You Can't Get There From Here

No mail delivery frustrates Garrett Park Elementary staffers

By Drew Pierson
 Staff Writer

The old Postal saying "Neither rain, nor snow, nor sleet nor hail . . ." apparently doesn't apply to Garret Park Elementary school. The roads to Garrett Park Elementary - the same roads that school buses carry children on and that tractor trailers use to deliver food and other supplies- apparently do not meet the standards of the United States Post Office, and thus the U.S. P.S will not deliver mail to Garrett Park Elementary.

"This is a public school that needs material on a daily basis," said Wayne Harris, move coordinator for the department of materials management for Montgomery County Public Schools. "You got people there that need this stuff."

USPS does not deliver to the school. The first was that the town of Garrett Park voted almost 20 years ago not to deliver mail to town residents. The Planning Montgomery County Public Schools Garrett Park Elementary is not within town limits.

"And it is not a resident or a household," Harris pointed out, "but a school."

Miner also said that the roads leading to Garrett Park Elementary did not meet several USPS requirements, including a lack of sidewalks, no overhead street lighting and too small of an area for post-office trucks to turn around.

None of those standards are a problem for school buses, delivery trucks to the school or even the "pony mail," intra-school system mail

"This is a public school that needs material on a daily basis."

Wayne Harris, MCPS

W. C. Miner, acting district manager, customer service and sales, capital district of the United States Postal Service, said there were two reasons why town of Garrett Park wanted its residents to use the post office as a town center, a local gathering spot.

Bath tubs go nostalgic

Each week, The Sentinel revisits a memorable story from our archives.

A bathtub on legs with ciaw feet-sexy? That's how a new one was described by some viewers recently, although its resemblance almost line-for-line to the old-fashioned original was unmistakable. The new tub, a shimmering red, was enameled inside and out and had electroplated gold feet, faucets, and piping. It would have been a smash in the Gay Nineties.

In explaining the introduction of the "birthday baths" which included not only the red tub, but a vibrant pink one, Herbert V. Kohler, chairman of the board of the engineering company celebrating its 100th anniversary, observed that "...it (the tub) isn't made of plastic or acrylic or another of the so-called space-age materials...it is made of cast iron...one look at the tub and you'd say we hadn't progressed in 100 years...a second look might suggest that it is rather avant garde... in any kind of setting- antique, eclectic or modern..."

Antique style fittings have been updated to accommodate today's market and the bathtub itself may be a symbol of the new look in bathrooms- a trend toward luxury available in the smallest space and a riot of bold color that includes a line of lavatories in orange, bright greens, vivid blues.

In fact many people have updated old fixtures, which to them have more appeal than some of the sterile-looking ones that have been in vogue in the last decades. This fact came to light when Frederick Haaker, who supervises exhibits and displays for the company's distributors and plumbers, was given the task of acquiring the fixtures for the use in centennial settings.

"It wasn't easy," he explained. "When I told people what I wanted to do with them, they would decide to keep them after all, and redecorate. Some people have had old pipes renickled. When they did offer to sell they suspected they had antiques and wanted big prices plus new fixtures and installation costs..."

Hanker had begun the search by sending the company's 1908 catalog to plumbers who then supplied him with hundreds of names in hundreds of cities where old fixtures could be found. But he found many people merely wanted to talk with him so they could proceed with their own restoration programs.

There were interesting side-lights. In Green Bay, Wis., he said, religious people use their old tubs as backyard grottoes, burying them about one-third in the ground and placing statues within the exposed part.

"And in farm arrests the old bathtub are used as water troughs by plugging up the drains, which brings us full circle- in 1973 we sold watering troughs for animals which was the forerunner design of the modern bathtub..."

At the time the trough was advertised as a "drinking fountain for man and beast...enameled or in plain iron..."

Exposed pipes in the new red tub may also indicate a trend, Haaker observed. Pipes may become fashionable assets in decorating. In San Francisco a Chinese plumber had shiny brass pipes exposed and polished against white woodwork for a smashing effect. And in Aurora, he says, an ex-Navy man sprayed pipes blue and red to indicate hot and cold.

All indications are that the bathroom will get VIP decorative treatment in 1973, Builders everywhere are that the bathroom will get VIP decorative treatment in 1973. Builders everywhere are installing luxury baths in higher-priced homes and it is only a question of time until it finds its way into the development.

HUMOR

Hey, could we please just super size the towels?

by Roger Mursick

I don't know whose idea it was to re-design the paper towel but they must be good friends with Sheryl Crow. Why else would you take the absolutely perfect-sized, old-fashioned standard paper towel that's been around since I was a kid and downsize it?

Bounty is no longer an adjective - it's a noun. "Bounty the 'Quicker picker-upper!'" Now it only picks up spills half as fast. They should rename it what I yell each time I rip one of those stupid "pick a size" sheets off the roll: "Dammit Alice!" What can you do with a piece of paper that's 3"x9"? You can't even wipe your...fingers! I don't know what Sheryl Crow was thinking, but I can't dry my hands on a piece of paper that's less than 9"x11". How can you wipe your butt on a 4"x4" piece of tissue? I guess the people that design paper towels and toilet tissue don't get out much because if they did, they'd realize that Americans are getting larger instead of smaller.

They should design a new toilet tissue for Americans and call it "Dockers" paper. If you ever venture out west you'll know exactly what I mean when I say America's collective buns are at their glutius maximus. Get in your car, start driving west and see what I mean. It's right about Gaithersburg where America begins to loosen its belt, and by the time you hit Illinois it's all elastic and drawstrings. Why do you think everyone began wearing his shirts in an un-tucked, fashion?

I'm not passing judgment, I'm saying: stop reducing the towel size, we need bigger.

Maybe towel manufacturers are going small to accommodate all the Hispanic housekeepers that we now have in this country. Mexicans are much smaller than the average 21st century American that is of European or African descent. And if they aren't doing windows (like my housekeeper), then they wouldn't have a need for a standard size paper towel.

But even they have a huge caboose, a single sheet of toilet paper is out for them also.

Maybe there's another reason for making smaller paper towels. We've gone hybrid crazy in this country. We're trying to reduce the size of everything; smaller cars, smaller homes, smaller towels and tissues, smaller talk show co-host. Maybe that's really why Rosie got canned from "The View." The network is looking for ways to reduce its carbon footprint.

Even "Brawny" towels offers "pick a size" rolls. Although I heard that "Brawny" is thinking of removing the lumberjack icon from the front of their paper towel packaging and replacing it with metrosexual named Ted.

Immigrants plan protest

By Payal Patnaik
Special to the Sentinel

Local immigrants say they're not happy with the Senate's new immigration proposal.

The National Capital Immigrant Coalition (NCIC) will hold a rally on Saturday, June 2 at 1:00 p.m. on the U.S. Capitol West steps. The NCIC is protesting the Senate's new immigration proposal and calling for comprehensive immigration reform from Congress instead of the compromise currently being debated in the Senate.

Among the provisions of the proposed bill are strengthened border security, a temporary guest-worker program and a long-range path to citizenship for the projected 12 million immigrants that are in the United States illegally. In addition, the bill calls for a $5,000 payment in order to earn permanent residency.

NCIC president Jaime Contreras said, "Now is the time for humane, compassionate immigration reform. There are 12 million workers who are in limbo and everyday go to work with the fear of being deported."

The NCIC opposes the immigration reform because the organization believes that the compromise still manages to separate families. In addition, the NCIC believes that the immigration proposal needs certain amendments, including a lower fee than $5,000 - which may be too expensive for immigrants - and a specific date for the beginning of the reforms.

"We want a fair and affordable way to register," NCIC board member Saul Solorzano said.

In a May 29 press conference, the NCIC assembled a panel of speakers who addressed their concerns with the bill and called for a comprehensive immigration-reform bill that enabled them to enjoy the benefits of being a citizen and to stay together with their families.

Miguel Diaz, a speaker from Baltimore, recalled the deportation of his wife in Jan. 5, which left him alone to care for his two children.

"There is nothing to protect us. The society's values are based on family values, but how about us?" Diaz asked, communicating through a translator.

Fernando Munguia Toval is an undocumented day laborer from Takoma Park who emigrated from Nicaragua. After an arrest by police officers, he must wear an electronic tracking device wherever he goes.

"Officers detained me simply because of my color, because of my look, because of my language. I tell those officers and senators that we did not mean to harm anyone," Toval said, also speaking through a translator. Toval mentioned his three children and the futures that he wants them to have: his son Genesis becoming a lawyer, his other son Samuel becoming a doctor and his young daughter Ester also becoming a professional.

Toval addressed his concerns of being treated as a person in the United States rather than as a criminal, saying that his tracking device makes him feel like a criminal. The speakers encouraged immigration reform in order to improve the conditions of the millions of immigrants from all over the world that struggle to gain citizenship.

"We want to fill out the West Lawn of the Capital and just get the message across; turnout is not a big factor for us," Contreras said.

Jessica Alvarez, the NCIC co-vice president, said, "We're building up to more solidarity by families. As the Senate debate is intensified, more than ever, we need people to show up to this rally."

Solorzano said that although the Senate will not be in session on June 2, it will be back in session on June 4.

"We want immigrants present at the Capital," he added.

Straight talk on the problem of adult guardians

ASK GLORIA

By Gloria Gary Lawlah

*Hello from the Maryland Department of Aging. This is Gloria Lawlah with more questions from residents. This week's topic is about guardianship.Q. What is adult guardianship?A. Adult guardianship is a legal process in which the courts determine when a person's severe disabilities impair that person's ability to make good decisions about themselves or property.Q. Would the courts then take control of the adult that requires that guardianship be assigned?A. No, the court would appoint someone else to act on behalf of the adult requiring guardianship.Q. Does this mean that the adult no longer has control over their life decisions - those that affect health and property?A. Yes. Guardianship is a way for the state, by the court, to enter into the life of an adult to ensure that the person's basic needs are met and that their property is protected and used for that person's benefit.

Q. Why would a person need a guardian?A. A person needs a guardian if they are not able to make everyday decisions.,Q. Are their different kinds of guardianship?A. The court may appoint a guardian of the person or a guardian of the property, or one person can be assigned to both. A guardian of the person makes decisions only about the person's medical care, residence, food, clothing, shelter and other subjects that affect their person.Q. What is the effect of guardianship?A. When the court appoints a guardian, this process removes some or all of that person's ability to make decisions about his/her life.Q. Why should guardianship be avoided if possible?

There are several reasons to avoid guardianship if possible; the most important being that it deprives a person of control over their own life. An adult under guardianship usually has no authority to make legally binding decisions. The guardianship order may be so broad in scope that it deprives the individual of far more rights than are necessary to solve the problem. For someone under guardianship, it can have a devastating effect because they have lost control over their own lives. The other reasons to avoid guardianship are that the process is time-consuming and extremely expensive.

Q. Must every individual that becomes infirmed and unable to make decisions require a guardian?A. No, not everyone who is mentally incapacitated requires guardianship. There are ways to handle the affairs of a disabled person without resorting to guardianship. There may be friends or relatives who can step in to take over the care and decision making for an individual without court intervention. The individual may have planned for their incompetence by assigning power of attorney to someone to handle financial affairs.

Guardianship should be used as a last resort when alternatives are not available. For additional information about guardianship, contact Priscilla Campbell at 410-767-1088 or e-mail her at pcamp@oaa.state.dm.us.

OPINIONS & VIEWS

Ring twice? Once is nice

If I don't laugh, then I guess I'll cry.

Maybe I'll do both, but for the second time in a week I find myself speechless.

Editor's Notebook by Brian J. Karem

Let me elucidate.

