

Myth of Brother Jonathan Spreading Small Pox Exposed

A not-so-new myth is being promulgated on the Brother Jonathan's reputation. The sidewheel steamer is being accused of being the vessel that transmitted the lethal smallpox virus, in mid-March, 1862, killing thousands of Indigenous people along the Pacific Northwest. This is myth that cannot be accepted, supported or proven.

The question begs for answers: Who's spewing this nonsense and, more importantly, Why?

The Brother Jonathan met its demise July 30, 1865 when it struck the uncharted Dragon Rock 160 years ago. During a terrifying gale off the coast of Del Norte County, 244 souls went down with the ship...19 survived the ordeal.

The tragedy spurred the challenging construction of the St. George Reef Lighthouse atop Dragon Rock, tediously built over a near decade, 1883-92, along with maritime laws and outrage.

Dr. John Lutz, University of Victoria and Dr. Robert Boyd, Portland State University unilaterally made changes in the usually-reliable Wikipedia and are the duo who've besmirched the Brother Jonathan's reputation and so-called role in spreading the dreaded smallpox virus.

Absolutely UNTRUE!

Renowned marine author Dennis Powers is poised to set the record straight.

Here are a few of the straight arrow facts clarifying the truth:

- The Brother Jonathan is NOT responsible for transmitting the Smallpox virus/epidemic which killed some 30,000 indigenous people in British Columbia.

The Brother Jonathan was a side-wheel steamer, incorrectly identified in Wikipedia.

- The name Brother Jonathan was not, as reported, a character personifying the region of New England, but the predecessor of Uncle Sam.

- Another myth spread when at first crossing the Nicaraguan isthmus, the passengers did not just "make it to California via another ship," passengers took one of three Cornelius Vanderbilt-owned steamers to San Francisco situated on the Pacific side of Nicaragua." Please remember the Panama Canal had not been built until 1905-14.

Yet another misguided non-truth, stated the Brother Jonathan "played a small but symbolic role in the history of Oregon" is not accurate. The news to the Pacific Please see EXPOSED Page 4

Cal Trans Hosts Coffee Forum on Last Chance Grade

BY ROGER GITLIN
Country Media, Inc

One would think most if not all major questions about the Last Chance Grade Tunnel Project would have been addressed to the public. Not so quickly. Cal Trans Corridor Manager Jamie Matteoli, Project Director Lianna Winkler-Prinz and Public Information Officer Myles Cochran for Humboldt and Del Norte Counties hosted a Coffee Forum at SeaFront Bakery, last Friday morning from 10AM-12 Noon.

The Last Chance Grade (LCG) proposes to construct an approximately 1.1 mile Tunnel bypass to the east of the existing of the long-troubled existing road alignment highway for decades. The current highway is unstable and has long be plagued by landslides and seismic activity. U.S. 101 Highway is the only major north-south route on the North Coast. $125 million has been spent on a band aid approach to fixing LCG. Several options to build a permanent detour around LCG. The public selected Alternative F, an approximately 6,000 ft.tunnel as the preferred option, selected in June 24. The Tunnel option is targeted for 2039 completion at a cost exceeding $2Billion.

To date, there's no clear pathway to fund Last Chance Grade.

Efforts to keep the existing alignment at Last Chance continue.

After a steady flow of folks coming in and out of SeaFront Bakery last week, The TriPLICATE stuck around and asked a powerful question: "Do any of you remember the tragedy at Caldecott Tunnel in the East Bay? The trio of DOT staff and few others expressed blank crickets looks on their faces.

The TriPLICATE recoiled the East Bay tragedy near Midnight, April 7, 1982 in which a vehicle driving under the influence lost control then struck the tunnel wall and then was struck by a

Hooper DUI Hit and Run Remains in Felony Status

Assistant Del Norte County CAO Randy Hooper

BY ROGER GITLIN
Country Media, Inc.

