

Buying jewelry, coins, collectibles, vintage and more

Manchester Road, just west of 141

Buying single items, collections or estates is Manchester Coin & Jewelry's specialty.

Owner Michael Wilke is passionate about buying and selling vintage wares of all kinds and making sure customers receive the highest prices possible.

"You can bring me a violin or a guitar, some gold, an old toy, some military memorabilia and a big diamond – and we'll buy it all," Michael said.

Unlike other buyers, Manchester Coin & Jewelry assesses fine jewelry and watches in terms of resale, not meltdown value. Of course, gold and silver in any form are always welcome, along with coins, gemstones, diamonds and old paper money. Manchester Coin & Jewelry also buys vintage stringed instruments, American Indian artifacts, military items, Lladro, Hummel and Lalique; or anything vintage and collectible.

"It's hard to determine sometimes what is worth money and what's not when you're looking at things in the basement," Michael said. "We try to tell people, 'Don't make the decision for us.'"

Younger generations are not necessarily interested in inheriting items, so don't let them continue to lose value over time. Let Manchester Coin & Jewelry help with your collectibles now. Stop by, call for an in-home appointment, or call ahead and learn where to text pictures of your items to begin an appraisal.

If it's time to get rid of some things, get started. You can start small, Michael said.

"Don't try to tackle it all at once; try one drawer or one room at a time," he said.

At Manchester Coin & Jewelry appraisals and evaluations are free. If you have jewelry, coins, memorabilia or vintage/antique pieces to sell or have evaluated, call or stop by today."