My in-laws live on a farm that is situated on a gravel road, off another gravel road eight miles outside of Fulton, Mo. Each day my mother-in-law walks down her half-mile long gravel driveway, opens up her mailbox and takes out her mail.

It doesn't matter the weather, the time of the year or anything else. The mail is always there. Guess what? She has no sidewalks on her gravel road, no overhead street lighting and the road is too narrow for post office trucks to turn around.

In that regard she has a lot in common with Garrett Park Elementary School in our beloved overpopulated county.

However, unlike the elementary school, my in-laws get their mail delivered to them every day. They once even got an overnight package delivered on a Sunday. Wow!

But in Montgomery County, one of the most expensive counties in the entire nation, just north of the District of Columbia, the very seat of our federal government, a public elementary school cannot receive mail.

Principal Lee Derby told The Sentinel that the current situation is a pain.

I'd say he forgot to mention what part of the anatomy is pained by not getting mail.

Gee, from my public school education I remember The Pony Express stories about brave postal employees braving weather, geography, hostilities and nothing short of death to deliver the mail.

And then there's that funny little saying from the post office, Neither rain, nor snow, nor sleet nor hail shall . . . blah, blah, blah.

I guess that's definitely a thing of the past, as now we won't even risk a street with no sidewalk.

Kevin Costner is probably pulling his hair plugs out by now because this ruins the sequel he was planning to The Postman.

This opens way too many doors for us all not to get our mail. "Sorry Mr. Karem your Jack Russell Terrier was barking again and besides, you have no sidewalks in front of your house. No mail for you."

The Soup Nazi would love this scenario, that's for sure.

Maybe the folks who live in Garrett Park love the anachronism of no mail delivery — and believe me there are times when I'm pulling junk mail out of the box that I would not only empathize, but scream for the same in my neighborhood.

I guess they're entitled to ban electricity too if they so desire, but I wouldn't want to see that in a public place any more than I want to see a public school without mail delivery.

Principal Derby has it right when he says he doesn't like to have his staff take time out of their day for something not in their job description — namely driving to the post office to pick up or deliver mail.

I'd rather the educators were spending their time, hmmm how shall I put this, oh yes — educating children, rather than playing delivery boy.

That's the job of the post office.

It now costs me 41 cents to mail a stinking letter and God knows even the postal workers can't figure out the new rules about weight, size, whether or not you can bend a parcel, etc. in trying to determine what the price of mailing anything else now costs.

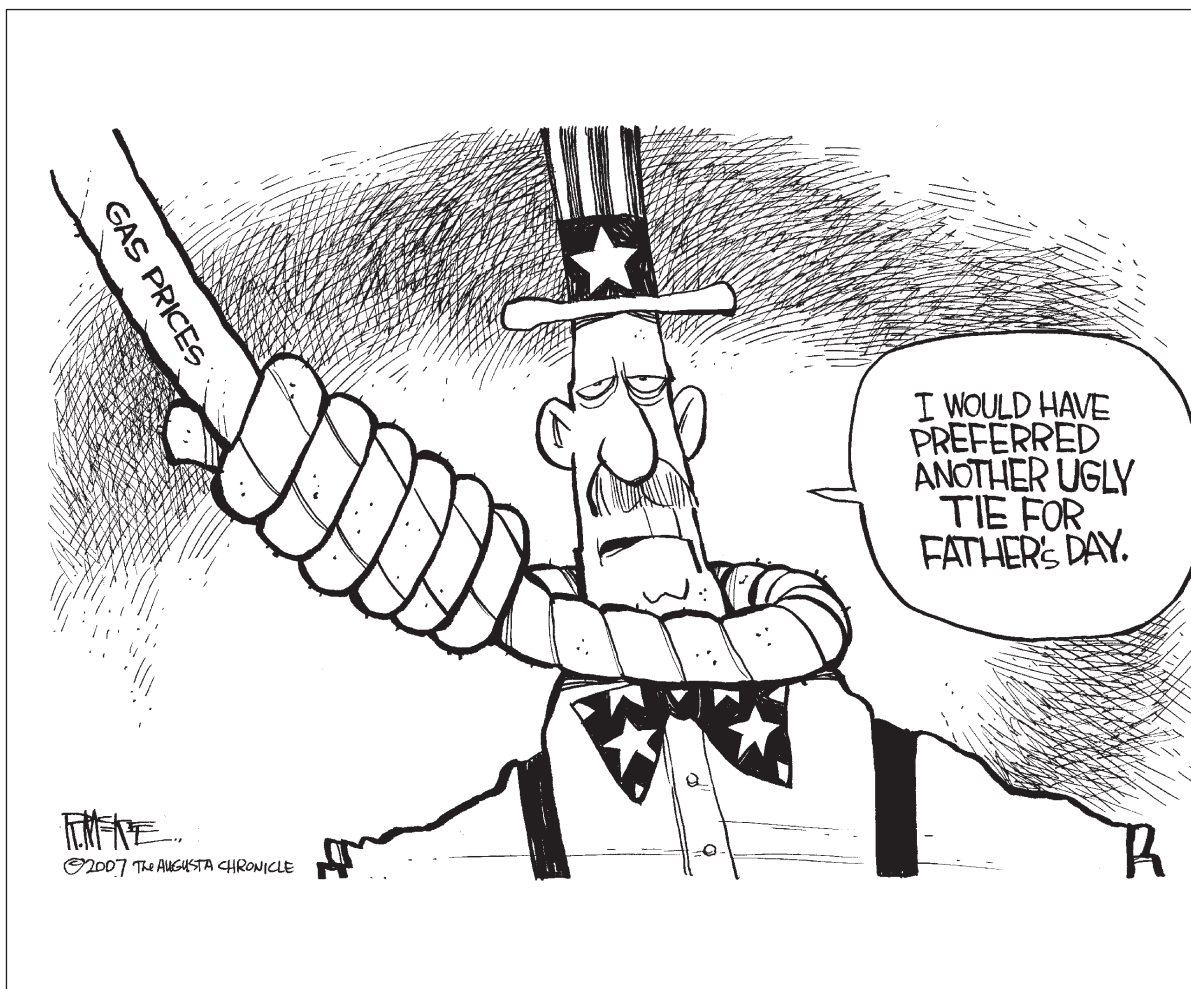

Granted, in some regards the teachers, administrators and staffers at Garrett Park Elementary School are lucky.

They get nothing from PFOX or The Flat Earth Society, or any other strangely twisted groups out there.

Meanwhile Wayne Harris of the school system and the principal of the school are upset about the no-mail situation.

Maybe, just maybe, the post office could listen to them and make a small effort to do the job of delivering the mail.

You won't even have to use horses. Despite the lack of sidewalks, the streets are still nice. Take a car, or one of those trucks. You may have to drive a little way to turn around, but it will be worth it.

It's all one big Nothing

This political season is shaping up to be The Big Nothing. By that, I mean too many people are talking about too many ideas, and all the squawking is lost in the fog of gibberish discourse.

by Gabe Caggiano

Over the Memorial Day weekend, Bush did the a grateful nation says thanks for those who made the ultimate sacrifice for freedom thing, but it's a hollow tribute simply because we've been hearing this for four years. Men and women from Montgomery County get killed or maimed daily in a war that means nothing to American security. Bush would like us to think the sectarian violence is a distraction from the real goal of the evildoers - which is to attack us - but Iraq never did attack America and couldn't if it wanted to back in the day. That rationale is meaningless - especially when you're coming out of Pumphrey's Funeral Home in Rockville. The grief is real while the politics are a Big Nothing, which makes the Fiasco in the Desert even more infuriating. It's Vietnam with fig trees instead of palm trees.

The Republican candidates for president are a colorful bunch and take so many different positions on the issues they all add up to a Big Nothing. Giuliani, Romney and McCain are trying to please so many special-interest groups they have lost all credibility as men of their convictions - just ask local Republicans - if you can find one other than Roger Mursick.

How refreshing it would be to have one of them say something completely original, like I promise to clean up the Chesapeake Bay and improve its quality by 200 percent during my administration. The environmental mandates will be followed, or people will go to jail or We will find a way to resolve the illegal alien problem, and there will be no sanctuary cities and police will interface with ICE when they stop someone they think has committed a crime and may be an illegal. You don't like it? Don't vote for me.

The flip-flopping on abortion and gun control is far too convoluted and boring to go into at great length, but the candidates reached a new low in absurdity when Mitt Romney claimed to have hunted varmints so that he could gain favor with the all-powerful NRA. It is Romney's I smoked but didn't inhale moment, and it should decimate his chances of winning the nomination. For one thing, never trust a man who shoots little critters for sport - never mind big ones. I've always said I'll respect a bear hunter when the bear is given an M-16 to shoot back with - but until then, I'm rooting for the grizzlies that ate the moron documentary maker in Alaska. Perhaps there was a dispute over residuals, but I digress.

The Democrats aren't exactly blowing the Republicans out of the game right now, either. The Dems just caved on the supplemental bill for the Iraq war and gave Bush billions more without the benchmarks to bring troops home they claimed they would never back away from. The Dems are in a bind here: they can't be against the troops (because that is un-American), and they can't figure out a vote-getting strategy to be against the war. So that is another Big Nothing. After weeks of chest thumping and impassioned speeches by Nancy Pelosi, John Murtha and Harry Reid, there is still no timetable to bring the troops home. Democratic strategists have probably taken a poll and decided to leave this one alone and let Bush hang himself, which he has been doing exquisitely over the past four years.

The immigration bill: a Big Nothing.

The hunt for Osama bin Laden (Osama who?): a Big Nothing.

Noted

To the editor:

Thank you for publishing the article last week entitled, "Special Ed Parents Protest," by Drew Pierson.

While I appreciate the coverage, there were a few problems with the story. Terminology aside, the biggest glaring error was the statement, "Since when do white, middle-class parents fight for minority students?" The actual comment from another parent was, "Since when do white, middle-class parents fight to get their children into programs that are dumping grounds for minority students?" The quote was a rebuttal to the assertion by MCPS officials that the Learning Centers are being phased out because of disproportionality issues.

I have been advocating for special needs children in Montgomery County for the past five years. It has been my experience that special education parent advocates fight for the rights of all children. Learning and developmental disabilities are "equal opportunity employers" — they do not discriminate.

Well, we'd like to think so

To the editor:

I read your story about the problems in the Rockville City Council and just had to roll my eyes. The more things change, the more they stay the same. In the words of Rodney King, "Can't we all just get along?"

G. Stevenson
Rockville

Okay, I didn't see this one coming

To the editor:

You run a front page story about the City Council of Rockville fighting, but bury the story about a cop who left the Rockville police department because he got into a fight. That story was on page three. I would say you're kissing up to the City Council.

R. Roberts
Rockville

Editor's note: Actually The Sentinel was the first to report on the story of the police officer's problems after the fight at a local restaurant.

While leaving the force is an important story - actually breaking the story of the fight we felt was more important. As for the other, "kissing up to the City Council," I think you're the first person in a while who caught me speechless. Congratulations.

That's why we covered the story

To the editor:

It renews my faith when I read story about a Rockville girl who gave her own money to buy bicycle helmets for other children.

You read and hear so much bad news, something like this is really newsworthy and I'm glad to see you covered it.

God Bless Paige Kler and her family.

R. Giles
Gaithersburg

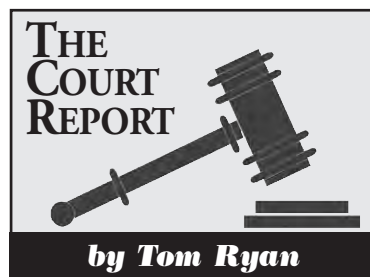

I'm going to guess "No"

To the editor:

Isn't anyone going to wake up? The Federation Corner points out all these problems with Jerry Weast and the school board and no one seems to care.

