

It's complicated. A Medicare advisor can help.

Mary Jane Harris

Medicare is complex, offering dozens of options to pick from, all with different benefits and costs. Independent Medicare Advisors can help sort through those options to find the supplement that works for you, said Mary Jane Harris, owner.

Many don't realize decisions made when you first enroll in Medicare can have costly health and financial implications for the rest of your life. It's also imperative to understand your initial enrollment period, special enrollment periods, the rules that apply to Health Savings Accounts, and if you will be subject to increased Part B premiums due to Income Related Monthly Adjustment Amounts. Medicare is complicated.

"Thirty-plus years of working with older adults have taught me how Medicare plans work in real life. The advertisements promise perks, bells and whistles which often means they will provide a ride to your doctor's appointment but won't approve a surgery or rehab stay following a broken hip," Harris said.

Independent Medicare Advisors provide you with unbiased Medicare guidance for your unique life situation, she said. "We do not sell insurance and are not affiliated with any insurance companies; we don't receive a commission for selling you a particular Medicare plan. We work for you, and our priority is to help choose the best plans for your healthcare and pocketbook, now and in the future. Maximizing your benefits is about making good decisions based on unbiased information and a complete review of all plans available."

Skip the sales pressure, learn about Medicare and receive transparent and unbiased step-by-step advice, she said. Call Mary Jane now to receive expert and unbiased Medicare information and know with certainty you have made the right decision.
