Deer deaths in Houston, Winona counties caused by virus

The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has confirmed two cases of epizootic hemorrhagic disease (EHD) in wild white-tailed deer in Minnesota. EHD is a viral disease of deer and some livestock that is spread by a biting insect called a midge.

"All of our neighboring states have been dealing with EHD for years," said Michelle Carstensen, DNR wildlife health program supervisor. "Fall 2019 was the first time we had detected this virus in wild deer in our state, with deaths reported in Stearns and Houston counties. So it was not surprising that it showed up again, particularly with low water conditions.'

The DNR received reports of deer deaths throughout September in both Houston and Winona counties, amounting to over 20 animals. Tests from two of the deer in Houston County were positive for EHD; other deer were too decomposed to test. DNR has notified the Board of Animal Health (BAH), and BAH has also received all testing results. Reported cases in Minnesota are limited two counties thus far; however, Wisconsin has recently confirmed several EHD cases in nearby La Crosse County.

The disease incubates for five to 10 days, and most infected deer die within 36 hours of exhibiting symptoms.

"EHD is both naturally occurring and seasonal," Carstensen said. "We expect the potential for infection to end soon because freezing temperatures kill both the virus and midge that carries it."

Drought conditions have likely increased risk for this virus, as midges are limited to fewer water sources to breed and this can promote virus propagation. Wisconsin, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio report EHD mortalities in wild deer almost every year. In some cases, the disease can dramatically reduce a local deer population in the short-term but has a relatively small impact on the overall deer population. There are no management interventions available to combat the disease.

Finding multiple dead deer near a water source is typical of an EHD die-off. Fever drives the animals to seek water, but they die from internal lesions and hemorrhages.

People who find a dead deer should report it to the nearest DNR area wildlife office. Contact information for each office is listed on the DNR website.

EHD is not a threat to humans or animals outside the deer family. Even so, people should not consume deer that appear to be sick or deer that appear to be in poor health. Additional information about EHD is available on the DNR website.

LEE-ANN ESTATE SALE

Location: 1064 W. Mark Street, Winona, MN Saturday, October 16. 9:00 am – 1:00 pm.

This is a ONE DAY ONLY SALE. IT WILL BE $ 5.00 per Box and we have 100's of boxes. The reality is that you can come and shop and find some treasures and great deals in each and every box. We are sorting in the basement and finding that the boxes haven't been seen since the 1980s- based on all the wrapping newspapers. So we have basement rooms filled floor to ceiling with boxes that haven't been seen in decades to sort, clean and sell. We know that the final presentation for this house and estate sale will be spectacular. But frankly there is just so much stuff that in a normal setting, these items in each $ 5 box would stand on its own but because of the volume of items we are just going to box up an assortment of treasures and sell it by the box. No chips and any cracks or damaged items have been thrown out and only first quality items are part of this sale. That will then make enough room for the final sale presentation in November. So come and shop, come and be overwhelmed, come and take home at least one box and maybe a whole car full. Boxed items will include: DISHES, knick-knacks and figurines, Depression glass, painted plates, cups and mugs, silverware and flatware, stuff, more stuff and MORE STUFF.

We will use a number system for the sale, but everything will be outside and under the tents and on tables for your shopping ease. So this should be a quick and easy way to shop and discover something fun and funky. Looking forward to seeing everyone at this fun sale. If you have need for an estate sale, please contact us at 507-452-8782 or visit the web site at: www.Leeannestatesales.com. We will also have pictures of the upcoming fantastic sale presentation for the entire household in November.
