Hogs' slop also ominous sign for sport

By Doug Segrest
For GameDay

Arkansas fans have been voicing their displeasure with the Razorbacks and school administration with their absence, including last week against Georgia. [MICHAEL WOODS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

In a week where Lane Kiffin was humbled, Vanderbilt was gift-wrapped a miracle and Kentucky dominated a Top 10 foe on the road, the biggest sign of where college football stands came from a familiar outpost of the Southeastern Conference.

Georgia and Arkansas opened SEC play in Fayetteville, where suspense was so nonexistent that Kirby Smart had his team running drills during breaks in the action.

Few were around to boo. Arkansas fans sent a loud message by staying away.

The Razorbacks have lost 12 straight SEC games, dating to 2024. Even with new coach Ryan Silverfield, the empty seats reflected frustration not with the rookie leader, but with an administration that fans believe undersells the program's potential.

Just a day earlier, the Arkansas board of trustees voted to review "the state of competitiveness," including steps needed to reverse the program's fortunes. But the message in the stands is one we're likely to see more often in the coming weeks.

Fans have had enough. Soon, players may, too.

College football is in an unlimited financial arms race, and even historically successful schools are struggling to keep pace. Don't be surprised if some notable roster departures occur before the season ends because financial promises made during recruitment aren't being kept.

On the field, Ole Miss schooled LSU before a fever-pitched crowd still seeking revenge after Kiffin bolted prior to last year's postseason. Alabama got its own revenge against Florida State. And on The Plains, the coach Auburn fans had atop their wish list, Jon Sumrall, outdueled the coach they landed, Alex Golesh.

But the theme of this season is chaos — and that's exactly what unfolded in Music City.

All N.C. State needed to do to beat Vanderbilt was run out the final seconds or take a safety. Instead, the Commodores forced a fumble in the end zone and covered it for the game-winning touchdown with one second left.

Best games this week

- Texas at Tennessee (11 a.m., ABC): Vol For Life Peyton Manning returns to campus — this time to root for nephew Arch and Texas. The Longhorns are right where they expected, but a surprisingly potent Tennessee offense makes this an early showdown to watch. TV rating: 5 stars.
- Ole Miss at Florida (2:30 p.m., ABC): Both teams come off emotional wins and due for a letdown, but Florida has the advantage of The Swamp to keep the Gators focused. It won't matter. TV rating: 5 stars.
- Texas A&M at LSU (6:30 p.m., ABC): Both the Aggies and Tigers are coming off stunning losses. LSU still looks CFP-bound, and Tiger Stadium should be electric. TV rating: 5 stars.
- Vanderbilt at Auburn (3:15 p.m., SEC Network): Auburn has the edge in quarterback experience, but Jared Curtis is coming of age weekly. This is a must-win for the Tigers before embarking on the scariest October in recent memory. TV rating: 4 stars.
- Missouri at Mississippi State (6:45 p.m., SEC Network): Who had this circled a month ago? Now it's a battle of underrated unbeatens. Will the SEC's true dark horse please step forward? TV rating: 4 stars.
- South Carolina at Alabama (6 p.m., ESPN): The Gamecocks' combo of LaNorris Sellers and Dylan Stewart has made heavily favored Alabama teams sweat before. Can they start fast again before the Tide responds? TV rating: 3 stars.
- Oklahoma at Georgia (2:30 p.m., ESPN): Georgia hasn't been tested yet. With Oklahoma's dismal offensive showing, the Dawgs may have to wait another week for a real grade. TV rating: 3 stars.

South Carolina at Alabama

When: 6 p.m. Saturday
Records: South Carolina (2-1, 0-1 SEC), Alabama (3-0, 1-0)
TV/radio: ESPN/FM-93.9, FM 97.7, AM-920
The series: Alabama leads 15-3.

Four-down territory

1. Slow motion: Two weeks in a row, Alabama's offense has failed to start off on the right foot. Poor clock management, penalties and failure to execute plagued the Tide offense in the first quarter against Kentucky. Against Florida State, the defense struggled and allowed 21 points before Bama fans got settled in their seats from the long weather delay. That lack of focus will prove significant against LSU, Georgia or Tennessee. It's a situation that isn't lost on head coach Kalen DeBoer. "We obviously have to start faster," he said. "Two games in a row now where we find ourselves behind. Probably different scenarios on how that happened, but nonetheless we've got to do a better job of coming out the gates."

