
Sentinel Arts Critic

As artistic director and conductor Daniel Abraham noted, the Bach Sinfonia has spent much of this year playing the big Baroque pieces such as Purcell's Dido and Aeneas and Handel's complete Water Music. So to end the season, it was interesting for the Sinfonia to perform an evening of smaller pieces, a Baroque Bouquet featuring familiar and more obscure works at the Woodside Methodist Church in Silver Spring.

The lesser-known works started the program, beginning with Telemann's Trumpet Concerto in D Major. One reason Telemann is not performed that often is that he wrote so much music – according to the program he wrote 44 passions, 40 operas, a mind numbing 3,000 cantatas and hundreds of instrumental works. Here's a man who needed to find a hobby.

Still the Trumpet Concerto is a lovely work, with Stanley Curtis as soloist on the valveless Baroque trumpet. That meant plenty of those distinctive peeling high notes that so mark this period. Curtis did a fine job in the opening slow movement, proving a trumpet can sing melody and Telemann gave the soloist plenty to do in those faster movements. The Sinfonia accompanied the soloist well throughout and was especially good in the third movement for strings alone.

Then a rare treat – a short solo cantata for soprano and continuo by Handel. The problem with Handel is that he wrote two choral works: The Messiah and everything else. There is plenty of great music in those other oratorios (I recently discovered Saul) and these short cantatas do not deserve their obscurity. Nel Dolce dell'oblio (Phyllis' Night Thoughts) is Handel in a pastoral vein with just two arias for soprano, each preceded by a short recitative. While hardly in league with Messiah, it was a short, pleasant piece and soloist Jacqueline Horner did a lovely job, along with Sarah Weiner on recorder.

Then just before intermission the Sinfonia went into far more familiar territory with Bach's Violin Concerto in E Major. This was the only piece I felt the Sinfonia could have done better. It was not because of soloist Wendy Harton Benner, who played well throughout, but because the small ensemble made this work sound undernourished and thin in places, and the faster movements seemed very stop and go.

Usually smaller instrumental forces do the exact opposite – they clarify melodic lines and allow for a swifter pace, but that did not occur here.

Then after intermission was the Baroque piece – the Pachelbel Canon. Hard to remember this work has only been wildly popular in the last 30 years (since it was used in the film Ordinary People). Abraham even joked "if anyone wants to renew their vows" since this work has become ubiquitous at weddings. Little to say about this piece except the Sinfonia did in "at Baroque tempo, not wedding tempo" which meant a faster, livelier pace, and they included the Gigue, which is often dropped. Here the melodic lines were clearer and the pace refreshingly brisk, like meeting an old friend wearing totally new attire.

Then all the soloists returned for Bach's Cantata 51 Jauchzet Gott in Allen Landen. While hardly obscure like the Handel, Bach's 200 odd cantatas are not played as much as they should be, and this solo cantata is a true gem. The opening is a virtuoso tour de force for soprano and trumpet, and in the center is a lovely slow aria. Then a chorale for soprano with busy string figuration that leads into the "Alleluia" finale, which is another virtuoso moment for vocalist and trumpet. It's a very tricky work to pull off for all concerned and the Sinfonia forces made it shine.

The Bach Sinfonia has announced its 2007-2008 season, although final dates should be available soon. Highlights include a free concert at Strathmore on Aug. 8 titled Songs from a London Pleasure Garden. The subscription program will include more cantatas by Handel and Bach in October, more music by Telemann in March, including that composer's Water Music and lesser known pieces from the early Baroque in the 17th century in May.