This is ridiculous. Our children are at stake. Aren't we going to do anything to end this horrible charade that pretends to be education in this county?

LEGAL MATTERSGang influence in the criminal justice system

Gang violence has become all too prevalent in the Washington area as well as other areas of the country. The mere fact that someone belongs to a gang - however the term is interpreted - does not necessarily mean that such persons have committed a crime. What to do with gang membership when an alleged gang member is prosecuted for a crime is an issue that Maryland's intermediate appellate court addressed last week in the case of Ayala v. State.

According to the opinion, a Prince George's County jury convicted Mario Ayala of first-degree murder in the beating death of another man. The evidence presented showed that Ayala and two others allegedly befriended the victim, took him on what was to be a drinking binge, and then beat him to death with baseball bats and golf clubs. After his arrest, Ayala gave two statements in which he ultimately admitted that he was a member of a gang, the second of which was videotaped and portions shown to the jury.

In the tape Ayala admitted gang membership and that rival gang members had once beaten him, stating he had a scar to show for it. He admitted that he thought the victim had been a member of the rival gang. He admitted that he was present at the beating but claimed self-defense.

The prosecutor showed photographs of clothing owned by Ayala in the gang's colors and that he had gang related tattoos. The state also called as an expert witness, a police officer with expertise in gangs - including the gang to which Ayala allegedly belonged. He explained the history of the gang and that its members' "work" included going after rival gang members. He gave the opinion that Ayala was a member of the gang in question. The state offered all this evidence to prove a motive for the otherwise senseless beating death of the victim.

On appeal Ayala's lawyers argued that the trial judge should have excluded the gang-related evidence because gang membership itself was not relevant even if deemed a "bad act" and that it may have unduly prejudiced the jury against him. They also challenged that admissibility of Ayala's statements about gang membership. The appellate court disagreed and affirmed his conviction.

The court noted that evidence of prior bad acts or even crimes is not proper evidence to prove actions that conform to the prior conduct - that is, the state cannot prove the defendant guilty of the crime charged because of previous conduct. However, such evidence is properly admitted at trial to prove such things as motive, opportunity, intent, preparation or participation in a scheme or plan. The previous acts must have been committed at such a time or show such a relationship to the crime charged as to make the connection obvious. The trial judge then has discretion to decide whether to admit the evidence.

Based on the evidence against Ayala, the appellate court held that the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in deciding to admit the gang-related evidence. Such evidence clearly supplied a motive for the killing. The evidence had sufficient probative value - a tendency to prove the facts alleged - that outweighed any potential prejudice a jury may have toward gang members.

This case illustrates how gang membership may affect prosecution of gang members for alleged crimes.

Trapped And Pigeonholed On National Television

A May 13 60 Minutes piece that aired nationally attempted to portray a balanced view of how online brokerages have been chipping away at "standard" Realtor commissions. The segment was about the success and battles of an online brokerage called Redfin. (Interestingly, there was a similar story in the Washington Post almost a week later).

The story appeared to be an underdog piece about how Redfin is pitted against a real-estate industry that is against change. Everyone loves an underdog, right? Although the story attempted to offer both sides of the story, 60 Minutes' decision to interview a top real-estate agent in the Seattle area made for sensationalism but little for advancing the truth and facts.

The agent interviewed was clearly not representative in income or business methods of an average Realtor. It appeared that the agent's comments fed into the stereotypes being portrayed by her comments when challenged to lower her commissions as well as comments about home buying not being high-tech.

The facts are that according to the United States Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, the average licensed real-estate agent's income was $35,670 in 2004. The average agent earned between $23,500 and $58,110 a year. Only the top 10 percent earned more than $92,770.

Additionally, the real-estate industry has embraced technology to assist in change as can be witnessed by the explosion of Internet listings and computer-based real-estate applications. Many homebuyers search for homes online before going to see the home in person. In fact new technology has allowed much of the process to become remote and impersonal; contracts and mortgage applications can be completed and signed and delivered via email. The truth is that the industry is very high tech and the National Association of Realtors is committed to technological advancement. You can read more at www.realtor.org/technology/index.html.

As a Realtor in the trenches, I can tell you that commission structures have been changing for a while; however, this is not because of "discount" brokers, but because it is a necessity of survival in a saturated industry. The recent record sellers' market assisted in the growth of real-estate business models that are based on flat fees. Online brokerages such as Zip Realty as well as "full service" Realtors have been offering closing credits, rebates, and low commission structures for some time.

How do you get a full-service Realtor for a "discount" price? The truth is that although some Realtors are nonnegotiable on commission, many are. All you have to do is ask, and chances are that you can negotiate a lower listing commission or a closing credit on your home purchase.

A professor in graduate school once told me that once others' perceptions have you pigeonholed, you can never get out. Although the 60 Minutes story may be good for ratings, the one-sided treatment and depicted stereotype of wealthy Realtors who are steadfast for the status quo did nothing to promote the facts. The National Association of Realtors has posted depicted misrepresentations as well as the correct facts on their website at www.realtor.org/about_nar/60_minutes/NARRespondsToSixtyMinutesMain.html.

To CBS's credit, some facts and rebuttal comments from the National Association of Realtors, as well as others, have been posted on the story's webpage at www.cbsnews.com/stories/2007/05/11/60minutes/main2790865.shtml.

Everyone else lies about it, so why not MCPS?

By Wayne Goldstein
MCCF President

The trade magazine Education Week recently published what it claims are accurate graduation rates for the 2002-03 school year. These rates are endorsed by national education leaders and appear to be lower in most states. In this region, there is a large discrepancy between the claimed and adjusted rates. For example, Falls Church claims a 95 percent graduation rate, and the magazine estimates a 94 percent rate - a mere 1 percent difference. However, Prince George's county claims 89.5 percent, but the magazine estimates 67.3 percent - a 22.2 percent discrepancy. Montgomery County's rate shows a discrepancy of 11 percent between its official 92.5 percent rate and the estimated 81.5 percent. Of the 15 school systems in the region, nine show a lower discrepancy than MCPS, and five show a higher one.

Are most of these school systems deliberately manipulating and lying about their graduation rates, or do they make mistakes in their calculations? The same concerns about such discrepancies can include the attendance rates and the dropout rates. According to the "2006 Maryland Report Card" published by the state, Montgomery County's 2003 attendance rate was 92 percent, and its dropout rate was 2 percent. When I look at figures like that, my first question is: what happened to the 6 percent of students that represent the difference between the "non-dropout rate" of 98 percent and the attendance rate of 92 percent?

If Education Week estimates that only 81.5 percent graduated from MCPS, then what happened to the 16.5 percent of students that equal the difference between the non-dropout rate and the estimated graduation rate? That's one-sixth of all high school students. For 2006, MCPS claims a 94.8 percent attendance rate, a 2 percent dropout rate and a 91.5 percent graduation rate. Do we believe that in that three-year period, attendance improved, the dropout rate remained steady while the graduation rate declined?

According to a news account, regional school systems "estimate the graduation rate based on the number of students known to have dropped out. The problem is, few public high schools track every student who drops out. 'In some states,' [U.S. Department of Education Secretary Margaret] Spellings said, 'a student is counted as a dropout only if he registers as a dropout. That's unlikely.' ... Montgomery schools reported a 93 percent graduation rate for that year, but the database puts it at 82 percent. In that county, the database shows, the largest group of dropouts exits the system during 12th grade."

I have regularly documented some of the many ways that Superintendent Jerry Weast manipulates various numbers to make MCPS look better than it really is. With these three new ways of manipulating the facts, he is joined by many of his colleagues in the region and across the nation. Should we judge him harshly for doing what everyone else is doing?

We should, because MCPS so relentlessly hypes itself as one of the best school systems in the country and many parents move to Montgomery county and to specific neighborhoods in the county - paying an enormous premium for housing - to get what they believe will be the best possible public education.

For many in Montgomery county, a good secondary-school education is a prelude to getting into a good college to get the education that will determine one's success and status in life. In 2005, 24 percent of MCPS graduating seniors went straight to Montgomery College, a figure that has held steady for a number of years. For some MCPS graduates, it is all they can afford or be admitted to; for others, it is a logical step to take before later transferring to a four-year school. Montgomery College, like all good community colleges, also attracts many well-educated professionals taking advantage of its programs for further advancement or for a new career. However, disproportionate numbers of MCPS graduates who attend Montgomery College are not prepared for college work. A 1996 study showed that of these graduates entering in 1992 and 1993, about 30 percent needed remedial English, 50 percent needed remedial math, and 22 percent needed remedial reading. Students pay for these classes and must pass them, but they receive no college credit for doing so. It is unlikely that these numbers have improved in the last 15 years. In fact, students only pay about a third of the cost to attend Montgomery College, with the rest paid by taxpayers through county and state government subsidies. In paying for those remedial courses, taxpayers are paying twice, having already paid for these students' classes in high school.

I've heard that the unofficial dropout rate for MCPS graduates at Montgomery College is about 33 percent, and this massive dropping-out usually occurs in the second semester of the first year. While some or all of these dropouts may eventually resume their education, the same is true of high school dropouts who may eventually get their GED and even go further. It matters when students drop out, and if 33 percent of MCPS graduates are dropping out of our community college, then perhaps we should increase the MCPS dropout rate or lower the graduation rate based on what happens to unprepared students in - what becomes for them - grades 13 and 14.

Thus, since 1/3 of the 24 percent of MCPS graduates at Montgomery College equals 8 percent, this could be subtracted from MCPS' newly adjusted graduation rate of 81.5 percent, lowering it further to 73.5 percent. This might be a truer reflection of what percentage of those students who attend MCPS are prepared for higher education. It won't surprise me to see such dramatic changes downward when the High School Assessment (HSA) tests become a graduation requirement for the MCPS Class of 2009, assuming the state doesn't eliminate them at the last minute because the results could make Maryland look so bad at educating its children.

Of course, there are problems with all such tests, and with the desperate tactic of making education a perpetual teaching for a test, students aren't learning. Weast, MCPS and the BOE are primarily focused on how to manipulate, equivocate, distract, and otherwise engage in every way that human beings use denial to avoid having to confront a serious problem. This avoidance takes the approach peculiar to MCPS of relentless, obsessive bragging at every possible opportunity for the slightest of reasons. Since the BOE has abrogated its oversight role, the fault is Weast's alone, although we probably won't know how bad it really is until he leaves or is forced out, assuming our next superintendent will realize that only when MCPS confronts the truth of its failings will it then be able to work as effectively as it can to fix them.

Many problems may be impossible to fix, as they are around the country, but we can't determine that until we admit to ourselves what is wrong. Alcoholics can't begin to stop drinking until they admit they are alcoholics; an MCPS addicted to prevarication and manipulation of the facts can't begin to improve until it admits it lies to itself and others.

County plans no new taxes for coming fiscal year

By Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

The Montgomery County Council last Thursday officially approved its operating budget for fiscal year 2008, which starts July 1.

The $4.1 billion budget includes a property tax credit for some residents and no new taxes.

"We've done a very good job, I think, providing for basic services while still giving our residents some significant breaks," said Councilwoman Nancy Floreen.

The property tax credit will apply to 80 percent of the county's 243,000 owner-occupied residences and will increase from $221 last year to $613 in fiscal 2008. Homeowners living in homes valued at up to $475,200 will receive the credit as part of an annual program instituted by the council in 1998.

"With the credit, property taxes for those homeowners are going to be lower this coming year than they were last year," said Councilman Mike Knapp.

In addition, the council approved a "circuit-breaker" tax credit, which is aimed at households earning $64,000 or less. They predict the credit will average $685 per household for those who are eligible. Residents who qualify and are at least 70 years old will receive an additional 25 percent credit.