2. You again: It's hard for Crimson Tide players to forget what LaNorris Sellers did to them last season. He rushed for 67 yards and a touchdown and passed for 222 yards with a touchdown. Alabama escaped with a win but had no answer for Sellers. The good news for Alabama is South Carolina took a step backward after a loss to Mississippi State. The Gamecocks blew a 16-0 first-quarter lead and allowed 41 points over the next three quarters in the loss. Sellers wasn't stellar, throwing two second-half interceptions and taking three sacks, but he's still a threat against an Alabama defense that got torched for 36 points by Florida State.

3. That's more like it: Through the first three games, Alabama has averaged 210 rushing yards. Through the first three games of last season, the Tide averaged 123. That's a significant jump in production and an improvement Alabama will take. The revamped offensive line has made the difference. Transfers Jayvin James (Mississippi State) and Racin Delgatty (Cal Poly), first-year starters Williams Sanders and Jackson Lloyd, along with veteran Mike Carroll, have been the key so far. Blocking from tight ends Josh Ford and Danny Lewis Jr. have also been a heavy part of the run game success.

4. Sorry about that: Earlier this week, offensive coordinator Ryan Grubb called out Bama fans in the FSU game. "We had some boobirds," he said. "I told the guys, 'Shoot, if you'd have quit as fast as some of your fans, (crap), we wouldn't have won that game.'" Alabama trailed 21-6 at one point but rebounded, scored 44 more points and won. Grubb said, "I should have worded my statement today more carefully. This is a special place with an incredible fanbase that all of us are thankful for. ... I look forward to moving on and giving everyone something to cheer about."

Key matchup

Alabama DL Devan Thompkins vs. South Carolina DL Dylan Stewart

Thompkins leads the Tide with three sacks, which matches his total from last season at Southern Cal. Stewart missed the start of the season with an injury, but the preseason All-SEC selection is expected to play Saturday.

Player of the week

WR Lotzeir Brooks

Brooks is a solid No. 2 receiver behind Ryan Coleman-Williams. He is starting to find his rhythm with QB Keelon Russell, and that will help the Tide be an elite receiving corps.

By the numbers

3: For the third time in school history, Alabama has scored 45 or more points in its first three games.

7: Alabama has forced seven turnovers (five interceptions, two fumbles), which leads the SEC and ranks sixth in the country.

9: Tide opponents are 9-of-38 on third-down conversions. Eight of those came from FSU last week.

16: The last time South Carolina beat Alabama was 16 years ago when Steve Spurrier was head coach for the Gamecocks.

Alabama receiver Lotzeir Brooks will try to reel in another victory Saturday against South Carolina. [VASHA HUNT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Prediction

Alabama 42, South Carolina 24

It's hard to find fault in an offense that scores nearly 50 points per game, but just imagine how many points Alabama could score if it didn't struggle out of the gate every game. South Carolina comes into Tuscaloosa reeling from a big loss and looking for answers. So is the Tide defense. What happened between the first two games that saw lights out performances and last week's abysmal showing is a mystery.

Vanderbilt at Auburn

When: 3:15 p.m. Saturday
Records: Vanderbilt (3-0, 0-0 SEC), Auburn (2-1, 0-1)
TV/radio: SEC/FM-94.9, FM 100.3
The series: Vanderbilt leads 23-22-1.

Auburn receiver Keshaun Singleton, who has one touchdown among his 17 catches this season, and the Tigers take on Vanderbilt on Saturday. [STEW MILNE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Four-down territory

1. Going backward: The results are hard to ignore. Running back Jeremiah Cobb had just 12 carries for 53 yards to quarterback Byrum Brown's 21 carries for 27 yards against Baylor. When Cobb and Omar Mabson II took the bulk of the load in Week 2, Auburn ran for 343 yards. Auburn defaulted back to Brown taking control against Florida, which resulted in just nine carries for Cobb and 102 total rushing yards. Some of the issues are Brown not going through his progressions quick enough and opting to run. "There is more work to be done there and he's grinding and trying to get better," Auburn offensive coordinator Joel Gordon said.

2. Take control: Vanderbilt's defense has been steady through three games, holding opponents to 22 points and just over 100 yards rushing per game. That's a point of emphasis because of Auburn's inconsistency in the running game and with maintaining momentum. "Defensively, they present a ton of challenges," head coach Alex Golesh said. "They try to dictate the flow of the game, and they've done that here through these first three weeks. It'll be a big challenge for us to, one, be ready for as much pressure as they bring and the multiplicity of what they do defensively. And then we've got to go find ways to go get first downs early in the game."