Memorial Day

May 28, 2007

Memorial Day Facts: Memorial Day is always celebrated the fourth Monday in May. Between the Revolutionary War and Gulf War, more than 26 million people have served our country. Nearly 900,000 never came home. The holiday traces its origins to the days following the Civil War, when many people decorated the graves of fallen soldiers with flowers. "Decoration Day" was first observed officially on May 30, 1868. In 1882 the name was changed to Memorial Day. In 1971, President Nixon declared it a national holiday.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY DELINQUENT TAXES — NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE OF TAX SALE OF REAL ESTATE IN MONTGOMERY COUNTY, MARYLAND

Notice is hereby given that the following is a list of real property for which taxes, refuse charges, WSSC charges, special improvement levies, service charges, and other fees or charges are due and in arrears to Montgomery County, municipalities in Montgomery County, and to the State of Maryland. The property owners listed are those that appear on the County tax rolls at the time of publication. If these amounts, plus interest and penalty due, are not paid before Monday, June 11, 2007, the Tax Collector will, on Monday June 11, 2007, in accordance with the provisions of the laws of the State of Maryland and Montgomery County Maryland, proceed with the public sale and accept sealed bids for the tax liens pertaining to the properties and/or property groups listed below. The tax sale program enables the County to collect all unpaid property taxes, charges, and fees. When a property tax lien is sold and the total amount due is paid by the purchaser, the County's lien on the property passes to the purchaser. The list of real property upon which amounts are due and in arrears is arranged in random groups for the purpose of bidding.

NOTICE TO PROSPECTIVE BIDDERS/PURCHASERS

1. The Tax Sale will be held on Monday, June 11, 2007, between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Eastern Time (ET).

2. The tax sale is open to the public. Prospective bidders should investigate the properties. There is no warranty, expressed or implied, that a property has a marketable title or that it contains the area of land which it is said to contain; therefore, the purchaser assumes all risks in that regard. Each tax lien pertaining to the parcel of property taken to tax sale will be sold as an entirety. No property tax lien will be sold for a sum less than the advertised price. Purchasers will receive a certificate of sale for each real property tax lien as required by law.

3. At the time this advertisement is prepared, all delinquent tax accounts from the various election districts will be divided into property groups consisting of approximately the same number of properties randomly selected. During the advertising period, May 17th through June 7th and up to the tax sale date, properties can be removed from groups predicated on payments received and other events deemed necessary by the County. Therefore, the final number of properties within each group can be less than advertised. The property groups will be numbered for identification.

4. In accordance with the legislation passed in 1998 by the Maryland State Legislature, the County utilizes a sealed bid process to conduct the tax sale. Bidders can bid on the tax lien in one property group, multiple property groups, or on any number of individual properties in the same or different groups. Bidders bidding on full groups will be given priority over bidders seeking to purchase individual properties.

5. All bids must include the following information to be considered:

- The name, address and daytime telephone number of the bidder
- The name to appear on the tax sale certificate.
- For group bids, the group number must be provided. For individual property tax lien bids, the tax account number of the individual properties as well as the associated group number must be provided.
- The bid must be expressed as a multiple (bid factor) of the full cash value of each property or, for group bids, all the properties in the group. For example, a group bid factor of 0.45 would indicate that the bidder is bidding 0.45 times the full cash value on all properties in the group. If a bidder bids on an entire group, then the bid factor must be the same for all individual properties within that group. If a bidder bids on multiple groups, then the bid factor may be different for each group. If a bidder bids on individual properties within a single group or multiple groups, then the bid factor may be different for each individual property.

6. Bids that do not include all the preceding information are not responsive. In the case where the bids are identical for the same group of properties, the winning bid will be selected by lottery no later than 9:00 a.m. ET on Tuesday, June 12, 2007.

7. Bids must be received between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. ET on Monday, June 11, 2007. No bids will be accepted before or after those hours. Bids may be submitted by express mail, overnight or courier delivery, or in person. Bids should be addressed to the attention of "The Tax Sale Administrator," Division of Treasury, 255 Rockville Pike, Suite L-15, Rockville, MD 20850. Bids may also be submitted via e-mail to taxliensalebid.finance@montgomerycountymd.gov. All attachments must be MS Windows compatible. Faxed bids will not be accepted.