The total operating budget increased 7.1 percent, or $277 million, from fiscal year 2007, with a focus on funding basic initiatives in education, public safety and affordable housing.

"This is the first budget for a new council and a new county executive," said Council President Marilyn Praisner. "It is a challenging time for local governments, and Montgomery county is no exception."

The county is facing a projected $270 million shortfall next year. Coupled with the state's estimated $1.5 billion structural deficit, councilmembers agreed that money will be tight next year.

"We have been able to fund basic services this year, which is what we set out to do," said Councilman Phil Andrews. "This was not a tough year, especially when compared to what we will face next year. So the need to be fiscally prudent will only increase."

The county's fiscal 2008 operating budget includes $1.981 billion for the public school system.

Of that, $245,000 will go toward a community-based, half-year pre-kindergarten pilot program, while $26 million will be used to help eliminate portable classrooms.

The council also introduced three bills on Thursday at the request of the Planning Board that will start the process of reviewing the county's growth policy.

The bills concern the board's recommendations regarding the Annual Growth Policy, which was reviewed over the winter at the request of the council. The bills would increase taxes for both builders and homeowners and would define the county's growth strategy as being focused on urban planning and pedestrian-friendly development around Metro stations.

Public hearings are scheduled for June 19 for all three amendments.

"We've done a very good job, I think . . ."

Three charged with rape

By Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

Police have charged three young men and are investigating a fourth for the rape of a 14-year-old girl in Wheaton earlier this month.

Police charged Herberth A. Guevara, 21, of the 13400 block of Dauphine Street in Silver Spring; Julio Francisco Hernandez, 18, of the 1600 block of Ladd Street in Silver Spring; and Josue Jeremiah Ramos, 15, of the 11400 block of Monterrey Drive in Wheaton with multiple counts of rape, sexual assault and burglary for allegedly driving the girl to an abandoned house in Wheaton on May 11 after a party and raping her.

Montgomery County police spokeswoman Lucille Baur said they received a call from someone worried about the girl after they saw her leave a party with the four men.

When police arrived at the abandoned house in the 2600 block of Arcola Avenue, three of the men were standing out front and tried to flee. The fourth fled through the back door of the house.

"We were able to arrest all four," said Baur. "Three were charged, and we're still looking at charges for the fourth."

Baur said police found the girl in the house.

"She had been drinking and had trouble walking," said Baur, who said alcohol had been consumed at the party. Baur said the girl received treated at a local hospital.

Police are asking anyone with information to call the Family Crimes Division at 240-773-5400.

trucks, Harris said.

"If they ever meet the requirements, then yes [USPS will deliver mail], but you know how costly that is," Miner said. "And if you know that community, that's what they want."

Garrett Park Elementary principal Lee Derby said the current situation was a "pain" and that he did not like to have his staff take time out of their day for something not in their job description.

Right now, staff has to drive to the Garrett Park post office to send outgoing mail. Derby has worked out a deal with the pony-mail drivers to drop off the school's incoming mail whenever they stop by, but sometimes there can be gaps of up to weeks when they don't come.

Derby also said that post-office employees frequently complained about the situation to him because the school received so much mail that, if not picked up right away, became a problem due to its sheer quantity.

Derby said he had contacted Congressman Chris Van Hollen, but so far he has been unable to make progress.

Harris said that the USPS was acting as a "roadblock."

"I guess I'm just a little man," Harris said. "I can't get through to these people. I know the postmaster's busy... I just don't get it."

Special Ed still a problem according to activists

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

Maryland, according to one activist, is still paying the price for its mistake regarding special education.

In 1999 and 2004, the federal government found that several Maryland counties, including Montgomery county, did not fully implement the recommendations of the IEPs (Individualized Education Program) for some students with disabilities.

An IEP is a federally mandated plan of action for students with learning disabilities. By law, once a student is diagnosed as learning-disabled, his or her parents or guardians must meet with members of the administrative staff from that student's school - usually a combination of his or her principal, therapist or teachers - to choose the best available options among the school system's special-education programs. For example, a student with a hearing impairment could choose to remain in general-curriculum classes. Students with autism have the option of attending separate programs.

Because of Maryland's non-compliance, the state is essentially on probation. It must provide frequent reports and research to the federal government on state improvements to the implementation of IEPs, or else Maryland could lose the roughly $185 million in federal grant money it receives each year for special education, said Caroline Baglin, assistant state superintendent for the division of special education and early intervention services.

To reduce the number of referrals to special education, which would then necessitate IEPs, Baglin said Maryland has recently started to provide "interventions" for students with borderline disabilities as a first-try alternative. The interventions are to be used in the hope that a diagnosis of a learning disability will not need to be made. Baglin said that intervention is for the student's benefit, although the state also benefits because fewer IEPs mean less implementation.

An increase in interventions would explain why the percentage of Maryland residents ages 6 to 21 that fell under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, or IDEA, decreased each year from 2000 to 2004, Baglin said, even though the national average increased annually during that period. Many Maryland students that would have originally been diagnosed with learning disabilities stay categorized as regular students, at least until the intervention is tried.

The IDEA table did not list data for 2005 and 2006, but Maryland's special education census data also showed a decrease in the percentage of students with disabilities among the state's general enrollment. That number decreased from 12.8 percent in 2005 to 12.5 percent in 2006.

Maryland was one of five states to show an across-the-board decrease in the IDEA data from 2000 to 2004. The other states were Connecticut, Iowa, Hawaii and New Mexico.

Danielle Montoya of the New Mexico department of education said that since 2004, New Mexico had shown an even greater decrease in its percentage of children categorized by IDEA.

Smith said the decrease was largely because the state had found it was "over-reporting" two categories of learning disabilities, one of which was speech and language impairments. Similar to Maryland, New Mexico greatly reduced the number of referrals to special-education programs

"The changes are just reflecting good partnerships with general education and special education staff," Smith said, "and greater accountability, and really looking into deep research and intervention."

Councilmembers react to Special Ed problems

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

County Councilmen Phil Andrews, Marc Elrich and George Leventhal, the only councilmembers to respond to a recent Montgomery Sentinel questionnaire, said they had serious concerns about the process and motives behind the elimination of secondary learning centers in Montgomery county.

"I oppose the MCPS proposal to phase out the Middle and High School Learning Centers and challenged MCPS leaders when the issue was discussed in detail in the County Council's Education Committee (of which I am a member)," wrote Andrews.

"The proposal is flawed in many respects. It presumes that all students in the Learning Centers would be better off in a regular classroom — an unfounded conclusion that was based in part on an inappropriate comparison of non-Learning Center special education students with Learning Center students.

Elrich also questioned the motives behind the decision to close the learning centers, which was proposed by Superintendent Jerry Weast, then ratified by the school board on February 13. Weast has said that the learning center students lagged behind their learning-disabled peers academically and that the centers had become dumping grounds for minority students.

"The county, up until the decision was made to close them, actually touted these centers," Elrich wrote. "The issue, for me, is not whether there should be centers, but rather, are the placements in the centers appropriate."

Leventhal said he hoped school officials would listen to both sides of the issue.

"I do not have children with learning disabilities, although I have great sympathy for parents who do," Leventhal wrote.

Tempers and gas prices rise

By Mike Brody
Special to the Sentinel

The local gas prices are headed up again and so are the tempers of local drivers.

One, Kevin E. Cavey, who worked at the DOT for 37 years, sent his former bosses and the U.S. Department of Transportation a list of 15 things that could be done to improve the nation's fuel economy, he said his letter was ignored.

"There's no excuse for it. It's all politics," Cavey said.

Cavey is one of many local people who are upset with high gas prices. While some people in the area might not have to bear the burden that others do for long traveling, some do pay the price.

"This year, I didn't have a vacation," Cavey said.

The price per gallon of regular gas in the Washington Metro area was $3.13 on Wednesday, according to AAA's Daily Fuel Gauge Report. A month ago, the price was $2.95, the Report said.

Gas prices in some other major cities in the country are well beyond that of the Washington Metro area. In New York City on Wednesday, the price per gallon of regular gas was $3.32, while in Los Angeles-Long Beach, it was $3.39, according to the Report.

Montgomery County Councilmember Roger Berliner said that the increase in gas prices "reduces all of our citizens' disposable income. We burn it in gasoline rather than save it for our kids' education."

In the Washington metro area last year, the cost of gas increased 19 cents per gallon during the six weeks before Memorial Day weekend, according to the press release. Nationally, the price increased 12 cents per gallon over the same timeframe.

It was a different story in 2005 though, as there was a 13-cent decrease per gallon in the Washington metro area and a 14-cent decrease nationally in the six weeks before Memorial Day weekend, according to the press release.

While the year-to-year prices may not be consistent in terms of increasing or decreasing, it's likely that there will be an increase in the number of people going to the pump over the next few months. "During the summer months the demand for gasoline normally increases five percent over the balance of the year," according to a AAA Mid-Atlantic News Release from May 24.

"We're not getting enough in return," said Anton Cole, a former serviceman who lives in Baltimore but works in the area. "Somebody's got to make a sacrifice and give back to us."

Lon Anderson, who is the director for both Government and Public Relations for AAA Mid-Atlantic, noted that Washington, Baltimore and the suburbs of those two cities use re-formulated gas. Reformulated gas is "about a dime a gallon" more expensive than normal gas, Anderson said. That type of gas is mixed slightly differently and burns more clearly in hotter temperatures, according to Anderson.

The use of re-formulated gas is required by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in areas that have poor air quality, Anderson said.

Shirley Carozza, a resident of Bethesda, said she does not have to worry as much about racking up the mileage on her way to work as other area residents may.

"I'm fortunate that I don't have to drive a very long way to work," Carozza said. However, Carozza noted the rest of her family has not been so lucky - they all have longer commutes than she does.

Rockville will STEP up

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

The director of Rockville’s Department of Recreation and Parks says this year’s slate of summer camps, as well the Student Total Enrichment Program, or STEP, a before- and after-school program, are stronger than ever despite a town-hall complaint at the Rockshire community Thursday night.

Audience member Pat Nucci told Councilwomen Susan R. Hoffmann and Anne M. Robbins - the only members of the city council present at the meeting - and city staff that he was disappointed in the dwindling number of summer camp activities provided by Rockville. In addition, Nucci said he was worried about the quality and high turnover rate of instructors at his child’s STEP program at Fallsmead Elementary School.

“It got to the point where every month there was a new person,” Nucci said at the meeting. “I don’t think it’s healthy to have a new adult [so often]. And once in a while the quality of the adult became questionable.”

The STEP program is offered at Fallsmead and Richard Park Elementary School. The program starts from 7 a.m. to the beginning of school, and then continues after school until 6 p.m.

Phil Bryan, superintendent of recreation for the Rockville Department of Parks and Recreation, said most of those comments didn’t make sense.

“It’s one of those things where some just says something,” Bryan said. “It’s a shame that something like that comes out in public.”

Bryan said the number of camps provided by the City of Rockville, which include sport-specific camps, science camps and general outdoors camps, had increased from 89 in 2003 to 142 in 2007.

Bryan also said all of the STEP program employees had to go through criminal background checks and had to have a specific number of hours in childhood development classes.

Bryan said that typically there were four STEP supervisors, including a director and assistant director, at both Fallsmead and Richard Park. Bryan said the Fallsmead director and assistant director had been with the program for three years.

As for Richard Park, Bryan said, “It’s not like every month or so we’re losing people. I’m not saying it’s easy to get qualified people, but we do get the best qualified people we can.”

When asked to describe the questionable aspects of the Fallsmead employees, Nucci cited tattoos and ear piercings.