3. Quick fix: A major concern Auburn needs to address is eliminating sacks. The Tigers gave up seven to Florida, which brings the early season total to 13. A big reason for allowing seven to the Gators was Auburn being forced to abandon the run and close the gap of a 41-24 deficit. Still, the responsibility lies with the offensive line, and Auburn is searching for the right group. "We're continuing to plug there, and you want to be settled and you want to feel like you've got it, but we're continue to work to get the best five in there," Golesh said. "We've got to be able to run it better. We've got to be able to protect better. We got to play more in sync."

4. Un-Tiger like: Despite the poor record the past few years, the one constant for the Tigers was solid defense. In the first two games this season, Auburn allowed an average of 12 points per game. Last season, 11 of 12 opponents averaged 18 points. So, what happened against Florida, which scored 44. "I can give you some coach talk about fighting and all that. The expectation, I understand it, is to win that game here, and we didn't," Golesh said. "Of note, Vanderbilt was the one opponent last season that scored the most against Auburn with 45 points.

Key matchup

Auburn WR Keshaun Singleton vs. Vanderbilt WR Junior Sherrill

Singleton has stepped up to be the big leader in a talented receiving corps. He leads the Tigers with 230 yards on 17 receptions with one touchdown. Sherrill is a top returning starter for Vandy who leads the team with 272 yards and two touchdowns.

Player of the week

LB Elijah Melendez

With 10 tackles last week, Melendez has become a big-time leader for Auburn. He leads the team in tackles (29), tackles for loss (6) and sacks (2). He's also got three pass breakups.

By the numbers

7: Vanderbilt has allowed just one touchdown in the third quarter. Auburn has three touchdowns in the third.

87: Auburn is 87-8-4 in homecoming games, including 34 straight dating to 1992.

6: Auburn has not won a conference home game since 2024. The Tigers are winless in their last six SEC home games.

101: Byrum Brown leads all active FBS players in total touchdowns responsible for with 101 in his career (66 passing, 33 rushing, two receiving).

Prediction

Auburn 38, Vanderbilt 21

Auburn stopped a Baylor two-point conversion by an inch a couple weeks ago, while Vanderbilt got a miracle fumble recovery in the end zone as time expired to beat N.C. State. What kind of crazy finish will we see at Jordan-Hare Stadium this week? Auburn has to be bitter about losing to Florida and should come out fired up to take on Vandy. If not, it could be trouble for Alex Golesh and his plans to turn things around.

— Edwin Stanton

Western Illinois at UNA

When: 3 p.m. Saturday
Records: UNA (2-2), Western Illinois (2-2)
TV: ESPN+
The series: UNA leads 1-0.

Western Illinois quarterback Kennedy McGill accounted for 345 total yards and five touchdowns in last week's win over Morehead State, earning him co-OVC player of the week. [WESTERN ILLINOIS ATHLETICS]

Four-down territory

1. Turn the page: The opener at Bank Independent Stadium was a monumental game for North Alabama, and the win should have been celebrated last Saturday night. But as defensive lineman Jyheam Ingram and offensive guard Collin Wright said in the postgame press conference, the focus has to shift to Western Illinois. The $65 million stadium is still fresh, but business still has to be conducted in it on Saturday for the Lions to achieve a winning record this late in the season for the first time since 2018. Last week's win will certainly be one for the history books, but it's not time to look back on it fondly just yet.

2. Ground and pound: The Leathernecks come in with a top 25 rushing attack, averaging 191 yards per game. Quarterback Kennedy McGill is their leading rusher, averaging 71.2 yards, along with three running backs averaging 114.7 yards by committee. The 5.3 yards per carry and nine total rushing touchdowns through four games mark a potent dimension to Western Illinois' offense. The Leathernecks also allow 129 yards per game, while UNA rushes for 137.3 on 3.8 yards per attempt. UNA's defense allows just 95.5 rushing yards per game, which is top 10 in the nation. The proverbial good-on-good will be on display when the UNA defense goes up against the Western Illinois offense, but the Lions will need to find a way to run the ball as well.