8. All successful bidders/purchasers will be notified by telephone no later than 10:00 a.m. ET on Tuesday, June 12, 2007. Notification will include the tax sale amount and the amount due for the high-bid premium. Bidders who are subject to a lottery will also be notified at that time. The successful bidder/purchaser is required to pay the full amount due as advertised plus any high-bid premium for all winning bids with payment received by the County no later than 4:00 p.m. ET on Tuesday, June 12, 2007. The method of payment is electronic funds transfer. The County will confirm with its bank the receipt of the payment. Wire payments must be directed to Wachovia, ABA #0550-0320-1 for credit to Montgomery County Maryland Depository Account No. 2000001048768

9. The high-bid premium is 20% of the amount by which the bid exceeds 40% of the property full cash value. In the event that the computation results in a negative high bid premium, the premium amount will be set to zero.

10. Successful bidders/purchasers who do not make payment for the full amount due for all winning bids by the specified time are considered non-compliant and excluded from the auction. At that time, the County reserves the right to make the award to the next highest bidder until all tax liens are sold. The Collector reserves the right to take appropriate action under TP 14-817(a)(3) including but not limited to the right to refuse to accept bids that are not made in good faith and the right to bar a purchaser or holder of a certificate from participating in future tax sales held by the County. At the County's option, property groups and/or individual properties not sold will be offered for sale, at a later date, to the highest bidder until sold.

11. There may be properties sold for which taxes were paid prior to the sale date or other circumstances which render the sale invalid or void. The County reserves the right to invalidate or void a sale at any time. In the event the County determines that a tax sale is invalid or void the County will, as the exclusive remedy available to the purchaser, reimburse the purchaser the tax sale purchase price paid, without interest, and any applicable high bid premium paid, without interest. Events that may invalidate a tax sale include, but are not limited to, bankruptcy filings prior to the tax sale, transfer errors on the assessor's records that cause the failure of notice to the proper property owner or sale of incorrect property, payment of taxes prior to the tax sale, issuance of a revised bill by the assessor, value changes by the assessor, erroneous service charges, service fees, special improvement levies, WSSC charges, or refuse charges. The tax sale bidder/purchaser assumes all risks of any irregularity of the sale and has no other remedy against the County. The County is not liable for and will not pay the purchaser any interest, costs, expenses or attorney fees associated with any invalid or void sale.

12. Tax sales are complex proceedings and the County recommends that you seek legal advice prior to participation in the annual tax sale.

13. The owner or other person having an estate or interest in the property tax lien sold has the right to redeem the property tax lien at any time until the right of redemption is finally foreclosed by an order of the Circuit Court (Tax Property Article, Section 14-827, Annotated Code of Maryland).

14. For tax lien sale information, please visit the County website at www.montgomerycountymd.gov/taxliensale

15. By participating in the Tax Sale, the bidder/purchaser agrees to accept and be bound by all of the terms and conditions of this Notice of Sale.

Welcome in the Summer . . .

Honor those we've lost.

Memorial Day

May 28, 2007

Memorial Day Facts: Memorial Day is always celebrated the fourth Monday in May. Between the Revolutionary War and Gulf War, more than 26 million people have served our country. Nearly 900,000 never came home. The holiday traces its origins to the days following the Civil War, when many people decorated the graves of fallen soldiers with flowers. "Decoration Day" was first observed officially on May 30, 1868. In 1882 the name was changed to Memorial Day. In 1971, President Nixon declared it a national holiday.

Conveyancing, recording and transfer taxes, state stamps, notary fees, examination of title, and all other costs of conveyance and settlement are to be at the expense of the purchaser. State and local property taxes, special or regular assessments, and public utility charges against the property, if any, shall be adjusted to the date of sale and thereafter shall be assumed by the purchaser.

What's in Learning Links this week?

 Two great bridges, two great athletes and "the human fly" all make This Week in History...

 Special Focus: The rest of our stories discuss the issue of free speech, particularly student free speech. Are you ready to explore this very important topic? Then check out this week's Learning Links!

DO
Students
have free Speech?

■ What free speech rights do students have?

■ Can they say anything they want at school?

■ Who decides what they can say or not say?

The answer to the last question is a good place to start.

As you know, students must follow rules in school.

