

Bringing the showroom to your living room

Whether your goal is keeping the chill of winter at bay or protecting a home's interior from damaging sun rays, having the right window treatments can keep a home energy efficient and aesthetically pleasing year-round. When it comes to choosing what will work best, Made In The Shade St. Louis brings the showroom to your living room.

Individuals with no time to shop around for treatments or window coverings can browse entire catalogues of options in their living room, with the added guidance of Made In The Shade's professional staff. They have a collection of curtains, drapes, blinds, and even exterior shades that not only come in an array of colors, but that can also be motorized and sync with smart devices or personal assistants.

After a customer chooses their preferred design, Made In The Shade's in-house installers will finish the job, meaning customers don't have to juggle multiple teams coming in and out of their home.

"We're there with them, from selection all the way through installation," Adam Culbreath, franchise owner, said.

Their selection of motorized exterior shades means that families don't have to wait until summer to enjoy sunrooms, conservatories or other similar spaces.

One of their unique offerings is their Faux Iron Grilles, which provide the look of wrought iron without the weight or cost, instead being made of 100% post-industrial recycled wood fiber and formaldehyde-free resin. These pieces come in a myriad of designs, from rustic to modern, and finishes to match any décor.