After an emotional Preliminary Hearing, the DUI Hit and Run charges against Del Norte Assistant Chief Administrative Officer Randy Hooper will proceed as a felony case.

Hooper was represented by defense counsel George Mavris. Keith Morris in a special assignment, represented the Attorney-General after the Del Norte District Attorney Katie Micks recused herself due to a conflict of interest.

Superior Court Judge Karen Olson Dept. oversees the case.

Three witnesses delivered testimony during the Preliminary Hearing; the District Attorney Investigator, the CHP and the victim of the Hit and run, Megan Postma. The details of the April 19th late evening event at the Elk Valley Casino where Hooper was questioned about paying his liquor tab. Hooper did in fact pay his bill but casino staff sensed he may have had too much to drink. Staff began to escort Hooper from the Casino, and offered him a taxi to drive him home to Gasquet.

Hooper blew a .189 blood / alcohol reading. It was also learned Hooper was reported drinking at Port'O Pints at the Harbor, earlier in the afternoon.

Hooper declined the taxi and headed to his vehicle, a white Toyota truck, casino staff in pursuit.

According to the CHP Report, and with Sheriff's deputies en route, Hooper sped down the road exceeding the 21mph speed limit toward the round-about, and west on Sand Mine Road to 101 north. The collision occurred when Hooper's truck struck the stationary Postma vehicle. Postma counted to 15 one thousand when Hooper began to move. She followed. The CHP considered the accident a hit and run. Unknown to all parties, apparently the Hooper vehicle was disabled with a broken front axle. Questions arose regarding new injuries sustained by Ms. Postma in the April 19th incident.

Buoyed by positive character letters from Sheriff Garrett Scott, former Sheriff Dean Wilson (now Supervisor Wilson) and in an effort to mitigate the charges, attorney Mavris attempted to have all felony charges reduced to misdemeanors by a process call paragraph 17b. Judge Olson pondered the Hooper request and decided to decline the request to reduce the charges.

The case resumes September 9 at 8:30 in Dept. 1.

WE GOOFED!

Several Topics Reported in the Paper Did NOT Take Place

BY ROGER GITLIN
Country Media, Inc.

In The July 30th edition of the TriPLICATE, we goofed. No excuses, our wires crisscrossed and The TriPLICATE published a front page piece about the July 7th meeting of the City Council of Crescent City with the headline, "Crescent City Council Renews Two Local Marijuana Dispensary Operations". The following actions mentioned in the article never took place:

- Discussion before Councilors at City Chambers July 7 on proposed amendments for the Local Coastal Plan . Did not take place.
- Discussion on awarding the annual street paving and ADA improvements did not occur.
- A report addressing renewal of two annual cannabis operations did not take place.

- Beachfront Phase 2 is near completion and public review sessions are planned; this discussion did not occur.

- Grant writing efforts for harbor and affordable housing did not occur.

- Discussion on the City Summer recreation program did not happen.

- The public comments quoted in the article did not happen.

The TriPLICATE regrets this miscommunication, a rare event indeed. When these matters do appear before the City Council, each will be discussed accurately and in a timely matter.

Thank you for excusing our goof.

GUEST COMMENTARY - Opinion by Samuel Strait

Commissioner Nehmer’s Lawyer Seeks to Eliminate the Triplicate’s First Amendment Rights with Fraudulent Lawfare

Too often in this day of regular and often practiced legal malfeasance, stories of significance to the public never see the light of day. Money quite often becomes the arbiter of what passes for news when the threat of “legal action” or in fact, the filing of a legal suit which has no hope of success but serves the purpose of silencing the first amendment right of a newspaper to print objective news articles of fact.

Such is the case locally when a Davis-based lawyer hired privately by Commissioner Annie Nehmer declared “war” on the Triplicate claiming an article, “Harbor Commissioner Sues Herself”, July 9th, in said newspaper was biased. Further developments over the past month and a half have the Triplicate’s management silencing its editor, indicating “no further contact with Commissioner Nehmer or her family and no written word for print or digital publication regarding her without (my) prior written approval”.