They are not allowed to do certain things. For example, a student is not allowed to put up a sign at school saying bad things about a teacher. But suppose a student showed up at school one day with an armband that protested the Iraq War. Could a student do that? In some schools, the principal may say no, while the student claims that it is a right protected by free speech. When students and their parents disagree with the school principal, they may go to his or her supervisor and ask the supervisor to review the decision. Sometimes the supervisor may disagree with the principal and change the decision. But if the supervisor says that the principal is correct, the student and parents may choose to go to another higher office or to the courts to review the decision that was made.

Courts are the place where laws are interpreted. There are lower courts and higher courts, but the highest court in our country is the U.S. Supreme Court. The decisions made by that court carry a lot of weight. They base their decisions on the Constitution of the United States.

The Supreme Court has made several decisions in the past that affect the free speech of students. Remember, free speech has limits. The free speech of students has even more limits because the role of the school is to teach students, and their safety is a big concern. Some important Supreme Court decisions about student free speech include:

- ① Students cannot be required to salute the flag.
- ② Schools may bar (stop) student speech that is vulgar, lewd or offensive, that is, speech that is in bad taste or morally wrong.
- ③ Students may wear armbands to protest the Vietnam War and do not "shed their constitutional rights at the schoolhouse gate," a ruling in Tinker v. Des Moines Independent School District that strengthen student free speech rights.
- ④ Schools can put limits on what students can say in school newspapers that are sponsored by the school.

Now, the Supreme Court is about to make another important decision about student free speech. It is about something that happened five years ago. In 2002, some students at a high school in Alaska were allowed to go outside to see the Olympic torch passing by their school. The students knew that TV cameras would be present, so they made a large banner that said "Bong Hits 4 Jesus" and waited beside the road. The sign seem to say that the use of a certain drug was OK. The principal saw the banner, took it away, and suspended the student who had it for 10 days. The student said he had the right of free speech. The principal said she that she was taking away a sign that supported drug use. Who was right? The case went through many offices and into the courts before finally arriving at the U.S. Supreme Court. It will be their job to make the final decision. For some people, the school should not be involved in the free speech of students who are not in school. Others see it as the principal's right to monitor and determine what is right in school-sponsored activities.

Who will win this case? We are all waiting to see what happens. Meanwhile, students who work on the editorial staff of the student newspaper at Montgomery Blair H.S. have given their opinion. It follows this story. Read what they have written and see if you understand their arguments.

The following article is reprinted with permission from Silver Chips, the Montgomery Blair High School student newspaper. It is an unsigned editorial representing the views of the Silver Chips editorial board and not necessarily the school.

COURT: DON'T BE WRONG ON "BONG"

Supreme Court case could limit student free speech rights

Five years ago, Joseph Frederick, in what was surely one of the most controversial senior pranks in history, held up a banner bearing the slogan "Bong Hits 4 Jesus" as a TV crew tracking the Olympic torch passed by his high school in Juneau, Alaska. But Mr. Frederick never made it on TV, as Principal Deborah Morse crossed the street to the site where students had been released to watch the torch, confiscated Mr. Frederick's sign and suspended him for 10 days.

This banner is at the center of the Supreme Court case on student free speech.

Though this incident may seem inane, what began as a joke could permanently weaken students' first amendment rights unless the court takes action to uphold the tenets of student free expression put forth in the 1969 Tinker v. Des Moines School District case.

The Supreme Court is now faced with what is potentially the most important student free speech case in 19 years. Any decision by the court must include a ruling on whether or not Mr. Frederick's actions were carried out during a school-sponsored activity. If the high court sustains the rulings of the two lower courts, the demonstration will be treated as a field trip and therefore subject to the rules of free speech in a school setting.

However, if the court reverses and holds that Mr. Frederick did not display the poster in a school setting, the decision would set an oppressive standard in which student speech can be restricted even when the student is not at school. This, in turn, could muzzle student activism without materially contributing to the safety and security of the learning environment. As such, it would be prudent for the justices to rule with the lower courts on the issue.