Bus strikes county pedestrian

By Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

A Clarksburg High School student was hit but not seriously injured by a school bus last Wednesday morning, according to police.

The bus struck the 16-year-old girl just before 7 a.m. at the intersection of Germantown Road and Scenery Drive in Germantown when the school bus driver failed to yield to her at a crosswalk, according to Montgomery County police spokeswoman Melanie Hadley.

The girl received care at Germantown Emergency Center and was released the same day, said Hadley.

“She had a few scrapes on her face and hurt her arm,” said Hadley.

Hadley said the bus was traveling south on Scenery Drive and stopped at a stop sign but did not yield to the girl before turning left onto Germantown Road.

“We always caution pedestrians to stay in the crosswalk,” said Hadley. “This time she was in the crosswalk, but the driver just didn’t look carefully enough before turning.”

Hadley said the driver will not be charged in the incident.

Kate Harrison, spokeswoman for Montgomery County Public Schools, would not comment.

The incident comes less than a week after a 13-year old boy was killed crossing the street in Germantown.

Jeremiah N. Waters of Germantown died last Saturday after he walked out in front of a Ride-On bus and was hit by an SUV. The driver of the SUV, 19-year-old Ahmad Ali, has not been charged.

County Executive Isiah Leggett mentioned Jeremiah during a press conference last week held to discuss public-safety efforts.

“Jeremiah could have been any of our children,” said Leggett at Stone Mill Elementary School in North Potomac.

Leggett said the county would spend $25,000 of the revenue generated from the county’s new speed camera program on safety improvements at public schools.

“I hope aggressive drivers are getting the message to slow down,” said Leggett. “But for those who continue to break the law, they’ll be helping us step up initiatives to make our streets safer for everyone.”

Jeremiah was the sixth pedestrian killed this year in the county. Last year, 18 pedestrians died after being struck by vehicles. During the press conference, Leggett said the county has distributed 400 DVDs about pedestrian safety to every public and private school and library in the county.

Councilwoman Nancy Floreen said parents should take time to watch the DVD with their children.

“Jeremiah should be in fourth period right now,” said Floreen.

What's in a name?

Plenty of controversy in Rockville Library

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

The Douglas M. Duncan Library?

That's what an ad-hoc committee recommended County Executive Ike Leggett name the new Town Center library Tuesday night, 4-2, after a sometimes-contentious debate.

"I wish we had a jury here who didn't come with preconceived notions, like this committee," said Rockville Councilwoman Anne M. Robbins, who claimed the committee had been stacked with Duncan supporters.

An advisory committee to the county executive must be established when naming a county building after an individual. Besides Robbins, the advisory committee included Al Roshdieh, acting deputy director of the Department of Public Works and Transportation, Barbara Noland, community services manager for the Department of Public Libraries, County Councilman George Leventhal, Lee Burstyn with the Historic Preservation Commission, Gayl Selkin-Gutman, a resident of Rockville, and Scott Reilly, assistant chief administrative officer and chairman of the committee.

Robbins and Selkin-Gutman voted against the measure. The rest of the committee voted for it, except for Noland, who abstained. Noland said she preferred to keep the new library's name as it is: the Rockville Library.

Leventhal originally proposed to name the library after Duncan last November. But many Rockville residents testified during public hearings that they thought it was inappropriate to name the library after Duncan, whom they said had fought to delay funds to the library while he was county executive.

"He [Duncan] did pretty much try to sabotage funding," Selkin-Gutman said.

Leventhal said he was "mystified" at the anger some people held toward Duncan.

"I don't understand it, the intensity of the anger," Leventhal said. "This is a fortunate community. The county has treated it well...I'm mystified by all this anger and desire for revenge."

Robbins and Selkin-Gutman proposed as an alternate name the

"I'm mystified by all this anger and desire for revenge."

County Councilman
George Leventhal

Rockville Memorial Library, named for seven Montgomery County residents who have died in the Iraq War. Members of the audience, including Irwin Charles Cohen, one of the main proponents of the alternate name during public testimony, agreed.

"Elected officials make a contribution," Cohen said. "But these young men make a sacrifice. There's a difference."

Leventhal and Robbins, the two most vocal — and conflicting — voices on the committee, quibbled several times during the two-hour meeting.

After Leventhal repeated his surprise at "unhappiness and revenge" with Duncan concerning the library, Robbins replied, "Unfortunately, George, you're the only person that talks like that. I think we made it clear...we did not bring this up, George. For you to go on like that, it just misses the mark, and I think it usually does everyone a disservice for you to go on being sarcastic. I really don't think that helps anyone."

Among those at the hearing, current Rockville mayoral candidate Drew Powell expressed his displeasure, as did Robbins, that a resolution passed unanimously by the Rockville City Council in support of the Rockville Memorial Library name did not appear in the materials before the committee. Neither did public testimony by former Rockville mayor Rose Krasnow in support of that name, though committee members noted the accidental absences and included them in their discussions.

Nellie Leid, Duncan's sister, watched from the audience and once shouted out her support for her brother, though she said she attended the meeting on her own volition and that no one in her family talked about whether they wanted the library named after Duncan.

The committee's recommendations are just that: recommendations. Leggett still has complete authority to name the library whatever he wants. To name the library after Duncan would require an executive order because Duncan has not been out of office for five years, the minimum amount of time. But Reilly noted that an executive order would merely be a formality.

WSSC working to replace aging pipelines

Payal Patnaik
Special to the Sentinel

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) began excavating part of a second 16-foot stretch of pipe May 24, which was discovered during its pipe inspection of a six-mile, 40-year old major water main in Montgomery County that runs between the Potomac Water Treatment Plant and the area where I-270 crosses Tuckerman Lane.

The project, which began in April, aims to spend approximately three months of inspection on this particular line, repairing and replacing sections that need to be updated.

According to spokeswoman

Lyn Riggins, the WSSC's goal this year is to replace 19 miles of the 5300 miles of freshwater pipeline in both Montgomery County and Prince George's County, which costs approximately 1 million dollars per mile of pipe replaced. The WSSC's goal for next year is to replace 25 miles of pipe, Riggins said.

"For Montgomery County, most of the replacements are in residential areas," Riggins said.

Of the 5,300 miles of pipeline in both counties, 25% of the pipelines are more than 50 years old and more than 60% is 30 years or older. The WSSC has detected certain areas of pipeline that are more prone to breaking down.

"The reason for the water main breaks yesterday and the majority of the ones in the news as of late - old pipes. Our infrastructure is aging. This is a problem facing WSSC as well as other utilities nationwide," Riggins said.

As of May 30, Riggins reported that there has been 42 water main breaks this month. Last May, the area experienced 33 breaks and leaks and has averaged 37 leaks and breaks in May during the last 10 years.

"Since these pipes are 8 feet in diameter, people are walking through, locating places and replacing them," Riggins said. The pipe that broke down in Chevy Chase yesterday had a 10-inch diameter, Riggins added, and is more difficult to replace since its impossible to walk through.

NIGHTLIFE

Showers didn't keep away the crowds in Rockville Sunday night (upper left). K.C. and the Sunshine Band brought out the sunlight and fun as they romped through their 70s hits (left), while above Chris Chung enjoyed himself with cotton candy and other sundries during the annual Hometown Holidays in Rockville this weekend.

Showers don't dampen Hometown Holidays

By Mike Brody
Special to the Sentinel

It hadn't rained in weeks, so you know it would just have to pour during the annual "Hometown Holidays" in Rockville this past weekend.

"It just started raining when we got here," said M'Ellen Howard, a local resident who found herself running for cover from the brief downpour. She wasn't alone as nearly a thousand partygoers found themselves scattering for cover from the brief, rare burst of rain.

After the skies cleared on Sunday night, people resurfaced and started filling the area around the main stage. Moments later KC and the Sunshine Band began their performance. The band performed classic hits such as "Get Down Tonight" and "Boogie Shoes." Harry Wayne Casey, the lead singer of the group, said that he would be signing autographs after the performance.

Casey proved himself to be worth the price of admission, poking fun at his own image and taking a stab at some of the singing icons of today.

"We're the N'Sync of your parents' generation," the 56-year-old performer ribbed the crowd, then pointing to himself, he said, "This is what Justin Timberlake will look like in 30 years . . ."

Still, he found himself signing autographs for close to an hour after his performance as a huge line of fans, from young children to older adults, waited to get a glimpse of Casey.

Otherwise, residents from the four corners of Rockville and points beyond swarmed downtown Rockville this past weekend enjoying food, comedy routines and, not to mention, one of the more popular bands of the last 35 years as they celebrated the annual "Hometown Holidays."

Beginning Saturday and culminating with a parade early Monday, different entertainment routines and activities were prevalent throughout the Rockville Town Center.

"This is really what Rockville's all about," Rockville Mayor Larry Giammo said. "It's a hometown, but we got great community events, great community spirit, one of the greatest places in the nation to live and work."

One of the big attractions at the event was the Taste of Rockville, which involved many local restaurants.

"The goal is to get out all of the restaurants in Rockville, as many as we can, to participate, so that everybody can see the wonderful places that we have in Rockville and the kind of great food that there is," Rockville Chamber of Commerce president and CEO Debra Liverpool said.

Liverpool noted that the display gives both new and old restaurants in Rockville as well as restaurants surrounding Rockville the opportunity to showcase their food. Some of the restaurants that participated included Armand's Pizzeria and Grille, Potomac Pizza and Hard Times Cafe.

The events of the weekend allowed many groups and individuals an opportunity to display some of their talents and entertainment capabilities. The Singular Sensations, an ensemble group of high schoolers, performed on Saturday.

The group, which is affiliated with the Musical Theater Center in Rockville, performs in Montgomery County but has also been on other big stages.

"We've been to the White House. We've been to Wolf Trap, Kennedy Center. We were in Russia 15 years ago on a tour," pianist and music director Dave Larko said.

Paul Hadfield, who has been performing at the event for almost 20 years, said, "Ten year-olds that were at my show in 1987 are now like 50, and so they're bringing their kids, and so I feel like I'm an institution."

Hadfield also commented on the overall growth of the event.

"One year it was just a big parking lot, and it was like being in a desert, and there was no shade," he said. "And it just keeps changing, but I think it's like the best ever now, so it's nice to be here."

Many events were spread out in the immediate area of the event.

"I think the setup is very well organized," said Otis Motley, a two-year resident of Montgomery county. "We enjoyed the events that they are having today. I think it's very impressive for the community here, and everything looks so nice."

Monday's 63rd annual Rockville Memorial Day Parade was preceded by the ceremony in Courthouse Square Park. The Parade began shortly after the ceremony's conclusion.

"We come here every year," said Kevin McGrattan, who lives in Gaithersburg. "The kids are walking the dogs with a group of neighborhood dog owners, so they enjoy it."

THEATER

A strange and almost magical blend of old and new

By David Cannon
Sentinel Arts Critic

Generally considered Shakespeare's final play, and his farewell to the theater, The Tempest is a late fairy tale that seems so simple on the surface but becomes far more complicated on further analysis.

To end their current season, the Folger Theater gives us a Tempest that is quite modern at first glance, but becomes far more traditional the deeper you look into it.

That is not necessarily a bad thing. All sorts of ideas have been loaded onto this late play, some interesting and some quite out there. Director Aaron Posner begins with a high tech storm at sea, complete with video backdrop and an Ariel commanding the waves. Once we get onto dry land, things go far more smoothly for nearly all concerned. Tony Cisek's fanciful set design, full of curved set pieces and almost Kabbalistic designs seems to point to a modern retelling also.

The most traditional aspect of the play is Michael Rudko as Prospero. This wronged monarch who is commanding all the players on this island is considered by some to be one of Shakespeare's most complicated creations; a prototype of an English colonist in as much need for forgiveness as those who wronged him. Rudko goes the less complicated route – a simple man who has already forgiven those who injured him and just waiting to bring everyone together to finalize that deal.

