With 25 years of experience, Sue Kelly, a full-time real estate professional, knows the ins and outs of the real estate market. She understands value, pricing and negotiations, and as a St. Louis native, she knows the neighborhoods, especially West St. Louis County and the central corridor.

More importantly, she cares about her clients. It's just one more reason Sue has earned the distinction of being a top producer.

"It was our first time buying a home, and we were so lucky to work with her," said Erika. "It was such a great experience ... Sue responded and answered all our questions giving us certain confidence in our decision."

Sue can help clients sell their present home and/or find and purchase their new one. She loves working with first-time home buyers and teaching them the ropes.

"I really like teaching people to decide what is important to them, helping them to figure out their priorities so that they make the right decision because it is an important one," she said.

Sue also has a network built over more than two decades to smooth the process. "I've done a whole lot of networking, and I have a lot of people in hand — stagers, lenders, inspectors and designers — resources that will keep things easy for both sellers and buyers," she said.