The justices will also have to consider whether or not administrators should be allowed to restrict speech on two levels — speech that violates the school's mission and speech that promotes illegal activity. Ms. Morse claims that she removed the banner because it advocated an illegal activity that was contrary to the anti-drug policy of the school. Allowing administrators to restrict free speech on either level would give them too much power to stifle student speech.

Because the Tinker decision grants administrators the right to censor speech that causes a "substantial disruption" to students, the school mission provision is mostly irrelevant because disruptions tend to counteract the basic rules of school behavior. Giving administrators free reign to limit speech that contradicts a school's mission would mean administrators could revise school mission statements to prevent any types of speech.

Even more disturbing, a ruling in favor of limiting speech concerning illegal activity could criminalize student protest and civil disobedience. Mr. Frederick's attorneys have argued that his reference to "bong hits" was a legitimate message of protest in Alaska at the time because of controversy over a state ruling that the state constitution's right to privacy clause gave adults the right to possess small quantities of marijuana. Ruling that Ms. Morse was right to censor this protest sets a dangerous precedent that would have allowed administrators to put down anti-segregation demonstrations in the 1960s. Surely, students should be allowed to question the policies of their school and government without fear of punishment.

Though students have the most to lose in this case, the ruling could make administrators like Ms. Morse liable for violating constitutional rights despite acting in what they thought was a responsible manner. If even experienced Supreme Court justices could not easily determine whether or not Mr. Frederick's sign was protected speech, a principal hardly as familiar with legal precedent should not be held accountable for making the most prudent decision she could at the time. Ms. Morse was wrong to take away the sign, but she should still be afforded qualified immunity. Otherwise, administrators nationwide could be barraged with petty lawsuits as a result of their split-second judgments.

The court should uphold the Tinker standard — students should not "shed their constitutional rights to freedom of speech or expression at the schoolhouse gate." Students nationwide should hope that Mr. Frederick's "Bong Hits 4 Jesus" prank does not forever restrict first amendment rights. The best decision for the court would be to rule in Mr. Frederick's favor but protect administrators faced with difficult decisions by upholding their right to immunity. Otherwise, the "schoolhouse gate" may transform into a barrier for student speech, and thoughtful, individual political protest will be restricted to those old enough to vote.

GEORGE MASON

An Early Fighter for Individual Rights

Where did the ideas for individual rights, such as freedom of speech, come from? These ideas have come from many places. But when early U.S. leaders were discussing these rights, they got a lot of help from the words of George Mason. Mason was the major writer of The Virginia Declaration of Rights. Many of the things in that document were discussed and later included in the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution. These ten amendments are also known as the Bill of Rights, and Mason is often referred to as the "Father of the Bill of Rights."

What is FREEDOM OF SPEECH?

"Freedom of speech"

generally means that people have the right to freely say what they want to say, and for others to hear it. Sometimes we use the term "freedom of expression" to show that free speech is more than just what we say. It includes what we express in our writing, on film, in songs, pictures and any other form of expression we choose to use.

Where does this right come from? The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guarantees that Americans have this right. Among other rights, it tells us that we have the freedom of speech and freedom of the press (the right of people to gather and publish news). These rights are considered necessary in a democracy that listens to the will of the people. Free speech is also part of many other national and international agreements.

Does this mean that you can say anything you want? No. For example, freedom of speech does not mean that you can shout out "Fire! Fire!" in a movie theater just for fun. Your shouts could cause panic and injury to others. So there are limits on free speech. Our freedom of speech should not cause harm to others. Sometimes it is not clear what speech is healthy for a democracy and what speech is harmful. Understanding and establishing limits to freedom of expression is an ongoing process.

1787 The Constitutional Convention met in Philadelphia under the leadership of George Washington in order to establish a new U.S. government. One of the biggest problems was how to divide power between states with small populations and states with large populations. The delegates solved the problem by setting up a Congress with two houses. In one house the number of representatives was based on the population of the state (the House of Representatives), while in the other house each state had an equal number of members (the Senate). Celebrate Good Times

The Wootton boys Lacrosse team celebrates their victory over Dulaney last Friday.

The Patriots are poised to make history by becoming the first county team to win the state lacrosse title.

