Share in the special moments of three Tulsa couples during their recent wedding celebrations.

Jordan Edwards and Mason Minnix

MAY 14, 2022

The Tulsa natives met at Jenks High School where Mason played football and Jordan was a cheerleader. Mason, who is now a mechanical engineer, and Jordan, an IT recruiter, dated for eight years — with the majority of it long distance — before marriage. Mason proposed at Guthrie Green, followed by an engagement party with friends and family at Jordan's parents' house.

In front of 165 guests at Dream Point Ranch's Mountain Crest Venue, the couple tied the knot on a warm, sunny day. Jordan wore her grandmother's earrings, and the couple left that night in her great-grandfather's car. Soft Touch Draping installed disco balls throughout the venue with music flowing all night long. Late night mac and cheese from The Brook was a special treat.

Tatum Vann and Jake Biram

OCT. 15, 2022

Longtime friends Tatum and Jake began dating as juniors at Jenks High School. Attending different colleges, the couple spent five years traveling to see one another, saying if they can make long distance work, they could make it through anything.

Jake, owner of Tulsa Tackle and Outdoors, popped the question to Tatum, an accountant, in the backyard of their recently purchased home. They married at the Patriot Golf Club with special touches, such as the couple's dog, Luna, appearing on the signature cocktail sign and the groom's cake designed like his bass fishing boat. The couple characterizes their special day as timeless, romantic and fun.

Alex Mitchell and Alex Gardner

OCT. 15, 2022

Mutual friends connected the couple at the 2013 Center of the Universe music festival. After several years of dating, he proposed by asking her if he could be her dog's dad. The couple — she's an occupational therapy assistant becoming certified as a dog trainer and he's the lead brewer at Marshall Brewing Co. — make their home in Tulsa.

With a black and white motif, The Mayo Hotel was a stunning backdrop to vows and speeches expressing that this is how they should be married, on this exact day, in this place and with the people present.
