Graduating seniors reflect on time at UTA

Students share their career plans while looking ahead.

BY BEKAH MORR
The Shorthorn staff

This December's commencement ceremonies will see 5,465 students shaking President Vistasp Karbhari's hand and accepting their diplomas. This surpassed last fall's graduating class, increasing by 14 percent.

The College of Education, however, saw an 80 percent decrease among undergraduates, and both the College of Nursing and Health Innovation and the School of Social Work had no doctoral graduates this semester; a decrease of 100 percent from fall 2016.

Troy Johnson, vice president for enrollment, said the continued overall growth in graduates helps attract more students to the university, and the university will continue to be a national leader in the production of graduates from underrepresented populations.

Mechanical engineering Garrett Windschitl

Windschitl said when he started at UTA, he couldn't decide if engineering was the right major for him. Through bonding with professors over research and students through the Aero-Mavs group, he was able to build longer-lasting and more wholesome friendships than he'd found before.

Windschitl was offered a job at Lockheed Martin in the experimental flight test department and will start his new career Jan. 15.

"I'm super excited for it," he said. "It's kind of my dream job."

Zaina Alzinati, broadcast communication and public relations

Alzinati said because her professors made students a priority regardless of class size, she was offered valuable experience, especially from UTA News, the on-campus broadcast news station.

She said her dream is to become an international reporter and plans to move to Jordan after graduation for three to four months to pursue her career.

"It's been a dream of mine for quite awhile, and only when I came to UTA did I realize that it could be possible," she said.

Claudia Ponce, Spanish, Mexican-American studies and psychology

Ponce isn't done quite yet. Though she's graduating, she'll continue her graduate education in California as part of the McNair Scholars Program.

She said she has loved UTA's diversity and was able to expand her knowledge of different cultures and meet people from around the world.

She plans to become a Spanish professor and would love the opportunity to come back and teach at UTA.

UTA students continue to be successful, Johnson said. He expects graduation rates to continue to rise come spring 2018.

Q: Do you give advice based on personal experience, or just from having studied the field?

A: I'm not sure what you mean by "personal experience." If you mean from my own personal sex life, then the answer is basically "no," though it's certainly important for a sex therapist to have had sex and understand the potential problems firsthand. But if you mean from the personal experience of giving advice, then absolutely. It's one thing to learn something from a book or lecture, and quite another to advise a couple on what to do and have them return to your office with feedback. Over the years of being a sex therapist, I learned what advice I gave led to positive results and what didn't, and that experience, gleaned from giving many clients my advice, offered all my clients something very valuable in return.

Q: Nobody seems happy anymore. Most of my teenage friends have turned to either alcohol or drugs as a means to temporarily relieve their depression. Can you tell me how you beat the "blues"? I need to know.

A: There have been many articles about this recently, and the best advice I have for you is to turn to other people. Today, many young people interact mostly on social media with other people. I'm sorry, but texting and chatting aren't the same thing as being in the same place and talking and interacting in person. Learn to concentrate on the people around you, make eye contact and just connect with them. Humans require social engagement. In fact, even animals do -- it's built into our genes.

Smartphones can't replace what people can offer, so if you want to stave off the blues, spend as much time as you can with other people, be they your own age, but who aren't always on social media, or older people. You'll see how contact with people will help your spirits.