Patriots poised to make LAX history

Patience is never really a sexy way to describe a team, and few victors are remembered for their equanimity. But the truth is that the Wootton Patriots are Montgomery County's first lacrosse team to reach the state championship for those exact reasons. They are patient.

In a 9-7 win at the state semifinals against Dulaney last Friday, the Patriots scored early about three minutes into the first quarter on a nice inside turnaround by senior attacker Sam Burns. Senior attacker Ricky Hafer followed up six minutes later with a perfectly executed fake pass. Hafer's defender bit, allowing the attacker to run in from the wing and score.

The Patriots' passing game was talented enough to find attackers inside for good short and mid-range looks. The Lions' response could adequately be summarized as this: you can go inside if you want to, but if you do, you will get knocked on your behind. Because of what seemed to be a "let them play" mentality by the referees, penalty flags did not fly as often as they would have had the game been called a little tighter.

Lion's attackers had plenty of opportunities on goal themselves, but Wootton's goalie, senior Steven Silverberg, started to get into a zone after saving four nearly consecutive, dead-on shots at the net. The Patriots ended the first quarter 3-1.

"Great game," said Patriots coach Colin Thompson. "They [the Patriots] played well tonight. Steve made some big-time saves."

The second quarter was more of the same: quality grind-it-out defense on both sides. But this time, Dulaney had the offensive edge: two goals to Wootton's one, again by Burns. Still, the Patriots looked in control even though they were only up by one, buoyed by a crowd that made Annapolis High School, where the game was played, sound like home.

Until the third quarter, that is.

Junior Lions midfielder Brad Ruzicka scored the first goal of the third quarter with a long-range shot to the net three and a half minutes in, tying the game. Junior attacker Spencer Martin followed up Ruzicka a minute later to give Dulaney its first lead.

Thompson said that there was no sense of panic on the Patriots' bench, however

"The defense really stepped up tonight, but the offense was very patient, very poised," said Thompson. "They did what they needed to do."

Considering that most of Wootton's players were on the team that lost to Severna Park in the semis last year, there were no knee-jerk reactions by the Patriots after seeing their lead slip away in the semis once again - to a storied Baltimore County team, no less.

"We were doing well on defense," Thompson said. "We knew it was just a matter of time before we put one in."

Make that two.

With 3:30 left in the quarter, junior midfielder Patrick Bailey won the first of two face-offs in the span of less than a minute, both of which led directly to fast-break goals.

"We didn't know it was going to be that quick," Thompson said. "Right after Pat got that face-off, that was huge. Getting them so quickly right away, that got them right back into momentum."

Postgame, Dulaney coach Jake Reed said he was proud of his players.

"We hung in there, and we played a really good team," Reed said. "We came back on them, but they sucked it up. They're just a much better lacrosse team than we were tonight."

Wootton fans whistled and cheered their team on the field after the game. Thompson said he felt overwhelmed.

"The overall hustle on everything was fantastic," Thompson said. "They [the Patriots] just really worked hard tonight, and I'm really proud of them."

Quince Orchard wins third regional title . . .

By Brandy L. Simms
Sentinel Sports

Kyle Judson could not contain himself. The Quince Orchard senior was ecstatic following the Cougars 10-4 victory last week over host Wootton in the 4A West Region championship.

"Oh my God, we're going to the states three years running!" Judson yelled from the Cougars' dugout moments after his team's victory. "We're going to the states for three years running, baby!"

Quince Orchard halted Wootton's bid for its first state title in over a decade. The Patriots captured the state crown in 1996. Wootton last won a region title in 2001.

The victory marked the Darnestown school's third consecutive regional title since Jason Gasaway took over the program in 2005.

"Jason Gasaway has done a great job with this program," said Judson, who was a sophomore on Quince Orchard's 2005 state title team.

Brian McKenna, Gasaway's stepbrother who once starred at Watkins Mill before playing collegiately at Towson University, has assisted Gasaway at Quince Orchard.

"Those two coaches really keep our heads in the game," said Judson.