3. To blitz or not to blitz? The matchup with the Leathernecks and McGill provides an interesting dilemma for UNA defensive coordinator Clint Bowen. McGill has shown his mobility and shiftiness through four games, averaging 4.8 yards per rush and only being sacked twice, which is tied for sixth nationally. While he's still throwing for 180 yards per game and completing 72% of his throws and is top 20 nationally in efficiency at 157.91, you can't allow him to sit in the pocket and make easy throws. But blitzing can get you out of run fits and gap schemes, allowing for a scrambler to really hurt you. Bowen will have to be unpredictable in his calling to throw McGill and Western Illinois uncomfortable.

4. Move the chains: The majority of the offensive numbers for UNA are just fine. QB Destin Wade is averaging 225 yards passing per game with five touchdowns and just one interception, and the offense as a whole is averaging 362.8 yards. Some tempo was instituted last week to get Wade, and the unit, into a rhythm, and it seemed to work when used. But the Lions have been getting behind the sticks at times, leading to an inability to sustain drives, and are somewhat reliant on big plays. Against a Western Illinois team that ranks third in the country in passing yards allowed at just 117 per game, explosive plays may not be as accessible. UNA will have to stay on track in down-and-distance and put together long drives by taking what the Leathernecks give them.

Key matchup

UNA WRs vs. Western Illinois DBs

Although it's produced just two interceptions, the Leathernecks secondary is one of the country's stoutest, allowing just a 50% completion rate through four games and just 40% in its two FCS games. UNA receivers will need to create space and win some one-on-ones.

Players of the week

LBs Fred Vili and Tango McCauley Jr.

UNA's two preseason all-United Athletic Conference defenders will have their hands full with McGill this week, as QB run will be an emphasis for Bowen. They'll likely be asked to spy or commit to run fits at times, and they'll need to tackle efficiently.

By the numbers

244.8: Total offensive yards per game allowed by Western Illinois, which ranks fifth nationally.

472: Receiving yards this season for UNA receiver Xavier Johnson, which is the most in the country.

41%: The Leathernecks' defensive third-down percentage. Ranking 69th in the nation, UNA will be able to convert some, especially if manageable.

Prediction

Western Illinois 31, UNA 27

The Leathernecks' FCS results are a mixed bag, with a 41-10 loss to Illinois State and a 59-2 win over Morehead State, so what exactly to expect is unclear. Containing McGill could prove difficult, and whether UNA will be able to keep up offensively will determine the result.

Texas at Tennessee

When: 11 a.m. Saturday
Records: No. 1 Texas (3-0, 0-0 SEC), No. 14 Tennessee (3-0, 0-0)
TV/radio: ABC/FM-97.9, AM-1340
The series: Texas leads 2-1.

Four-down territory

1. Family first: Texas quarterback Arch Manning comes to Knoxville and Neyland Stadium for the first time in his career. It's where his NFL Hall of Fame uncle Peyton Manning became a star, and a place where he hopes to leave victorious. His uncle hopes so, too. "I love my university and my alma mater," Peyton said. "I root for them unconditionally, but nothing's more important to me than my family. When you have a nephew playing, I pull very hard for him every Saturday. It's a no-brainer."

2. Stay calm: The media circus comes to town with this weekend's matchup. ESPN College GameDay is in town, and with it comes the spotlight and attention. It's actually the second GameDay experience of the season for Texas in just three weeks. "At the end of the day, it's the beginning of conference play," Tennessee coach Josh Heupel said. "You've got to understand the quality of the opponent that you're getting ready to play. Saturday will be electric in the stadium. But it comes down to winning each day, your preparation and practicing the right way to give yourself a chance."

3. Texan tough: The Texas offense isn't the only dangerous group the Vols have to worry about. The Longhorn defense is quietly having a strong start, allowing just 12 points, just over 100 rushing yards and 287 total yards per game. The Longhorns also have five takeaways. "Their personnel gives them a lot of freedom to do a lot of different things from pressure to coverage to rotations," Heupel said. "So you get into conference play, you know you're going to see something that's not on film, too. You've got to be able to adjust."

4. Turn it up to 11: The atmosphere in Knoxville will obviously be chaotic and frenzied with No. 1 Texas on the schedule. Just like when Ohio State visited the Longhorns two weeks ago, and just like when LSU and Lane Kiffin brought the drama to Ole Miss, the home crowds were noisy and eager to make life difficult for the visitors. They did. Both visiting teams lost. Texas coach Steve Sarkisian is aware of the effectiveness of a motivated crowd. "We're going into what I consider the loudest stadium in the country," he said.