The most radical aspect of the play is Todd Scofield's Caliban, the ungainly servant who is the other side of the coin from the ethereal and obedient Ariel (and more oppressed slave than faithful servant). In this production, Caliban is nuts – literally. He is brought in with a straight jacket (which at times resembles those old Mummy movies) and he sees things. In traditional productions, Caliban meets two men from the shipwrecked vessel (Stephano and Trinculo) for a comically drunken mutiny. Here Caliban creates his fellow mutineers out of thin air, talking to his hands and props when he holds his conversations. It is easy to forgive someone like Caliban who seems more a threat to himself than to anyone else. Despite this unusual approach to the character, Scofield does a great job with the part. But if you are expecting to see Caliban as an island native rebelling against his oppressive European masters, as many production treat this character, you will not find it here.

But you will find Erin Weaver as Prospero's daughter Miranda and Mikael Sulaiman as Ferdinand. This central love interest in the play tends to be its most forgettable aspect, but these two actors make a memorable couple. Marybeth Fritzey is an ethereal Ariel, always aloof and above the fray, rarely taking center stage with her human master.

It's an interesting if unusual approach. At one moment this is as traditional, even old-fashioned presentation of the play as you could wish for, and then much more strikingly modern and adventurous. Does it work? Yes, it does even if you feel you are being pulled in two different directions. This may not be the "brave new world" Miranda talks about in her famous speech, but for once this feels more like the strange almost magical world that Shakespeare may have intended from the start.

The Folger Theater has announced their 2007-2008 season, kicking off with two of the Bard's most famous plays, the comedy As You Like It starting Oct. 17 and then director Posner returning with Teller (of Penn and Teller fame) for Macbeth starting Feb. 28. The final offering is Richard Sheridan's Restoration comedy The School for Scandal starting May 7.

The Tempest continues at the Folger Theater through June 17. For more information, call (202) 544-7077.

What's a Wolf to Do? This little musical was just right

By David Cannon
Sentinel Arts Critic

The idea is simple enough, but still fascinating. Take a couple of well known stories, preferably not too related to one another, mix them together and shake vigorously. The interesting jumble that comes out has the advantage of being both very familiar but always capable of the unexpected.

That is what happens in Adventure Theater's current show What's a Wolf to Do? Marilyn Shockley's little musical adaptation takes several well-known children's tales and mixes them up to see what happens. The stories are slightly related to one another – several well known fairy tales deal with encounters between humans and wolves or other animal creatures. With that simple enough beginning, Wolf takes off in a number of unexpected and frequently humorous directions.

Beginning with, why couldn't Goldilocks and Little Red Riding Hood be best friends? After all they are young girls about the same age, living near a forest, so let's put them together in the same forest. And if Red Riding Hood is going to have problems with a wolf, why not bring in some other characters who had issues with the same wolf to help her out. After that, nothing quite works out the way we quite expect.

The little musical numbers for once do add to the show. Just as the script parodies beloved fairy tale plots, so the music hits all sorts of musical styles. Since we have two heroines, let's make the Three Little Pigs female too, which leads right into a takeoff of the Supremes. If the Wolf is going to take center stage to tell us what he is contemplating after meeting Red Riding Hood, let's give him a cane and a top hat to really strut on stage.

The key is Director Ron Sarro not taking any of this seriously, and having his large cast convey that same devil may care attitude throughout. Of course Goldilocks is going to run into Three Bears in the woods, so they become hillbilly bears singing to the strains of a faux country song. If we are going to add a modern twist here and there, let's go whole hog and include the Heimlich maneuver. No one bats an eye at all the strange coincidences and events in this small forest, and everyone goes with the flow.

So let's begin with our heroines, Justine Moral as the spunky Red Riding Hood and Kathleen Murphy as the more easily led into trouble Goldilocks. Both do well with their parts, creating sympathetic characters and holding a firm center as all the increasingly off the wall stuff occurs around them. That includes Robert Mintz as the Wolf, our villain who takes his lumps and ends up being an equally compassionate creature.

But everyone here is good. The three pigs are a blast to watch singing their Motown-flavored numbers even while each tries to steal the spotlight from the others. The Three Bears are just as much fun as their backwoods ways, which generate countless jokes. Even Red's Mother and her Granny, both played by Marsha Coder, each get a moment to take center stage.

About the only thing that does not work is Roddy, Red's "invisible friend." I realize invisible friends are not an unusual childhood fantasy, and it works that Red gives up her fantasy friend when she meets her real life friends, but still very little is done with Roddy. I think the play would move smoothly and still have several good morals to impart if the invisible friend stayed invisible.

But Eleanor Dicks' costumes are imaginative throughout, especially those Pigs cum Supremes outfits, and Brenden McDougal's simple yet comic book sets add another humorous touch. It's a simple enough tale, but it is very creative and very funny.

Not too warm and not too cold. Just about right.

What's a Wolf to Do? continues at Adventure Theater at Glen Echo through June 24. For more information, call (301) 320-5331.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY DELINQUENT TAXES — NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE OF TAX SALE OF REAL ESTATE IN MONTGOMERY COUNTY, MARYLAND

Notice is hereby given that the following is a list of real property for which taxes, refuse charges, WSSC charges, special improvement levies, service charges, and other fees or charges are due and in arrears to Montgomery County, municipalities in Montgomery County, and to the State of Maryland. The property owners listed are those that appear on the County tax rolls at the time of publication. If these amounts, plus interest and penalty due, are not paid before Monday, June 11, 2007, the Tax Collector will, on Monday June 11, 2007, in accordance with the provisions of the laws of the State of Maryland and Montgomery County Maryland, proceed with the public sale and accept sealed bids for the tax liens pertaining to the properties and/or property groups listed below. The tax sale program enables the County to collect all unpaid property taxes, charges, and fees. When a property tax lien is sold and the total amount due is paid by the purchaser, the County's lien on the property passes to the purchaser. The list of real property upon which amounts are due and in arrears is arranged in random groups for the purpose of bidding.

NOTICE TO PROSPECTIVE BIDDERS/PURCHASERS

1. The Tax Sale will be held on Monday, June 11, 2007, between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Eastern Time (ET).

2. The tax sale is open to the public. Prospective bidders should investigate the properties. There is no warranty, expressed or implied, that a property has a marketable title or that it contains the area of land which it is said to contain; therefore, the purchaser assumes all risks in that regard. Each tax lien pertaining to the parcel of property taken to tax sale will be sold as an entirety. No property tax lien will be sold for a sum less than the advertised price. Purchasers will receive a certificate of sale for each real property tax lien as required by law.

3. At the time this advertisement is prepared, all delinquent tax accounts from the various election districts will be divided into property groups consisting of approximately the same number of properties randomly selected. During the advertising period, May 17th through June 7th and up to the tax sale date, properties can be removed from groups predicated on payments received and other events deemed necessary by the County. Therefore, the final number of properties within each group can be less than advertised. The property groups will be numbered for identification.

4. In accordance with the legislation passed in 1998 by the Maryland State Legislature, the County utilizes a sealed bid process to conduct the tax sale. Bidders can bid on the tax lien in one property group, multiple property groups, or on any number of individual properties in the same or different groups. Bidders bidding on full groups will be given priority over bidders seeking to purchase individual properties.

5. All bids must include the following information to be considered:

- The name, address and daytime telephone number of the bidder
- The name to appear on the tax sale certificate.
- For group bids, the group number must be provided. For individual property tax lien bids, the tax account number of the individual properties as well as the associated group number must be provided.
- The bid must be expressed as a multiple (bid factor) of the full cash value of each property or, for group bids, all the properties in the group. For example, a group bid factor of 0.45 would indicate that the bidder is bidding 0.45 times the full cash value on all properties in the group. If a bidder bids on an entire group, then the bid factor must be the same for all individual properties within that group. If a bidder bids on multiple groups, then the bid factor may be different for each group. If a bidder bids on individual properties within a single group or multiple groups, then the bid factor may be different for each individual property.

6. Bids that do not include all the preceding information are not responsive. In the case where the bids are identical for the same group of properties, the winning bid will be selected by lottery no later than 9:00 a.m. ET on Tuesday, June 12, 2007.

7. Bids must be received between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. ET on Monday, June 11, 2007. No bids will be accepted before or after those hours. Bids may be submitted by express mail, overnight or courier delivery, or in person. Bids should be addressed to the attention of "The Tax Sale Administrator," Division of Treasury, 255 Rockville Pike, Suite L-15, Rockville, MD 20850. Bids may also be submitted via e-mail to taxliensalebid.finance@montgomerycountymd.gov. All attachments must be MS Windows compatible. Faxed bids will not be accepted.

8. All successful bidders/purchasers will be notified by telephone no later than 10:00 a.m. ET on Tuesday, June 12, 2007. Notification will include the tax sale amount and the amount due for the high-bid premium. Bidders who are subject to a lottery will also be notified at that time. The successful bidder/purchaser is required to pay the full amount due as advertised plus any high-bid premium for all winning bids with payment received by the County no later than 4:00 p.m. ET on Tuesday, June 12, 2007. The method of payment is electronic funds transfer. The County will confirm with its bank the receipt of the payment. Wire payments must be directed to Wachovia, ABA #0550-0320-1 for credit to Montgomery County Maryland Depository Account No. 2000001048768

9. The high-bid premium is 20% of the amount by which the bid exceeds 40% of the property full cash value. In the event that the computation results in a negative high bid premium, the premium amount will be set to zero.

10. Successful bidders/purchasers who do not make payment for the full amount due for all winning bids by the specified time are considered non-compliant and excluded from the auction. At that time, the County reserves the right to make the award to the next highest bidder until all tax liens are sold. The Collector reserves the right to take appropriate action under TP 14-817(a)(3) including but not limited to the right to refuse to accept bids that are not made in good faith and the right to bar a purchaser or holder of a certificate from participating in future tax sales held by the County. At the County's option, property groups and/or individual properties not sold will be offered for sale, at a later date, to the highest bidder until sold.

11. There may be properties sold for which taxes were paid prior to the sale date or other circumstances which render the sale invalid or void. The County reserves the right to invalidate or void a sale at any time. In the event the County determines that a tax sale is invalid or void the County will, as the exclusive remedy available to the purchaser, reimburse the purchaser the tax sale purchase price paid, without interest, and any applicable high bid premium paid, without interest. Events that may invalidate a tax sale include, but are not limited to, bankruptcy filings prior to the tax sale, transfer errors on the assessor's records that cause the failure of notice to the proper property owner or sale of incorrect property, payment of taxes prior to the tax sale, issuance of a revised bill by the assessor, value changes by the assessor, erroneous service charges, service fees, special improvement levies, WSSC charges, or refuse charges. The tax sale bidder/purchaser assumes all risks of any irregularity of the sale and has no other remedy against the County. The County is not liable for and will not pay the purchaser any interest, costs, expenses or attorney fees associated with any invalid or void sale.

12. Tax sales are complex proceedings and the County recommends that you seek legal advice prior to participation in the annual tax sale.

13. The owner or other person having an estate or interest in the property tax lien sold has the right to redeem the property tax lien at any time until the right of redemption is finally foreclosed by an order of the Circuit Court (Tax Property Article, Section 14-827, Annotated Code of Maryland).

14. For tax lien sale information, please visit the County website at www.montgomerycountymd.gov/taxliensale

15. By participating in the Tax Sale, the bidder/purchaser agrees to accept and be bound by all of the terms and conditions of this Notice of Sale.