Against Wootton (15-5) the Cougars were underdogs, a role they are unfamiliar with but were not fazed by. On his 18th birthday, Alex Mennie went 4-for-4 with three doubles and had four RBIs. The Cougars also got solid performances from Andrew Foncannon (4-for-4, 2 RBIs) and Joe Barkanac (1-for-3, 3 RBIs). Sophomore pitcher Mike Ryan gave up eight hits and fanned one batter in seven innings on the mound.

"We crushed the ball and played great defense," said Mennie. "Being the underdog, it feels real good to come out on top."

The Cougars advanced to the region final by defeating cross-town rival Gaithersburg 1-0 in a hard-fought contest a day earlier.

Against the Trojans (14-9), Judson yielded six hits and struck out five as the Cougars ended Gaithersburg's season for the second year in a row.

"Hat's off to Kyle Judson," Gaithersburg coach Jason Woodward said following the contest. "He pitched a heck of a game."

Quince Orchard defeated Magruder and Wootton, above to clinch yet another regional title, but, bottom, they fell hard to Eleanor Roosevelt in the state semifinal game.

. . . But loses in the state semifinals to Roosevelt

By Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

While the Quince Orchard Cougars didn't quite beat themselves during Tuesday night's 12-7 loss against Eleanor Roosevelt in the 4A Region state semifinals, they didn't exactly make it hard for their opponent.

"We made some mistakes," said Cougars head coach Jason Gasaway. "Some errors early on really were the reason we got behind. When you do that, it's easy to get down on yourself, and I think that's what happened."

The Cougars committed two fielding errors in the first two plays of the game, one of which resulted in a run for Eleanor Roosevelt. Although the Cougars came back to score two in the bottom of the first, they gave another run away in the second when catcher Andrew Fontaine lost a pitch in the backstop.

"I think we were jittery, but [Eleanor Roosevelt] did what any good team will do: they capitalized on our mistakes," said Gasaway.

By the end of the third inning, the Raiders were up 6-2, and the Cougars were showing signs of frustration. While the Raiders were celebrating and high-fiving in the dugout after every good play, the Cougars were walking off the field with their heads down, silent.

"We went four and out in the third and three and out in the fourth," said Gasaway. "I had to yell at them to get them back in the game."

But the Cougars waited until the bottom of the seventh inning before mounting a comeback. They scored two runs after Raiders pitcher Sean Swetnam gave up three consecutive hits and a walk. Then in the seventh, after the Raiders moved Swetnam to first base, the Cougars scored three more after Kyle Judson and Alex Mennie got singles, David Moldawer was hit by a pitch, and Andrew Price was walked.

The Raiders promptly brought Swetnam back to the mound to get the final two outs, which he did with the bases loaded.

"He had two batters," said Raiders coach Andrew Capece. "He told me, 'No problem.'"

The Cougars finished the regular season 12-5 and earned playoff wins against Magruder, Gaithersburg and Wootton. They had won four region titles in the past five years before their loss to the Raiders, who broke a 0-9 losing streak in the state semifinals with the win. The Raiders will face Sherwood in the 4A state finals on Friday.

Magruder's big little man

By Brandy L. Simms
Sentinel Sports

During a regular season match-up in January between Magruder and Sherwood, the Colonels' 5-foot-5-inch, 160-pound senior Justin Taylor went to the foul line with just 4.7 seconds remaining on the clock and his team down by a point.

However, Taylor missed the free throw, and Magruder suffered a 54-53 home loss to their archrivals. Taylor shouldered the blame for the loss.

"It's very disappointing but mostly disappointing for me," Taylor said afterwards, "because I missed the game-winning free throw."

Two months later in the state semifinals in front of thousands at Comcast Center, Taylor became a hero when he scored a game-winning shot with seconds remaining to propel Magruder into the state championship game against Sherwood.

Call it sweet redemption.

During the course of his high school career, Taylor has been a spark-plug for Magruder whether he's on the hardwood or the gridiron. As a feisty guard for Dan Harwood's basketball program, he's been an integral member of the team.

"He's a real good defender," junior Brian Henderson said. "We always put him and Alex Lee on the other team's best players.