The lawfare forces at work. While I fully understand Country Media’s reluctance to expend its limited resources defending itself against fraudulent lawfare, it should be noted any person with the slightest of ill intent towards what is printed in the pages of The Triplicate can engage in this kind of behavior. At that point, whatever is printed going forward negates the ability of the Triplicate to become the “fourth estate” and further shields malfeasance from the public. The Triplicate in essence becomes useless as a factor when it comes to producing the “news”.

Unfortunately, in this case it is the public which loses. Many of the public’s decisions in life are made with the aid of information provided in our local print newspaper. When information in the press is suppressed, the public loses confidence in the press and must seek to fill the gap with less reliable information. The public’s decision making quite often is impaired as a result and leads to poor decisions.

Currently, the Crescent City Harbor Commission has literally wasted nine months and more importantly the summer months towards righting the Harbor’s precarious financial condition wrangling over its hiring of a harbormaster. This has produced a situation where hesitancy has become the order of the day when decisions must be made as expediently as possible.

Commissioner Nehmer, and now Commissioner Dan Schmidt have become a leading component of the Commission’s failure to act. There is no unity or direction on the Commission. The commission as a group has become mired in the minutia of every single action or decision. Progress is painfully slow when speed and action are necessary to resurrect the harbor’s ailing situation after wasting months. 3-2 votes have become the norm. Hours spent at public meetings quibbling over minor points in agreements further slowing decisive action. Legal counsel advice overshadows nearly every decision costing the harbor even more.

It has become apparent Commissioner Nehmer and Schmidt have an underlying motive to prove the remaining commissioners were wrong by hiring the current harbormaster. Delay, stall, 3-2 votes and object to anything the harbormaster offers are the mechanisms used by Nehmer and Schmidt thus far. In the meantime, time passes, time the harbor district does not have.

This is all pertinent information for the public, the Triplicate under its current policy is not allowed to publish. The public, someone the press is meant to inform, has been made unaware of what has transpired. Commissioners Nehmer and Schmidt need to be exposed and at the very least be censured. This is an unconscionable activity by a sitting member of the Commission and should be called for what it is, willful sabotage. A fraudulent lawsuit to silence the Triplicate about this kind of behavior is reprehensible and should not be tolerated by anyone in public office.

In the meantime, Nehmer and Schmidt continue to serve on the commission where time is of the essence. Thoughtful and unifying action critical at this juncture. Economic development now, and not when it is too late. All commissioners on the same page. Something repeated often by the public at commission meetings. Nehmer and Schmidt are not listening!

Nehmer should immediately sever her relationship with the Davis-based lawyer and resign. Schmidt should do likewise. The commission needs all its members on the same page, not settling petty feuds at the harbor’s expense.

A Healthy Start to the School Year: 3 Wellness Appointments to Help Kids Get Ready to Learn

As kids are back at school and eager to get to know their new teachers, many families may still be trying to squeeze in some of the last details to be sure their kids are ready to succeed in their new school year. A few important details for parents to also check in on are their children’s mental and physical well-being.

A child’s health can influence their growth, development and academic performance. To help set children and teens up for success this school year, it’s important to stay up to date with wellness appointments, including annual physicals, dental checkups, comprehensive eye exams and mental health assessments.

Here are a few things parents can consider to help support their children’s well-being:

It’s ok to talk about mental health

Mental health challenges are on the rise among young people, driven by factors like academic pressures, relationships, social media, and broader social and economic inequalities. Age, race, and gender also shape how these issues manifest and affect young people.

While it’s beneficial for parents to discuss health matters with their children throughout the year, an opportune time arises during the annual back-to-school exam, also known as a well-child visit. This scheduled check-up can serve as a timely platform for addressing various health concerns, including mental health, ensuring that kids are supported holistically as they prepare to return to school.