Tennessee linebacker Jeremiah Telander and the Vols hope to have Texas pleading for mercy Saturday. [JOHN AMIS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Key matchup

Tennessee QB Faizon Brandon vs. Texas QB Arch Manning

The Vols' true freshman QB has looked poised through his first three games with 552 yards passing (six TDs), 137 yards rushing (three TDs) and no interceptions. Manning is living up to his namesake, and the Heisman Trophy hype this season with 664 passing yards with seven touchdowns.

Player of the week

Tennessee DB Jeremiah Telander

The ball will be flying all over the field and defense will be a key to victory. Telander has one interception with two pass breakups, but keep an eye on Texas' Graceson Littleton. He also has a pick with two breakups, was well as a fumble recovery.

By the numbers

2: Tennessee is 2-17 vs. teams ranked No. 1 in the AP poll and Coaches poll.

3: Opponents have managed only three offensive touchdowns against the Vols, who allow just 14 points per game.

13: Tennessee is third in FBS and second in the SEC with 13 sacks. LSU leads the SEC and is tied with Virginia Tech for best in the country with 14.

58: Tennessee and Texas face off for the first time in 58 years. All three previous matchups were in the Cotton Bowl.

Prediction

Texas 28, Tennessee 17

It's the first big test for Tennessee, and what a test it is. It's not a must-win game for the Vols, but they can make a huge statement with a win. For that to happen, Faizon Brandon has to step up and be near perfect, a tall task for a true freshman in the biggest game of his young career. The defense won't shut down Texas completely but must limit the damage and keep the Vols in the game.

Sumrall questions Gators as favorites

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Florida's Jon Sumrall, like most coaches, welcomes as much external motivation as possible.

He's not getting any help from oddsmakers this week.

The 21st-ranked Gators (3-0, 1-0 Southeastern Conference) are 3½-point favorites against No. 4 Ole Miss (3-0, 1-0) ahead of Saturday's game at Florida Field. The line opened at 1½ and has since moved more toward the home team.

"Who's got us favored against these guys?" Sumrall asked Monday.

Everyone in Vegas.

"There's a lot of good drugs out there, huh?" Sumrall quipped.

The Rebels, behind dynamic quarterback Trinidad Chambliss and speedy receiver Deuce Alexander, have quality wins against then-No. 16 Louisville in their opener in Nashville and against then-No. 7 LSU at home last Saturday.

Florida, meanwhile, handled overmatched Florida Atlantic and lower-division Campbell before winning a shootout at Auburn. The 44-39 victory on the Plains landed Florida in the AP Top 25 for just the second time in three years.

"I did talk to our team about rankings in Week 4 mean nothing," Sumrall said. "Nobody posts anything up in the building about this year's team and where you're ranked in Week 4. Nobody cares.

"And the pats on the back you're getting? If you go out and lay an egg, they're going to be the same hands hitting you in the back — and they're going to have a knife."

Florida is 3-0 for the first time since 2019, and the team's 162 points rank fourth in program history through three games. The only years better: 1913, 1994 and 2007.

"It'll definitely be a good test because it's easy to block out negative noise, 'I don't want to hear that,'" defensive end Jayden Woods said. "But once you hear the praise and the positive noise, it's easy to want to listen to it and let that come in. But it's just as important to block that out."

The Gators haven't beaten a top-five team since then-No. 3 Ole Miss visited the Swamp in 2015. Florida rolled in that one, overwhelming Chad Kelly and the Rebels 38-10 early in coach Jim McElwain's tenure.

The Rebels were favored by 6½ in that one.

It's more surprising that they are underdogs this week, especially after Florida gave up way too many explosive plays against the Tigers and were flagged 16 times for 138 yards.

The line has more to do with the game being in Gainesville, where the Gators have played well recently despite finishing with four losing seasons in the last five years. They have victories against five ranked teams at home over the last four years: knocking off Utah and South Carolina in 2022, Tennessee in 2023, Ole Miss in 2024 and Texas last season.

"We may get added points in Vegas for home-field advantage, like more than normal," Sumrall said. "It's a special place. ... I fully expect our fanbase to be ready to go and create as much havoc as they possibly can and make it a tough place to play when we play big games like this one."

Sumrall made it clear to his players that "if we play like we did last week or the previous week — really any of the weeks we played so far this year — we will not win Saturday. No chance."

Oddsmakers see it differently, at least for now.

"Nobody ever wins a game on paper," Florida receiver Vernell Brown III said.