"He'll be a great catch for anybody in basketball or football."

"He's a tough kid," added Henderson. "He can get to the basket and knock down shots."

Harwood described Taylor as "pound for pound one of the toughest kids I've ever coached."

Despite often times being the shortest player on the court, Taylor made up for his lack of size with his clutch performances and court savvy.

"Justin Taylor is as quick as any player I've ever coached," said Harwood.

On the football field, Taylor's exploits did not go unnoticed. He was named a first team All-Sentinel performer at safety after leading the county with eight interceptions, including three in one game. He returned an interception 85 yards for a touchdown against Whitman and finished the season with 73 tackles.

"He was certainly big in leadership," said Magruder head football coach Doug Miller. "He held our team together through thick and thin."

Miller added, "He'll be a great catch for anybody in basketball or football."

After making visits to a pair of Division III colleges, Taylor has opted to spend the next four years playing basketball at Guilford College in Greensboro, N.C. He chose Guilford over Cazenovia College in New York.

"I'm looking forward to it a lot," he said. "It just seemed like a better overall place to grow up by myself and to live."

Magruder's Justin Taylor puts up two during basketball season

Sherwood players fall to the ground, left after losing the state title game in football, but were much more happy at the end of the basketball season when they took the state title from Magruder.

Now, in the third major sport, baseball, Sherwood is once again poised to take the top prize.

Sherwood athletics at the top of the county game

If you're a Sherwood sports fan, then you've had a lot to cheer about this school year. The football team wood baseball team went through the regular season unbeaten (18-0) while the softball team had only one loss during the regular season. During the spring, both the baseball and softball teams captured region titles with victories over C.M. Wright.

"To go undefeated, it's a great feat," said Gaithersburg baseball coach Jason Woodward, whose Trojans lost 3-2 to Sherwood during the regular season. "It's tough in Montgomery County baseball to do that."

Last fall, Sherwood's girls' volleyball team won a state title. Meanwhile, boys' cross country finished second in the state finals that were held at Hereford High School. During the 2004 and 2005 seasons, Sherwood won back-to-back state titles in boys' soccer.

The Warriors have fared pretty well individually too. Sherwood senior wrestler Andy Lowy captured his third state crown, and Deontay Twyman, a senior two-sport star, just recently signed a national letter of intent to play Division I college basketball at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind. Meanwhile, senior Dana Ward has been one of the keys to Sherwood's success on both the softball field and the volleyball court.

Over the years, the Sandy Spring school has produced some of the area's most talented teams and athletes. In the mid '90s the Warriors football team won back-to-back state titles under coaching legend Bob Milloy. Those teams featured all-everything RB Tyree Foreman who went on to play college football at the University of Virginia. Today, Foreman serves as an assistant coach at Temple University. The former Sherwood standout began his coaching career at the U.S. Military Academy before he landed in the City of Brotherly Love.

Other notable former Sherwood athletes include Foreman's cousin Richie Anderson, who went on to play for many years in the National Football League, soccer standout Oguchi Onyewu and ESPN sportscaster Scott Van Pelt, who was once a basketball and baseball player at the Sandy Spring school.

There must be something in the water in the Olney-Sandy Spring area. Either that, or these kids have been eating their Wheaties.

How else can you explain the success of various Sherwood athletic programs in recent years?

All jokes aside, Sherwood athletic director Bob Cilento has assembled some of the best coaches that money can buy.

Football coach Al Thomas is a Montgomery County legend. He's won state titles at Seneca Valley and Damascus during a career that has spanned nearly 25 years. Baseball coach Billy Goodman is a veteran coach who has been around for years. Hector Morales (boys' soccer) and Dondre Whitmore (boys' basketball) are among the brightest young minds in their respective sports.

It's definitely a good time to be a Sherwood Warrior right now.

made it back to the 4A state title game before suffering a heartbreaking one-point loss to Suitland in overtime. However, the boys' basketball team defied the odds and captured the school's first state title in that sport in nearly 30 years.

If that's not enough, the Sher-
