

Let trusted professionals refresh your home

Ted Puetz, owner of Professional Painters, Inc., has been painting homes in West St. Louis County for more than 40 years.

"Over that time, I've learned something simple: homeowners don't just want new color – they want confidence that their home will be respected, protected and finished the right way," Ted said. "My business was built on steady workmanship, clear communication and accountability. My son, Dominic, and I built Professional Painters, Inc. together, and I still run the company with the same standards our reputation was built on."

"We're known for the details that make a job look great and last: proper prep, careful masking, clean cut lines and a tidy jobsite each day. Before we start, we walk the project with you, confirm expectations, and provide a clear written bid so you know exactly what you're getting."

Winter is interior painting season. It's a great time to refresh bedrooms, kitchens, trim, doors, stairways and living spaces while you're already indoors – and because schedules often open up, it's easier to get on the calendar.

"One thing that sets us apart is straightforward: we do not use subcontractors. When you hire Professional Painters, Inc., you're hiring our trained team – people I've personally selected and trust in your home," Ted said. "For peace of mind, we're fully insured, carrying workers' compensation and general liability coverage."

"If you're considering an interior repaint this winter, give me a call and we'll talk through the best plan for your home."
