'What's a crisis when every day of your life is a crisis?'

Community workers worried about city plans for the homeless

By P.A. Sevigny
The Suburban

While there's still a lot of talk about the plans for a new transitory shelter (700 beds) for the city's homeless, community workers are worried that the city may not have the resources to deal with a second wave of COVID.

"The city's already taking down its tents, and we have fewer and fewer resources to make it through the day," said Nakuset who works with many indigenous homeless and led the successful effort for relief at Cabot Square where dozens had died. As of last weekend, Resilience directors David Chapman and Nakuset denounced

Less COVID cases at WI CHSLDs

By Kevin Woodhouse
The Suburban

The Suburban got in touch with the West Island Health Board (CIUSSS) recently to get an update on the COVID 19 pandemic.

The CHSLD Herron, which made international headlines when it was announced 30 seniors had died after the staff left in April, has restablized with now only three percent of residents infected with COVID-19, the same infection rate as at LaSalle hospital.

There are also no known cases at the Sainte Anne Veterans' hospital in Sainte Anne-de-Bellevue. According to recent statistics, there are no COVID-19 cases at the CHSLD Vigi in Dollard-des-Ormeaux, the site of another outbreak weeks ago.

When asked about the two recent outbreaks in May at the Lakeshore General Hospital, WI Health Board spokesperson Guillaume Bérubé told The Suburban that "following an outbreak in mid-May at the hospital, we reorganized the contain-