BOOK REVIEW

13 Rue L'Amour-in the farce place

It is very hard to review the current show 13 Rue L'Amour up at the Olney Theater Center for the Arts. The play is a knockabout bedroom farce, by one of the great practitioners of this unjustly maligned art (Georges Feydeau). Everything seems to be in place, and yet something is missing that keeps this frothy brew from properly gelling.

Feydeau is considered the best French comic playwright since Moliere, but where Moliere was an intellectual comedian, Feydeau was into slapstick and broad humor. This is late Victorian, just before the World War humor with silly plot lines, one dimensional characters, plenty of sly winks and double entendres, bizarre coincidences and people ending up in various states of undress. In other words – good clean, dirty fun and yet we rarely indulge in Feydeau's humor these days and even his masterpieces A Flea in Her Ear and Hotel Paradiso are rarely revived.

Perhaps Olney's production shows us why. This type of play is not as easy to pull off as it seems. A lot of this is timing, who goes where at this point in the proceedings. Like any good farce, the better the play the more doors there are on stage for people to make rapid entrances and hurried exits. But more than just blocking, this type of play needs a certain style and delicate handling or it just sits there. You can have all the ingredients for a great soufflé, but if you don't cook it just right, it's just a scrambled egg.

Needless to say 13 Rue L'Amour is an address, and just about everyone in the cast will end up there during the course of the play. Bachelor Moricet wants to have an affair with married lady Leontine. Leontine suspects her husband Justinien is cheating on her and ends up at Moricet's apartment. Well, Leontine is correct, and not only is Justinien having an affair but having one across the hall from Moricet at the same time. Add another jealous husband, some keystone cops and an amorous college student who also lives at Rue L'Amour and you can see those doors are going to get used a lot.

Farce needs to be so well drilled that it feels like it is improvisation.

with married lady Leontine. Leontine suspects her husband Justinien is cheating on her and ends up at Moricet's apartment. Well, Leontine is correct, and not only is Justinien having an affair but having one across the hall from Moricet at the same time. Add another jealous husband, some keystone cops and an amorous college student who also lives at Rue L'Amour and you can see those doors are going to get used a lot.

The cast is an odd mix of being too knowing and not knowing enough. Some characters play too much to the audience and others do not seem to realize they are in a bedroom farce. Some actors are dead on – Halo Wines as a Countess turned concierge with a back history, those keystone cops and Ethan Bowen as their only slightly more alert Inspector and Nick DePinto as a lovesick college student feel like they are in the right play.

The play is only one step up from a cartoon, and that aspect is nicely highlighted by James Wolk's stylized sets – they look like something out of an Art Deco comic strip. Liz Covey's stylized period costumes and Nicole Paul's wigs walk that fine line between period accuracy and parody. In many ways the technical aspects of the show are the best things about it.

So what is missing from this production since so much is properly in place? Or more accurately, what's in it that shouldn't be there? And I think that's the issue – one feels director James Going's hand is too much in this production. Farce needs to be so well drilled that it feels like it is improvisation. Instead, one feels James Going's hand too much in this show.

Instead of spontaneous, it too often feels overly stylized and belabored. Despite all its manic energy, all the fun and joy has been drained from it.

However, Olney Theater has taken a major step and paved its parking lot. It looks great and it feels a lot better to drive on. For some patrons, that may be reason enough to head out to Olney.

13 Rue L'Amour continues at the Olney Theater Center for the Arts through June 10. For more information, call (301) 924-3400 or visit www.olneytheatre.org on the web.

A Buffalo in the House by R.D. Rosen

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
Sentinel Book Reviewer

Back when you were a kid, was your love of animals the source of much exasperation for your ever-patient mother?

Was every creature fair game for domestication? Did you have pet frogs, snakes, birds, a dog, a cat, longed for a pet skunk, would've had a squirrel if you could've caught one, begged for a donkey or a horse and tried to sneak a mouse in your bedroom once?

Well, did you ever have a pet bison?

In the new book A Buffalo in the House by R.D. Rosen, you'll read about one couple's experiences with an unlikely pet and the way it buffaloed its way into their hearts.

In the late 1800s, when Indian-white relations were far from friendly and buffalo were being hunted to near-extinction, Texas rancher Charles Goodnight and his wife, Mary Ann, hand-raised two buffalo calves and eventually grew them into a herd. Friendly with the Taos Pueblo Indians, Goodnight later gave several animals to the New Mexico natives so the tribe would have access to precious buffalo tallow. Three generations after Goodnight's death in 1929, his gift was nearly forgotten.

But Charles' generosity wasn't forgotten by his great-great-niece, artist Veryl Goodnight. Veryl knew about her ancestors, and wanted to honor them through sculpture. But since Veryl worked with living models, she needed a buffalo calf. She and her husband, Roger Brooks, spread the word to ranchers that an orphaned buffalo was needed in New Mexico.

Enter Charlie, as the couple called him. Left behind after a herd migration, Charlie was less than a week old when Veryl and Roger flew to Idaho to claim him. He was the perfect model, but as Veryl's sculpture grew, so did Charlie. At just a few months old, he was well over 400 pounds.

And he had grown in Roger's heart as well. Brooks loved Charlie, and though he knew that a buffalo was a wild animal, Charlie had become, and acted, like a beloved out-sized hound. Roger was aware of Charlie's power, but he felt little danger from his "son." The danger, as it turns out, was in Charlie's misunderstood self-image.

I was somewhat prepared for what I was going to get when I started reading A Buffalo in the House. I wasn't prepared to love this book so much.

A little bit of history, part animal tale with a good dose of Wild West, Rosen tells a boy-and-his-dog story, buffalo style. Rosen is an excellent storyteller, and I particularly enjoyed the way he weaves the present in with the past. Every former kid who captured critters with the goal of taming them will love this book, as will Western fans, cowboys and cowboy wanna-be's and lovers of the West.

If you're mad for Marley, elated over Elsa the lion, rowdy for Rascal, or if you just want to read a good book about the new Old West, then this is the one to find. Stampede out and get A Buffalo in the House to add to your animal-lover book collection.

I wasn't prepared to love this book so much.

WHERE IN THE WORLD IS... THE UNITED ARAB EMIRATES?

1819 Walt Whitman, American poet, was born on this day. His most famous work, Leaves of Grass, included this short poem entitled To You:

Easily overlooked, the small nation of the United Arab Emirates (UAE) is sandwiched between the countries of Saudi Arabia and Oman. It has territory on both the Persian Gulf and the Gulf of Oman.

Abu Dhabi has some of the world's most modern architecture.

In 1971, six states or emirates (an Arabic word that means land controlled by an emir or prince) joined together to form the UAE. The next year they were joined by a seventh emirate. Together they form a country that is slightly smaller than the state of Maine.

Despite its small size, the UAE plays an important role in the Middle East. It has grown as a regional financial center and has a standard of living that is similar to that found in Western Europe.

The land is generally flat and desert-like with mountains in the east. The climate is dry, but cooler in the mountain areas. Freshwater resources are scarce, but are supplemented by desalination plants.

The nation has a population of nearly 4.5 million people. Its capital city is Abu Dhabi.

JAMESTOWN VISIT

The following story was written by Yujiang Chen, a Chinese high school student, who visited Jamestown during its recent celebrations. He was surprised by the large crowds and wrote, "Even in China, it is very hard to see so many people in the same place." But he also noted, that the guides were helpful and friendly, and that his family was able to see a lot of the celebrations.

On May 13th, some people who were impersonating English settlers and who were led by their Capitan "John Smith" stepped off a sailboat that was just like one that had been made 400 years ago. It was the beginning of the 400th anniversary of Jamestown, America's first permanent settlement. The anniversary weekend was held on May 11th to 13th in the Jamestown settlement, the Anniversary Park and Historic Jamestown. Countless activities and a multitude of tourists went there to learn about the history of the settlement.

My family and I were there when President Bush visited and gave a speech. In the speech he said, "Four centuries ago, after a long journey, a small group of colonists stepped boldly onto the shores of the New World and established the first permanent English settlement in North America. During the 400th anniversary of Jamestown, America honors the early pioneers whose epic of endurance and courage started the story of our Nation..."

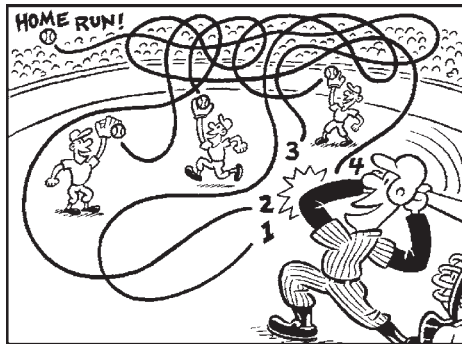

Then a professional guide led our tour. At first she told us about the history of Jamestown. After the settlers had landed, they did not find the gold that they had dreamed of for a long time. But they did find many unknown diseases and starvation. Fortunately, Native Americans taught them how to plant tobacco and other plants. However, large numbers of Native Americans died from the war and diseases which were brought by the settlers.

The guide brought us to the fort where we saw the church, warehouse, weapon-maker house and other buildings. The women who used the old ovens made delicious bread in 30 minutes. Some people smoked fish in the old way. It was not an easy job, especially in that time. But it may have been the smoked fish that helped the settlers in their first several years on the Island. We also learned about the Indians' tribes. They grew two kinds of plants — corn and beans. They were so clever to do this because the beans would entwine themselves on the corn stalks, so that the Indians did not need to use other sticks to help the beans grow.

In the world-class gallery we saw archeological collections that helped us understand the history of Jamestown and the reason why it became so important. There are a lot of rich and colorful events, shows and exhibitions in the Anniversary Park. Hundreds of musicians got together to make an art festival. Visitors enjoyed themselves in the sounds and dancing. The activity ended with a fireworks display.

With two outs in the top of the seventh and Sherwood trailing 8-1, Sherwood shortstop Carter Wilson tries to get some offense going with a drive deep into left field that would prove to be the last play of the game.

Sherwood falls to Eleanor Roosevelt

By Josh Bowman
Staff Writer

Eleanor Roosevelt's head coach Andrew Capece didn't know if his pitcher would be ready by Friday. The Raiders' ace, Sean Swetnam, had thrown 114 pitches only two days earlier in the team's semifinal victory, and Capece was sure Swetnam wouldn't have enough juice to get through another seven innings in the 4A state championship game.

"I didn't think he'd play a full one," said Capece. "Two or three innings at the most."

But while Swetnam's fastball was a little slower on Friday, he was no less effective.

Swetnam pitched a complete game and allowed only two hits and one run while his team scored seven runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to beat the previously undefeated Sherwood Warriors 8-1 in the 4A state championship.

"I was trying not to pitch so hard," said Swetnam after the game, "but just focus on location instead."

Swetnam had nine strikeouts and never needed more than four batters to end an inning on Friday. Of the 89 pitches he threw, 58 were strikes.

"What can you say? He was unbelievable," said Capece.

The game was a pitchers' duel between Swetnam and Sherwood's Drew Hoffmaster until the sixth inning, when Roosevelt's Chris Mc-Caslin stepped up to the plate with runners on second and third. McCaslin popped one to center field, bringing in Tom Matera and Mikey Kerdock to give the Raiders a 3-1 lead.

After that, the Warriors fell apart.

Sherwood head coach William Goodman pulled Hoffmaster, who was dealing with popped blood blisters on his pitching hand, and replaced him with Kyle Blackwell. But when the first batter Blackwell faced laid down a bunt, Blackwell picked up the ball and overthrew the first baseman, allowing McCaslin to score and Donte Dozier to move to third.

