

Open when most doctors' offices are not

After-Hours Primary Care, the practice of Dr. Jeffrey McCollum, MD in Chesterfield features hours from 4:30-8:30 pm. Sunday-Thursday each week. The purpose is to provide access to medical care for patients in the evening, so they don't have to take off work or school to see a doctor.

Dr. McCollum's practice focuses on the needs of adolescents and adults and includes urgent care. Dr. McCollum has 35 years of experience. Patients that walk-in with their urgent care needs will know they will see him and not an unknown provider.

Dr. McCollum also provides non-urgent healthcare for both adolescents and adults. Sports physicals and the treatment of acne are just two examples of services available for adolescents. Comprehensive health care management for adults is Dr. McCollum's main focus, and he can help with weight management and non-narcotic pain management.

Dr. McCollum is a member of the Direct Primary Care Alliance, a national organization offering an affordable, less encumbered model of care that does not bill insurance.

"Health insurance exists to cover the high costs of hospitalization, surgery, expensive tests and medicines. Primary care is not expensive," Dr. McCollum said.

The practice offers a choice of fee for service billing or a monthly subscription service for about the cost of a fitness center membership. The subscription cost is offset by discounted lab services and medications and adjunctive telemedicine services that can save trips to the office.

Call for an appointment or just walk in. The hours are unique and convenient. The model of care is affordable and gives patients a higher quality of care, he said.