Data from UnitedHealthcare found that 60% of college students reported encountering behavioral or mental health concerns in the past year. So, even as children grow older and head off to college, be sure to check in on them emotionally, encourage open conversations, and remind your student that help is available.

No matter the age, checking in on your child’s mental health before the school year begins and throughout can help lay the foundation for a more successful and balanced year ahead.

Brush up on dental care for healthy smiles

Cavities are preventable, yet they are the most common chronic disease among children and teens in the U.S. If left untreated, cavities can cause pain that leads to problems learning and speaking, as well as contribute to other long-term health issues. Cavities can also make eating uncomfortable and can affect nutrition and development.

Children, teens and adults should visit a dentist every six months for routine preventive dental care. Dental plans usually cover preventive care, which means you may pay $0 out of pocket for certain covered preventive services if you go to a network provider.

It’s important to know that about 1 in 3 people in the United States have a fear of dental treatment. If you believe your child may experience dental fear or anxiety, speak with their dentist or primary care doctor for support.

Vision screenings can help kids see better

More than 1 in 3 school-age kids in the U.S. are nearsighted. Also known as myopia, nearsightedness can cause issues seeing things in the distance, like the front of the classroom, which may contribute to problems learning. Possible signs of vision issues in kids include frequent eye rubbing or blinking, headaches, or struggling to remember what they have read.

It’s recommended kids get regular eye screenings throughout their school years. Yet, only 38.2% of California children have recently seen an eye doctor. School-based vision screenings or pediatric office visits are valuable. Comprehensive eye exams can detect more complex issues.

Vision plans also usually cover preventive care, including comprehensive eye exams. A vision plan may also provide an allowance to purchase glasses or contacts.

Consider talking with your children’s doctor and scheduling any care visits before school starts. Check with your health plan to see what benefits are available to your family.

Matteoli then profusely thanked The Triplicate

The tunnel will have a heat-generated sprinkler system, a sophisticated smoke detector system, fresh oxygen pumped into the tunnel, state of the art smoke and inhalation systems. several exit doors within the tunnel and a public address system. All systems will operate 24/7/365, Water access and electric signs.”

Matteoli also promised to include OES staff, Sheriff, CCPD, Crescent Fire and Rescue. CHP and Del Norte Ambulance.

These groups and the public will be invited to attend future public input meetings.

Inscore to Travel to World Expo 2025 in Osaka

BY ROGER GITLIN
Country Media, Inc

Former Mayor Blake Inscore will be the guest speaker at a Sister Cities International Summit in Japan, September 16-19. “It’s the last big push for tourism,” retorted Inscore. The list of cities totals 90 communities attending is long and storied. As guest speaker, Inscore will have the opportunity to relate the special relationship Crescent City enjoys with Rikuzentakata following the deadly tsunami of 2011. The Japanese barnacle-covered boat called the Kamome drifted across the vast Pacific Ocean and landed on the Del Norte coastline in 2018, student volunteers cleaned up the Kamome and outreach between Del Norte and the Japanese consulate in San Francisco was established to return the little vessel to its forever home. Efforts to establish a sister-city relationship ensued to present day. World Expo 2025 is a six-month event that began in April and concludes in October. Led by Kamome Foundation president, Del Norte Sheriff Bill Steven and Hallie DeArman. Who were part of the original delegation which visited Rikuzentakata, the duo will be part of 27 member delegation from Del Norte County. Funding for the event is provided by a Federal Sister city grant. Foundation president Steven credited the Kamome and Tsunami event, none of all the good will would have taken place.”

Northwest, including Oregonians.

- This inaccuracy indicates how non-maritime academics have limited understanding of the Brother Jonathan.

Adding a Wikipedia article, “1862 Pacific Northwest smallpox epidemic” might be good for “academic” publication but is not relevant. Ships continued to dock and leave Victoria before and after the vessel’s visit; the Indigenous People had continual contacts before and after the specific March 1862 date- with their own and the colonists, independent of the docks, up and down the coast and on land.