Dozier came home on the next pitch, which Blackwell squirreled into the backstop. Then, after Thomas Fenster singled to score Brian Whitmore, Blackwell overthrew the first baseman again on a botched pick-off attempt. Fenster went running to second, and Josh Goldsworthy took off for third. First baseman Tom Fletcher overthrew the third baseman trying to get Goldsworthy for the last out, allowing both Fenster and Goldsworthy to score.

"We just made some crucial, crucial errors at the worst possible time," said Goodman.

Goodman yanked Blackwell and put Alejandro Acevedo on the mound to get the final out, but the damage was already done. The Raiders had scored seven runs in the inning to break a close game wide open.

"This was a tight match between [Swetnam] and Hoffmaster until that inning," said Goodman. "It's unfortunate how it ended, because we played them well up until that point."

Wootton fans showed up to cheer for the Patriots during their championship run, made possible by head coach Colin Thompson, right. While the Patriots became the first Montgomery County team to make it to the finals, they lost the championship.

Wootton makes history, but loses championship

By Drew Pierson
Staff Writer

Severna Park's coach Larry Cramer said it: the Falcons didn't just want to beat Wootton during their 15-6 victory in the state lacrosse championship last Wednesday. They wanted to dominate.

"You've got to win the game, and you've got to play hard," Cramer said. "You've got to give Wootton credit. They got here. They beat Dulaney, and anyone who beats Dulaney gets a lot of respect from us. And really, what it came down to was that we wanted to beat them by nine goals, 10 goals. We wanted to make it respectable; we didn't want to make it a close game...we wanted to make it respectable on our part by dominating."

En route to their second consecutive state championship, Severna Park had virtually any look it wanted against Wootton, thanks in part to a size advantage that made the Falcons look less like a high school team and more like a race of giant, stick-wielding übermen. Falcons attackers backed down Wootton players two at a time, repeatedly used the lacrosse equivalent of a sky hook over the smaller Patriots defenders and generally ran rampant against a team that looked hopelessly outmatched.

"They just did a good job getting the ball," said Wootton coach Colin Thompson. "They beat us on the ground balls, and that got to us. And we had no offense. We were playing on defense a lot of the time, too long, and eventually you see what happens. Our defense was tired and worn down, and next thing you know there's a shot and goal."

The Patriots scored the first goal of the game about six minutes into the first quarter on an inside spin by senior midfielder Jon Yates. That was answered by three consecutive Falcons goals to nearly end the quarter, until another Yates' score - a diving shot in front of the crease - put Wootton to within one with 12 seconds left.

Two minutes into the second, Wootton got the tie via a dead-on pass through traffic by senior defender Jonathan Keslow to his waiting teammate, senior attacker Sam Burns, who evened the score 3-3. But that would be the closest thing to a Wootton victory the Falcons would allow for the rest of the game.

"We just got pumped," said six-foot three-inch senior Falcons attacker Colby Rhodes, who scored three goals in the game and is waiting to hear back from the lacrosse program at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. "We just wanted to keep scoring. We knew that we would get a run on them soon. We weren't that scared when they tied us. Our coach just told us to keep going, told us we were just missing shots, and that we could beat them, and that's what we did. Everyone just got fired up. Our team is full of seniors; no one was scared. It was awesome being a part of this team this year."

Starting six minutes into the second quarter, three more unanswered Falcons goals, followed by six in the third, practically sealed the game.

"The third quarter there was just explosive," Cramer said. "We just started playing lacrosse. I knew they couldn't run with us. I knew we had the athletes, and I knew we could run for four quarters against them, and that's what happened. Our transition game really just exploded."

Severna Park sophomore face-off midfielder Simon Ruppert, who noticeably began to fall into a rhythm after the second quarter, said the Falcons' transition game developed in part because he figured out his Wootton counterpart's face-off move.

"As soon as I could figure out his move we had possession for a long time," Ruppert said. "We started getting runs, getting goals and things started going our way."

Once the game became a runaway for Severna Park, the referees increasingly called Wootton players for obvious slashes and pushes in the back. The Patriots' frustration culminated when senior midfielder and attackman Taylor Bozel scored his first goal of the season with only four minutes left in the game, pulled his jersey over his head and ran in front of the crowd. In response, a Wootton player threw his stick into the end zone of the stadium and received a penalty.

Thompson had taken a timeout earlier to tell his players not to give up.

"I told them, 'We have 12 minutes left to how you're going to be remembered on this field,'" Thompson said. "Are you going to be remembered as someone who just rolled over, or a team that keeps fighting until there's three zeroes on the clock?' And they [Wootton] kept coming. That's been their character since I've been here. They worked really hard, and they didn't stop. But you have to give credit to the other team. They're a great team. They've got a lot of depth and a lot of quality players. I'm glad to be here."

The state championship is Severna Park's fourth since 1999 and the end of an 18-2 regular season.

Thompson said Wootton could have played better, but the Falcons were the best team he had ever coached against.

"It wasn't our best game, but they have such a good team," Thompson said. "It'd be nice to say we just didn't play our best game, which could be true. I thought we played better against Dulaney. If we played that kind of game a couple of things could have been different. But they're a quality team, got a good history and program, so hats off to them."

Brewer has Georgia on his mind

After receiving scholarship offers from a handful of Division I schools, Montrose Christian senior Troy Brewer has signed a national letter-of-intent to play college basketball at the University of Georgia.

"I like their style of play," said Brewer, who chose Georgia over Louisville and California. "I felt comfortable with the coaching staff. It was a great academic school, too."

Brewer, a 6-foot-5 shooting guard who boasts a 3.5 GPA, averaged 15 points per game and helped lead the Rockville private school to a 21-3 record. Montrose Christian also finished the season ranked among the nation's top 25 high school programs.

"He's the epitome of what a student-athlete should be," Montrose Christian head coach Stu Vetter said. "His best basketball is ahead of him."

The Georgia Bulldogs compete in the highly regarded Southeastern Conference with the likes of Florida and Kentucky. Brewer becomes the fifth recruit to sign a national letter-of-intent with the Bulldogs.

"We are really excited to have Troy join the Bulldog family, and we believe that his skills and talent will be assets to our program," said Georgia head coach Dennis Felton.

Brewer has earned a reputation as an outstanding shooter and a defensive stopper. He scored 23 points including seven three-pointers against powerhouse Oak Hill Academy last season.

"He is a terrific guard with good size and length," added Felton. "Shooting the basketball is considered his specialty, but just as important, Troy is simply accustomed to winning."

Last season, Georgia finished with a 19-14 record and fell to Air Force in the second round of the National Invitational Tournament. Brewer, a Gaithersburg resident, can hardly wait to begin his college career at Georgia.

"I'm really excited," he said. "I'm looking forward to it a lot. I think I can just help them out wherever I need to help them out."

Morris Leaves SBU

Former Montrose Christian standout Jourdan Morris has transferred from St. Bonaventure University. The 6-foot-7 forward averaged 2.9 points and 1.8 rebounds in 23 games last season. He twice scored in double figures, including a career high 13 points in a loss to Syracuse.

Nwankwo looks ahead

By Brandy L. Simms

Imagine this scenario: You're a Division I basketball player at a major university. One day you collapse during a practice session and when you awake you learn that you'll never play basketball again. Sounds like a nightmare, right?

That was the harsh reality for Davis Nwankwo when the former Vanderbilt University forward learned in March 2006 that his college basketball career was over.

"I try not to think about it," said the Georgetown Prep graduate. "I can't let myself be depressed. I just try to be positive and look about it another way."

Nwankwo, who grew up in College Park, was diagnosed with an enlarged heart and spent four days in the hospital. He recalled that day last year when his basketball career seemingly came to an end.

"All I remember is being on the sidelines and I don't remember anything else," said the 20-year old. "I hit head first to the floor and I didn't realize where I was and what had happened."

Nwankwo is lucky to be alive and he knows it.

He's thankful for the man who saved his life, Vanderbilt trainer Mike Meyer.

"Obviously, we're closer today," said Nwankwo. "I'm extremely grateful to him. Mike's a great guy. If he wasn't there I probably wouldn't be here today so I'm extremely grateful."

Although he wasn't able to suit up last season, Nwankwo served as a player-coach for the Vanderbilt basketball team and was in attendance at each home and away game. His duties included recording statistics for both teams in addition to scouting and giving instruction to former teammates. He admits that there were times last season when he missed being on the court in uniform.

"It was extremely tough," he said. "[but] the success our team had made up for that."

Vanderbilt finished with a 22-12 record and advanced to the Sweet Sixteen of the NCAA Tournament where the Commodores lost to Georgetown at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J. The Hoyas featured Nwankwo's former high school teammate, 7-foot-2 center Roy Hibbert. Vandy suffered a thrilling one-point loss to Georgetown, 66-65.

It was a good game," said Nwankwo. "It was great to see Roy. We talked before the game, which was cool, and after the game also."

Nwankwo, who carries a double major in economics and engineering science, plans to graduate next year. After he earns his undergraduate degree, he said that he would like to pursue a master's degree in business.

So, what does the future hold for the former Georgetown Prep basketball star?

"Everybody wants to own their own business," said Nwankwo. "But I'm not sure yet."

In the back of his mind, however, he still holds out hope of resurrecting a once promising basketball career.

"My hope is never going to die," he said. "I'm always going to have hope for that."

Local athletes making waves and news

Some former Montgomery County high school athletes have been making news lately. Let's start with Bullis School graduate

The Sporting View

By Brandy L. Simms

Monique Currie who was traded from the WNBA's expansion Chicago Sky to the Washington Mystics last week. The trade not only sends the native Washingtonian back to her roots but reunites her with college teammate Alana Beard whom she once co-starred with at Duke.

"It's a blessing for the Washington metropolitan area," said Wayne Ferrell, who coached Currie at Bullis. "It's just good to have her back in this area."

I saw Currie play numerous times in high school, the first time occurring when she was a soft-spoken sophomore at the Potomac private school. I can remember one game in which she had scored only seven points at halftime but finished the contest with 35 points against a solid Stone Ridge squad. During a stellar high school career, Currie earned numerous individual and team honors. She led the Bulldogs to consecutive Independent School League division championships and brought notoriety to the girls' basketball program.

She finished her career as the school's all-time leading scorer with 2,221 points. "You only get one tremendous player like that in a lifetime," said Ferrell, who added that Currie carried a 3.4 GPA while in high school.

Since the trade, Ferrell said he has been receiving phone calls from folks in the Bullis community who are "tickled to death" that Mo is back in the area. Currie's return should help the Mystics draw more fans to the Verizon Center. "Monique is going to sell tickets," said Ferrell.

In college, Currie earned two undergraduate degrees and is just one class shy of earning a master's degree.

"Monique is just a class act and a lot of people don't realize that," said Ferrell.

Seven-foot-2 Georgetown junior center Roy Hibbert announced last week that he had opted to stay for his senior year instead of heading to the NBA where he would likely be a high first round selection in the June 28 draft.

"I looked at being picked between eight and sixteen in the draft but after discussions with my family and Coach Thompson, I've decided to withdraw my name and return for my senior year," said Hibbert, a Georgetown Prep graduate. "I think I can continue to develop and improve."

Last season, Hibbert helped lead the Hoyas to the Final Four for the first time in two decades. Along the way, he garnered some individual accolades including being named to the All-Big East first team. He was also named to the All-Big East Tour-namment team.

Hibbert was the Hoyas leading rebounder, shot blocker and second leading scorer. Georgetown returns four starters next season and will add two highly regarded freshmen in local products Austin Freeman of DeMatha and Chris Wright of St. John's. Freeman and Wright were both named McDonald's All-Americans.

"I'm excited about next year's team," said Hibbert.

Georgetown is a projected top five team according to many basketball observers. "They have two Mickey D's coming in," said Davis Nwankwo, Hibbert's former teammate at Georgetown Prep. "They're a dangerous team."