Chambliss: Beating Kiffin meant more

By Chris Burrows
The Associated Press

OXFORD, Miss. — After leading Ole Miss to a victory over LSU and his coach from last season, Trinidad Chambliss felt more emotion than he would normally experience during a regular-season game — and the polished quarterback punctuated it with a rare on-camera profanity.

"It meant more than other games," said Chambliss, who finished 33-of-48 passing for 363 yards with two touchdowns and an interception in Ole Miss' 32-24 win over LSU and former coach Lane Kiffin last weekend. "I'm finally glad we got that one out of the way because emotions were really high for this game."

Chambliss concluded his postgame interview with ESPN by yelling the common Ole Miss refrain, "Hotty Toddy," but with an expletive mixed in.

In his postgame news conference, Chambliss apologized for "letting my emotions get away from me. I said something I'm really sorry for. I apologize to everybody."

The Rebels built a 24-7 halftime lead behind Chambliss, but the Tigers responded with 17 straight points to tie it. Chambliss then led a 13-play, 75-yard drive, ending it with a 14-yard touchdown run when he dashed to the end zone on a sweep from the shotgun formation.

Chambliss connected on 6 of 8 passes on the decisive march, which included a fourth-down conversion. Ole Miss tacked on a 2-point conversion after Chambliss' TD for an eight-point lead.

Wide receiver Traylon Ray was confident that Chambliss would lead his team to the end zone when LSU seemed to have all the momentum.

"He's magic. Trinidad is magic," said Ray, who had seven receptions for 115 yards. "Everybody can see it."

The Tigers had a chance to tie it with a touchdown and a 2-pointer, but Jaylon Braxton intercepted a deflected pass in the end zone to end LSU's chances, giving Ole Miss a win over the coach who left Oxford on an LSU-chartered private jet last November as the Rebels prepared for the College Football Playoff.

Chambliss, meanwhile, entered the season as one of the most prominent names in college football after he took the NCAA to court to secure a final season of eligibility.

Chambliss dominated the first half Saturday night, throwing for 248 yards, including touchdowns to Deuce Alexander and Ray. The Rebels scored on four consecutive possessions before halftime. But in the second half, they endured three straight empty drives that included an interception.

Kiffin wasn't surprised by Chambliss' hot start.

"We had softer looks early defensively. He had guys that made plays for him too," Kiffin said. "We walked into a storm. Trinidad was on fire early."

The Tigers' defense was tougher after the break.

"I didn't play my best ball in the second half. Nothing is perfect. I wasn't comfortable in the pocket," Chambliss said. "There are ups and downs in a game but the key to that last drive was not playing timid and playing free."

Chambliss said he flashed a look across to the LSU sideline in Kiffin's direction after he gave Ole Miss the fourth-quarter lead.

"I did look, but I didn't see him and I didn't get a chance to speak with him after the game," Chambliss said. "This one meant a whole lot. We feel like the whole nation disrespects us in comparison to LSU. But at Ole Miss there's a whole lot here that people don't see."

Jackson surprise option for Ohio State

By Marcus Hartman

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ja'Kobi Jackson arrived at Ohio State without much fanfare over the winter.

Head coach Ryan Day brought in a larger-than-usual (for Ohio State) transfer class with players at just about every position, and Jackson was projected more likely to be third string behind sophomore Isaiah West than to push returning 1,000-yard rusher Bo Jackson for No. 1 carries.

Nonetheless, Ja'Kobi Jackson is second on the team in carries (21) and rushing yards (150) after three games, and the Florida transfer leads seventh-ranked Ohio State in yards per carry (7.1) and touchdown runs (four) — just like he expected.

"Yes, sir, it's definitely what I envisioned, and hopefully the role can continue to grow," he said Tuesday.

That comes with its pros and cons, though, and Tuesday afternoon brought one of the latter as the senior fielded questions from the media about why Ohio State is 79th in the nation in rushing yards per game (158.7) and struggling to produce big plays on the ground.

"All our film sessions are tough, but, yeah, this one had a little more kick to it," Ja'Kobi Jackson said. "I would just say that's what you expect when you come to the Ohio State University.

"Our coaches are harping on us about (about) doing the little things right and being able to read the blocks and press the holes, so that's just what we got to continue to do."

The road to Columbus was long for Jackson, who spent three seasons at Coahoma Community College in Clarksdale, Mississippi, after graduating from Pensacola (Florida) Catholic High School in 2020.

He spent three seasons at Florida but was never the feature back, amassing 122 carries for 607 yards for the Gators before sustaining a season-ending injury last fall that allowed him to get a medical redshirt for one more year of eligibility.

