

Private duty health care, rooted in faith and family

Deanna Altenbernd says three things define Caring Christians Private Duty – her faith, her family and her experience in ICU and hospice nursing and as a skilled home care administrator.

"It is our ministry to provide families with exceptional and exceptionally compassionate care. We live out our faith by serving others and it's a real honor. When I opened the company seven years ago, I had no idea that my husband would be joining me as my business manager or that my brother and sister-in-law would become part of our family team," Deanna said. "But it's so special to be working alongside Chris, Nick and Taylor."

Deanna also has 190 personally vetted caregivers, who she thinks of as extended family.

"I have the pleasure of matching each client with the caregiver who can best meet their emotional, spiritual, social and medical needs," Deanna said.

"We care for people of all faiths or no faith," Deanna said. "Everyone receives the same professional and loving care."

That care can range from companionship to complex nursing assistance.

"I have trained my team to care for patients who have ventilators or traches, G-tubes or Foley catheters, or who require IV therapy," Deanna said.

The company can also provide experienced care for clients with Alzheimer's and dementia.

Deanna invites families who need in-home assistance to contact her today.

"I personally answer every call that comes in, 24 hours a day, seven days a week and provide complimentary case management services for every one of my clients," she said.