The “one” passenger was immediately quarantined which somehow never was disclosed by the two university erudite which was disclosed much later in a MacLean’s article (but not cited). In fact, the second Wikipedia article- linked to the ship article- different ships are identified. Why paint this on U.S vessels instead of where the epidemic had to have started in British Colombia?

Powers continued, “Virulent lawsuits over whether indigenous peoples have rights to land- a continuing issue with property owners are also based on a thesis that colonists treated their own before the Indigenous in an ensuing epidemic- and that one ship’s docking with one passenger disease caused the Smallpox epidemic, continuing to infect indigenous people camped around Victoria.” (Note: When Capt. George Vancouver in the late 1700’s was exploring this area, he found empty indigenous people who had died from smallpox). To argue that one individual and one ship causal factor is unreasonable and flawed.” Other errors include:

- The “heavily-loaded Brother Jonathan had mining equipment unloaded in Crescent City and well within its carrying limits.
- After the impact with the Dragon Rocks, it was reported “only three boats could be deployed- actually only one surfboat was safely deployed to make it to shore with survivors who told what happened.”

- Errors in lost gold bars and gold coins persist on valuation in what was changed. (Note: these Wikipedia bullet points (and more) are being evaluated by others as you read this article).

Powers stated when questioned, “Equating the Brother Jonathan with the 1862 Smallpox epidemic is factually incorrect, especially given the maritime misstatements in the Steamship article. Given the multi-thousands of indigenous people and colonists then in the region, centering on one passenger quarantined- instead of all other possibilities- does not add up with the continual smallpox infections along Pacific coast.

What is the reason for these inaccuracies and the financial motivation?

The dead of the Brother Jonathan- the Pacific Coast worst maritime disaster deserve better.

The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the County where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. All bids are subject to California Civil Code 2924h and are sold "AS-IS". NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 844-693-4761 or visit this internet website www.awest.us, using the file number assigned to this case 25-003631 Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction if conducted after January 1, 2021, pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 844-693-4761, or visit this internet website www.awest.us, using the file number assigned to this case 25-003631 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid, by remitting the funds and affidavit described in Section 2924m(c) of the Civil Code, so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. Oregon ditches farm stand regulations after public outcry

By CLAIRE CARLSON
Oregon Capital Chronicle

Oregon’s countryside comes alive during farm season. Tulips in the spring, berry-picking in the summer and pumpkin patches in the fall attract visitors to the bucolic farm stands that dot the Willamette Valley and beyond.

But as crowds have gotten denser, with reports of hours-long traffic on single-lane roads at the most popular farms, some legislators are seeking solutions to mitigate the effect of agritourism in agricultural zones.

A recent rulemaking process from the Department of Land and Conservation Development could have limited what can be sold at farm stands, but an outsized public response to the potential rules put the process on an indefinite pause.

Legislators are still deliberating over how to move forward with the rulemaking — or if they should at all, considering the controversy it caused.

One of the groups at the center of the debate was 1000 Friends of Oregon, a nonprofit organization that advocates for land use planning. They participated in the rulemaking advisory committee that was meant to inform legislators on a number of agritourism issues, not just farm stand policies.

The group said the pause was the result of a misunderstanding about what the rulemaking was intended to do.

“It’s not about saying no to things like agritourism,” said Anna Kemper, membership experience manager of 1000 Friends of Oregon. “It’s about managing impact, making sure that one farm’s business model doesn’t negatively impact others.”

From March to July, the rulemaking advisory committee convened monthly to discuss one or two agritourism issues and then make a recommendation to the Land Conservation and Development Commission, which implements state land use rules.

But in recent months, the discussion focused primarily on farm stand regulations after one of the members of the committee — the Oregon Property Owners Association — sponsored a bill that would have expanded what’s sold at farm stands.