At Ohio State, he has shown a nose for the end zone, picking his way through traffic for a touchdown in the first quarter at Texas in a Week 2 loss and bulling in from a yard out last week against the Golden Flashes.

The latter came on a second attempt after he tripped over a teammate's foot.

"Yeah, it's just life," Jackson said. "You got to just get right back up, and I was glad that coach was able to let me run it in the next play."

Though it had a happy ending, the sequence also served to represent the Ohio State running game overall so far this season: The job got done, but not as efficiently as possible.

Overall, Day said he wants to see all the backs "run angry" this week when Illinois comes to town for the Big Ten opener for both teams.

"I thought we had some really good big holes in the (Kent State) game, and those should have been explosive plays and they weren't, but those guys know that," Day said. "They're challenged. They own it, so we've got to have a good week of practice, and we've got to make sure we're practicing some of those situations. Not that we haven't done it. It was a huge emphasis in the offseason, so it needs to show up here against Illinois."

That sounded like something the 219-pound Jackson was not afraid to embrace.

"Running angry really just looks like not being tackled one-on-one in the open field and making the first guy miss — not being tackled by the first guy," Jackson said. "That's what I would say running angry would be."

Red Raiders make on-field Big 12 noise

By John Marshall
The Associated Press

No. 11 Texas Tech is 3-0 for the second straight season, something the Red Raiders haven't done since a three-season run 13 years ago.

This season has a different vibe than last year's run to the College Football Playoff.

"We don't look the same, but we're 3-0," Texas Tech coach Joey McGuire said.

Last season, the Red Raiders dominated behind one of the nation's best defenses, winning their first six games by at least 24 points, then six more by at least 22 points following a loss at Arizona State. Texas Tech ended up winning the Big 12 championship and went to the CFP for the first time.

This year's start has been a bit more of a grind, in part because the Red Raiders had a school-record nine players drafted in the NFL, including six on defense. They also went through an offseason drama with transfer quarterback Brendan Sorsby, who eventually gave up his eligibility fight.

Texas Tech had trouble finishing drives in an opening win against Abilene Christian of the Football Championship Subdivision and was losing on the road against Oregon State before rallying for a 35-24 win.

The Red Raiders stretched their home winning streak to 10 games with a Big 12-opening 28-26 win over No. 25 Houston, but gave up a touchdown in the final minute and had to stop the Cougars on a potential tying two-point conversion.

"Just because you had an awesome season last year, that's supposed to be the same, but we're still working and getting better every day," Texas Tech defensive tackle A.J. Holmes said. "So just because it's starting off a little rocky, don't mean it's going to end that way."

Texas Tech's start has it tied atop the Big 12 standings with five other teams at 3-0 and every school in the league except Kansas (1-2) has a winning record.

That would seemingly set up a season of parity, but not every winning team (so far) is created equal.

No. 9 BYU (3-0, 1-0 Big 12) has been solid to start the season behind a stingy defense and the running of LJ Martin.

Martin's return with quarterback Bear Bachmeier gave the Cougars one of the best 1-2 punches in the Big 12 and they've lived up to the billing. Martin is averaging 109.3 yards per game and has scored three touchdowns. Bachmeier has throw for 642 yards and six TDs with one interception.

BYU is 3-0 for the fourth straight season.

No. 15 Utah (3-0) swept its nonconference schedule for the fourth straight season by outscoring opponents 142-24, but hasn't exactly faced the stiffest competition. The Utes blew out Idaho in Morgan Scalley's first game as coach, beat Arkansas by 33 and crushed Utah State last week.

Utah gets its first big test of the season on Saturday against Iowa State, which has a pair of lopsided wins sandwiched around a three-point loss to rival No. 17 Iowa.

Kansas State (3-0) opened the season with two convincing wins, but had a hard time shaking Tulane in a 31-20 victory last week. The Wildcats will face another undefeated team on Saturday in Cincinnati, which had its own share of problems last week, rallying from a 21-point halftime deficit to beat Miami (Ohio) 35-31.

Houston (2-1, 0-1) had some defensive issues — 376 yards passing — in an opening win against Oregon State, but rallied late against Texas Tech before falling just short on the failed 2-point conversion.

Under Belichick, UNC squirms in turmoil

By Eddie Pells

Until the storm came, there was a sense that maybe all the frustration, investigations, turmoil and awkward headlines were starting to be worth it.