The group’s goal was to address “longstanding confusion” over farm stand policies, like a rule that says three-quarters of a farm stand’s products must be sourced from the farm, but is unclear on what exactly counts under that rule.

But one Yamhill County farmer said the group’s goal to expand farm stand allowances would have “blown out the sideboards on farm stands.”

That’s according to Sid Friedman, a hay farmer and board member of the land use planning and policy organization Friends of Yamhill County. He served on a legislative working group that eventually led to the rulemaking process on farm stands.

Friedman was worried about the cumulative impact of using farm stands to sell not just farm products but other activities like weddings, concerts, and farm-to-table dinners in Oregon’s farmland.

“The cumulative impacts of all these commercial uses, which aren’t farming in the exclusive farm-use zone, is driving up the price of farmland here in Yamhill County and around the state,” Friedman said. “Somebody who just wants to farm can’t compete with what people who want to put in a commercial venue can pay for the land.”

These concerns led to the most recent feedback from the rulemaking advisory committee, which toned down the farm stand rules the Oregon Property Owners Association was pushing for. Notably, the feedback recommended an impact assessment on neighboring properties of any farm stand wanting to pursue agritourism activities.

DLCD was expected to release a draft rule to follow this feedback on Sept. 1. But in late July, several farms around Oregon rang alarm bells on social media about the potential rules, spurring more than 2,300 emails and phone calls from the public.

Two of the most vocal farmers against the rulemaking were Jim Abeles and Kat Topaz, owners of Topaz Farm on Sauvie Island. They were worried that the potential rules would harm people trying to start an agritourism business.

“It would be stricter and more expensive and more difficult for anybody who wants to get into agritourism,” Abeles said.

Topaz Farm, founded in 2020, serves as one of the main farm destinations for Portlanders. Beyond selling produce, it has a petting zoo, offers farm-to-table dinners and hosts a live music series in the summer.

The farm’s owners posted their concerns on social media about what the rules might do to farms like theirs, with one video surpassing a million views on Instagram.

They pointed to a decrease in the number of farms nationwide as one reason the rulemaking could further harm small and mid-size farm operations.

“We want more farms, we want more competition because we think that it’s good for agriculture, it’s good for the public, and it’s important while farms are being lost everywhere,” Abeles said.

Shortly after the public backlash about the rules, Gov. Tina Kotek ordered a temporary pause on the rulemaking process.

“I want to reassure farmers who have been anxious and frustrated about how proposed changes to existing rules regarding farm stand operations may affect their businesses that I hear you and am paying attention,” Kotek said in a public statement. “I have directed DLCD to pause the rulemaking process to allow for more conversations with all interested parties and the public on this really important agri-tourism issue.”

1000 Friends of Oregon is fine if the rulemaking process ends completely.

“I think if it just went away, we would be fine as far as farm stands are concerned,” said Jim Johnson, the organization’s working lands policy director. He’s more interested in working on other agritourism issues prioritized by the Land Conservation and Development Commission, like urban growth planning and the rezoning of agricultural land.

“We can get to work on more important issues that relate to protecting Oregon’s valuable farmland,” he said.

Trump officials plan to remove protections on 2 million acres of national forests in Oregon

By MIA MALDONADO
Oregon Capital Chronicle

Trump administration officials intend to remove protections and open to some development more than 58 million acres of national forests across 40 states, including 2 million acres of national forests in Oregon.

Brooke Rollins, head of the U.S. Department of Agriculture formally announced the proposed termination of a 2001 Forest Service rule known as the “Roadless Rule” in a news release Wednesday, setting off a 21-day public comment period that opens Friday and runs through Sept. 19.

The Roadless Rule prohibits road construction, logging and mining on about 30% of Forest Service managed lands, intending to protect wildlife, animal migration corridors, watersheds and old-growth from human development and the environmental degradation that often follows.

Rollins said that rescinding the rule would remove “burdensome, outdated, one-size-fits-all regulations” and boost economic growth. Trump earlier this year signed two executive orders to increase logging in national forests and other federal lands.

U.S. Forest Service Chief Tom Schultz, who previously worked for one of the country’s largest lumber producers in Idaho, said the Roadless Rule has frustrated land managers for years, and served as a barrier to commercial logging, and logging in the name of wildfire prevention, by prohibiting road construction.

“The forests we know today are not the same as the forests of 2001,” he said in a statement. “They are dangerously overstocked and increasingly threatened by drought, mortality, insect-borne disease, and wildfire. It’s time to return land management decisions where they belong — with local Forest Service experts who best understand their forests and communities.”

Research from Oregon State University Professor Chris Dunn, a forest ecologist and wildfire expert, and his colleagues, found most wildfires in Western national forests between 1984 and 2018 started near roads, showing an increased likelihood of wildfires where roads exist, because the number one cause of wildfires is people.

The news Wednesday angered Oregon environmental advocates, who are urging the public to submit comments to the USDA in opposition to the proposed rollback.

“Gutting the Roadless Rule — which has protected our forests for 25 years — would be the single largest rollback of conservation protections in our nation’s history,” said Tracy Stone-Manning, president of the Washington D.C.-based conservation nonprofit Wilderness Society, in a statement. “Americans cherish their public lands and deserve leaders who protect them for future generations, not give them away to corporations that exploit them.”

From the Willamette to the Ochoco National Forest, Oregon groups express urgency

Areas in Oregon protected under the roadless rule include Iron Mountain in the Willamette National Forest, Joseph Canyon in Wallowa County, Tumalo Mountain in central Oregon and Lookout Mountain in the Ochoco National Forest.

“These forests are some of Oregon’s most treasured landscapes, from the flower-studded meadows of Echo Mountain to the headwaters of Tumalo Creek, which provides Bend’s drinking water,” Oregon Wild’s central Oregon field coordinator, Sami Godlove, said in a statement. “Oregonians value these places deeply, and now is the time to raise our voices to ensure they remain protected for future generations.”

Oregon’s U.S. Rep. Andrea Salinas, a Democrat representing the state’s 6th Congressional District, said she is outraged by the Trump administration’s attacks on the rule.

In June, Salinas introduced the Roadless Area Conservation Act to make the Roadless Rule a federal law. Nearly 50 House colleagues, including Reps. Maxine Dexter and Suzanne Bonamici, Oregon Democrats, have cosponsored the bill, and she said she is working to get more.

Oregon’s two other Democratic U.S. Reps. Janelle Bynum and Val Hoyle, and Oregon’s lone Republican Rep. Cliff Bentz, have not signed on as sponsors.

“These pristine, undeveloped forest lands represent some of our most important tools in the fight against climate change,” Salinas said in a webinar on Tuesday hosted by the Oregon Sierra Club.

Erik Fernandez, the wilderness program manager for Oregon Wild, said eliminating the Roadless Rule would be a disaster for Oregon’s forests and communities.

“Building new roads in these wild places opens the door to invasive species and habitat fragmentation,” he said. “Once these areas are cut apart, we lose the clean water, wildlife, and solitude they provide forever.”

2025 Coastal Cleanup Day is Just Three Weeks Away

Marine debris causes widespread pollution of our oceans and Waterways. Plastic bags, cigarette butter, food wrappers and other trash can directly harm wildlife, photo degrade and even enter the food chain. Coastal Cleanup Day (the largest volunteer event in California) is our chance to stop the pollution at its source. Smith River Alliance will be joining forces with non-profit and agency sponsors to clean up Elk Creek and surrounding beaches, Saturday September 20. We hope you plan to attend this empowering community event as we work together to leave our wild coast and salmon strongholds better than we found them. Please mark your calendar. Special thanks to the City. Redwood Parks Conservancy, Redwood National and State Parks, Del Norte Solid Waste Management and Smith River Alliance donors like you.