Bill Belichick and North Carolina were beating one of their conference's marquee opponents. A 3-0 record looked possible. Maybe, just maybe, the spotlight's glare was about to shift toward the conference's other celebrity coach, Dabo Swinney of Clemson, whose future is a growing topic of speculation.

But the storm passed last Saturday and Clemson outscored the Tar Heels by 10 points over the final eight minutes to win 28-20. North Carolina fell to 2-1, Belichick to 6-9 in a season-plus in charge.

This question, once again, felt as relevant as ever: Is Belichick and the considerable baggage he brought with him a price worth paying to make football matter on Tobacco Road?

"I'm just focused on the Clemson game. It just ended 10 minutes ago," the coach said in response to postgame question about an investigation that has led to the resignations of his son, defensive coordinator Steve Belichick, and his general manager, Michael Lombardi.

Only three days earlier, the 74-year-old coach addressed a Wall Street Journal reporter's question about another issue at North Carolina that gets tons of traction: Whether Belichick's 25-year-old girlfriend, Jordon Hudson, who has helped Belichick manage his off-field schedule, has any say on what goes on in the program.

"The way the story was picked up was a long way from that," he said of reports that Hudson was pulling strings. "Like, 'She's trying to be the general manager of the team,' and it's so ridiculous."

Also making news was Hudson's request to university officials this year for records related to journalist Pablo Torre's podcast episode claiming she had been banned from the football facilities. UNC said Hudson was welcome at the facilities. Torre has stood by his reporting.

All that has made for good tabloid fodder. More troubling are the circumstances that led to the departures of Lombardi and Belichick's son over the past three weeks.

Both resignations came in the wake of a wide-ranging investigation into the football program that, according to a school statement, "determined that certain actions demonstrated a disregard for Carolina's values and standards of conduct."

The investigators have been notably vague about specifics. Among the information they have confirmed is that they looked into allegations tied to drugs, relationships and NCAA issues, though they did not divulge who those allegations were tied to. They also SAY the actions that led to their findings were "isolated in scope and not a systemic failure."

While the suspensions and the investigation may fall short of an indictment of Belichick and the program he runs, the headlines still reflect something different from what Lombardi promised when he arrived at Chapel Hill and reunited with Belichick.

"We consider ourselves the 33rd (NFL) team because everybody who's involved with our program has had some form or aspect in pro football," Lombardi said then, in a statement that drew love, hate and that is destined to stick to Belichick's résumé at UNC no matter how things end up.

Belichick's relatively late arrival in the 2025 recruiting process did nothing to fill in the talent gap between the Tar Heels and the rest of the ACC in the first year of his tenure. It included more double-digit losses (five) than wins (four).

Carolina's 2026 recruiting class was considered solid, not overwhelming. A handful of estimates project the Tar Heels spent between $20 million and $25 million on their roster, putting them in the middle of the pack in the ACC, but still only about half of what the league's best team spends at Miami.

"We've just got to keep working and keep getting better, which we are," Belichick said.

North Carolina, which has one more national title in basketball (six) than it has ACC titles in football, has been on a roller coaster since the school's board of trustees engineered the firing of Mack Brown and a search that brought the NFL lifer to campus on a five-year, $50 million contract.

Not long after Belichick's arrival, and with much less fanfare, the UNC university system temporarily suspended trustees' authority over athletics. According to a memo from the system president, it was determined the trustees

"appear to act independently of their campus's administration in matters squarely within the responsibility of the chancellor."

That presumably included personnel decisions regarding the football program. The person most responsible for luring Belichick to North Carolina was the then-chair of the board of trustees, John Preyer, who in January resigned his position about six months before his term was set to expire.

A documentary by Raleigh's WRAL-TV called "Coaching Carolina: The Belichick Way," explored Preyer's key role in the coach's hiring, along with the struggles that kept North Carolina football in the headlines throughout his opening year.

"I find it hard to believe that a great teacher of football is not going to succeed at the college level," Preyer said in the documentary. "And if I'm wrong, what the hell? If I'm wrong, screw you all. All right? I mean, I tried. Why can't we be great in football?"

For now. the Tar Heels get a week to regroup before facing a Notre Dame team on Oct. 3 that will be heavily favored.

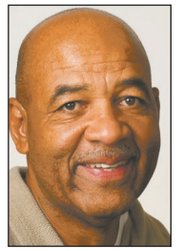

"Obviously everybody's responsible, including me, for doing things properly," Belichick said after Lombardi's resignation. "And we intend to do that."
